On November 21, 1968, Trial Examiner James R. McCormick issued his Decision and Recommended Order in the above-entitled matter, finding that the Respondent, Ewardsburg Public Schools, had engaged in, and was engaging in, certain unfair labor practices and recommended that it cease and desist therefrom and take certain affirmative action as set forth in the Trial Examiner's Decision and Recommended Order attached hereto.

The Trial Examiner's Decision and Recommended Order was issued and served upon the interested parties in accordance with Section 16 (b) of Act 336 of the Public Acts of 1947, as amended. The parties have had an opportunity to review said Decision and Recommended Order for a period of at least twenty days from date of service thereof on the parties, and no exceptions have been filed by any of the parties to the proceedings.

ORDER

Pursuant to Section 16 of the Act, the Board hereby adopts as its Order, the Order recommended by the Trial Examiner.

TRIAL EXAMINER'S DECISION AND RECOMMENDED ORDER

APPEARANCES:

For the Respondent: Thomas L. Combs, Attorney

For the Charging Party: Webb A. Smith, Attorney

The above-entitled matter came on for hearing, pursuant to Section 16 of Act 336, Public Acts of 1947, as amended (Public Employment Relations Act, hereinafter referred to as PERA), before the undersigned Trial Examiner of the Labor Mediation Board, on July 16, 1968 at Niles, Michigan, as a result of charges filed on May 31, 1968 by the Edwardsburg Education Association (hereinafter referred to as the Association), against the Edwardsburg Public Schools (hereinafter referred to as Respondent) alleging unlawful practices prohibited by PERA Section 10. On the record as a whole, including testimony of witnesses, exhibits, stipulations, argument of counsel and post-hearing briefs filed by both parties on September 30, 1968, the undersigned makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law, and recommends that the Board enter the following proposed order:

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Respondent is a public employer within the meaning of PERA and the Association is a labor organization within the meaning of PERA. The Association is the certified exclusive bargaining agent for the certificated teaching personnel of Respondent. The charges, as amended, allege certain violations of the Respondent's duty to bargain with the Association. The charges also alleged that certain conduct of the Respondent interfered with, restrained and coerced teaching employees of the Respondent.

The Specific Charges:

In addition to alleging that the Respondent's entire course of bargaining in the Spring of 1968 was undertaken in bad faith and constituted "surface bargaining", the Association also alleges specific acts as being violative of the bargaining duty. The Association alleges that the Respondent refused to provide relevant data needed by the Association for use in bargaining. The Association alleges that this violation is further compounded by the fact that the Respondent informed the Association in writing that the data would not be provided as long as charges of unfair labor practices were on file or until the Association withdrew its expressed intent to file such charges. The Association also alleges that the Respondent's attorney coerced employees, at the bargaining table, into turning over to him copies of the Association's minutes of earlier bargaining sessions by asserting to them that the laws of the State of Michigan obligated the Association to turn over such minutes to the Respondent's bargaining team.

The Association alleges that after four collective bargaining sessions in the Spring of 1968 the Respondent's negotiators announced that all proposals had been discussed and answered and that Respondent felt no further need to bargain and in fact would not meet any further. The Association alleges that the parties had not reached an impasse and that there were further matters for discussion.

Finally, the Association alleges that the Respondent violated its bargaining duty and also engaged in coercion of teachers by issuing individual teacher contracts to the teachers in June, with instructions to the teachers to return the contracts by a certain date, with the express understanding that failure to return the contract signed by the specified date would cause the Respondent to conclude that the individual teacher intended to resign, thus causing that teacher's job to be declared open for replacement by a new teacher.

(a) The May 8 Breakdown of Negotiations:

The Association and the Respondent entered into negotiations for a 1968-1969 contract in the Spring of 1968. Four meetings were held: April 3, April 17, May 1 and May 8, 1968. As of the time that these charges were heard (July 16) no further sessions had been scheduled.

The Association submitted numerous proposals to the Respondent during the four bargaining sessions, and Respondent discussed all of these proposals and gave an answer to each of the proposals at one time or another. In a number of cases, the answer was a simple denial. At the conclusion of the fourth meeting, on May 8, 1968, the Respondent's chief negotiator informed the Association bargainers that there was no necessity for a further meeting since everything had been discussed and answered. When told by the Association that there were still some unfinished matters, the Respondent's chief negotiator replied that the Respondent did not see fit to meet further, and that the Respondent would not negotiate further. The following statement was made: "We have covered all of your items. The Board's position has been stated. There is no need to meet further." When asked if this meant that the Respondent refused to bargain, the reply was "Yes". It is clear from the record that the Respondent felt no necessity for a further meeting and was not agreeable to meet further at that time.

The undersigned Trial Examiner concludes from the record as a whole that an impasse had not been reached as of May 8, 1968 and that the Respondent was not justified in terminating negotiations at that point. Detroit Board of Fire Commissioners, 1968 Labor Opinions 492. I specifically reject Respondent's argument that the Association did not direct written requests for further bargaining meetings to the Respondent following May 8, 1968. The Respondent's orally stated position at that meeting rendered further requests futile. Accordingly, I conclude that Respondent violated its bargaining duty by refusing to continue negotiations beyond May 8, 1968.

(b) The May 13 Refusal to Submit Information:

Following the breakdown in negotiations the Association, on May 10, 1968, requested certain information from the Respondent. The request was put in writing in the following form:

> "Please furnish us the following items within four days: 1) annual statistical reports (Form A) for school years beginning Fall 1964 to present. 2) monthly budget reports – July 1967 through present. We also request permission to examine all current individual contracts and/or all those on file for next year."

By letter dated May 13, 1968 the Superintendent replied to the Association as follows:

> "I have been advised not to submit the information you requested on May 10 until your stated intention to file an unfair labor practice has been retracted or if you in fact have filed an unfair labor practice, that such charge be withdrawn.
> Please be advised that any future requests for information or arrangements for any other details regarding negotiations must be made directly to Mr. Combs."

The undersigned concludes that the information requested by the Association on May 10 was relevant to the collective bargaining process and to the matters under discussion and that it was not confidential information or privileged in any respect. The undersigned further concludes that the request was not an unreasonable imposition upon the Respondent and was not a matter that was readily available to the Association from other sources. Accordingly, I reject the arguments advanced by Respondent in defense of its refusal to provide this information to the Association. Additionally, I find that the Respondent's reliance upon the filing or potential filing of unfair labor practice charges as a reason for refusal to tender the information to the Association constitutes a separate unfair practice. East Lansing Board of Education, 1968 Labor Opinions 209.

The general proposition that an employer is required by the bargaining duty to provide information that is needed by the bargaining representative for the proper performance of its duties is well settled in the federal arena. N.L.R.B. v. Acme Industrial Company, 355 U.S. 430, 87 S. Ct. 565 (1967); Curtiss-Wright Corporation v. N.L.R.B., 347 F2d 61 (C.A. 3, 1965); Taylor Forge and Pipe Works, v. N.L.R.B., 234 F2d 227 (C.A. 7, 1956); N.L.R.B. v. Goodyear Aero Space Corporation, 388 F2d 673 (C.A. 6, 1968); J.I. Case Company v. N.L.R.B., 253 F2d 149 (C.A. 7, 1958); Timken Roller Bearing Company v. N.L.R.B. 325 F2d 746 (C.A. 6, 1963). The National Labor Relations Board has also held that insistence upon withdrawing charges or retracting statements of intention to file charges constitutes a separate refusal to bargain violation under the National Labor Relations Act, Section 8 (a) (5) Kit Manufacturing Company, Inc., 142 NLRB 957; American Stores Packing Company, 142 NLRB 711; Southland Cork Company, 146 NLRB 906.

(c) The Legal Opinion Concerning a Duty to Furnish Minutes to the Board of Education:

It is uncontroverted on the record that the Respondent's attorney informed the Association bargainers at the third bargaining meeting that the Association was legally bound by the laws of the State of Michigan to turn over to Respondent the minutes which it had taken at various bargaining sessions. On the basis of this erroneous expression of legal opinion, the Association turned over minutes of its first three meetings to the Respondent at the fourth meeting which was held on May 8, 1968. The Association argues that this constitutes a violation. The Association argues as follows:

> "It is submitted that the statement under the guise of a 'legal opinion' of an attorney, when an attorney for the Association was not present, amounts to coercion, and a violation of the rights of the Association."

The undersigned specifically rejects the argument of the Association. It is obvious that the Association was not bound and should not reasonably have felt bound to abide by a legal opinion stated at the bargaining table by counsel for the Respondent. I see no reason why such a statement should be considered as coercive. It must be assumed that the representatives present for the Association, although not professional bargainers or attorneys at law, had sufficient independence to reject legal opinions from the opposite side of the table if they did not particularly subscribe to such opinions.

(d) The Issuance of Teacher Contracts During Bargaining:

The final charge involved in this case concerns a letter sent to the approximately twenty non-tenure teachers, on or about June 10, 1968,[1] and an accompanying document entitled "Probationary Teacher Contract of Employment." The text of the controversial letter is as follows:

> "We are pleased to offer you this teaching contract for the 1968-69 school year. We would ask that it be returned to my office by June 21, 1968.
> Contracts are being offered to all non-tenure teachers who are eligible for full year certification. We will assume that those who do not return contracts by June 21, 1968 are resigning and their job will be declared open.
>
> Because the total salary package has not yet been determined, we can offer only the base salary at this time. Extra curricular assignments will be offered as soon as the master contract is agreed upon.
> If you have any questions regarding this contract, please contact me as soon as possible."

The teacher contracts involved were on a printed probationary teacher contract form. The contracts provided the base annual salary for the teacher and included the following additional language, not contained on the form: "This contract is subject to the terms of the master contract." On June 13, 1968 the Superintendent agreed to extend the June 21, 1968 deadline for return of the contract to July 1, 1968.

The thrust of the charge is that the offer of teacher contracts in June, while the negotiations were in progress, undermined and ignored the bargaining process and tended to force the teachers to commit themselves in advance to work for a unilaterally-determined salary in the event that no collective agreement should ultimately be executed. The reference to jobs being declared "open" if contracts were not returned by June 21 injects the element of coercion, in the view of the Association.

There can be little doubt that in private industry or in other types of public employment a management attempt to get the individual employees to agree individually to salaries in advance of the employment period and at a time when negotiations for a collective bargaining contract were underway would be found to violate the duty to bargain. This conclusion would be even stronger were the employer to state a deadline after which it would begin looking for replacements. Such a procedure clearly undermines bargaining, despite the proviso making the contracts subject to any collective agreement that might later be reached, since there is no guarantee that any collective agreement will be reached. Here, however, the matter is further compounded by the fact that under section 861 of the School Code of 1955, CL '48, sec. 340.861, M.S.A. sec. 15.3861, a teacher who refuses to perform a teaching contract may be suspended, by action of the state board of education, from teaching anywhere in the State for the balance of the school year.

The issue, then, is whether there is any statutory or public policy basis for upholding the common school board practice of issuing teacher contracts and requiring that they be returned by a certain date at a time when the teachers' bargaining agent has not reached a collective agreement encompassing salaries and other conditions of employment. The statutory provisions which come into play here form a conundrum which all but defies solution. They include the following:

Mich. CL '48, sec. 423.215; M.S.A. sec. 17.455 (15); PERA sec. 15, added by Act 379 of 1965:

> A public employer shall bargain collectively with the representatives of its employees as defined in Section 11 and is authorized to make and enter into collective bargaining agreements with such representatives. For the purposes of this section, to bargain collectively is the performance of the mutual obligation of the employer and the representative of the employees to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder, and the execution of a written contract, ordinance or resolution incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party, but such obligation does not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession.

> The Board of every district shall hire and contract with such duly qualified teachers as may be required. All contracts with teachers shall be in writing and signed by a majority of the board in behalf of the district * The contracts shall specify the wages agreed upon * (emphasis added)

Mich. CL '48 sec. 340.569 (b); M.S.A. sec. 15.3569 (2); School Code of 1955, sec. 569 (b), added by Act 82 of 1966, effective March 10, 1967:

> At any time, the board of any district, by agreement between the board and a teacher or by agreement between the board and any organization representing the teacher in accordance with Act No. 176 of the Public Acts of 1939, as amended, being sections 423.1 to 423.30 of the Compiled Laws of 1948, may terminate an existing contract for the services of the teacher and substitute a new contract which provides an increased benefit to the teacher. The new contract shall be binding without regard to any preexisting duties or obligations of either the school board or the teacher under the first contract. (emphasis added)

> The state board of education shall have authority to suspend  any certificate issued to any teacher who refuses without sufficient cause, in the opinion of said board to perform a lawful contract to teach  Such suspension shall not be for a longer period of time than the end of the school year in the district in which such contract was violated. During the time such certificate is suspended, such teacher shall not be qualified to teach in any school in this state in which teachers are required to hold a certificate to teach. (emphasis added)

Mich. CL '48, sec. 38.111; M.S.A. sec. 15.2011; Tenure of Teachers Act (Act 4 of 1937, ex. sess.), Article V, sec. 1:

> No teacher on continuing tenure shall discontinue his services with any controlling board except by mutual consent, without giving a written notice to said controlling board at least sixty (60) days before September first of the ensuing school year. Any teacher discontinuing his services in any other manner than as provided in this section shall forfeit his rights to continuing tenure previously acquired under this Act (emphasis added)

Mich. CL '48, sec. 38.83; M.S.A. sec. 15.1983; Tenure of Teachers Act (Act 4 of 1937, ex. sess.); Article II, sec. 3:

> * Provided further, that any probationary teacher or teacher not on continuing contract shall be employed for the ensuing year unless notified at least sixty (60) days before the close of the school year that his services will be discontinued. (emphasis added)

Mich. CL '48, sec. 38.101, M.S.A. sec. 15.2001; Tenure of Teachers Act (Act 4 of 1937, ex. sess.), Article IV, sec. 1:

> Discharge or demotion of a teacher on continuing tenure may be made only for reasonable and just cause, and only after such charges, notice, hearing and determination thereof, as are hereinafter provided ****

Mich. CL '48, sec. 38.102; M.S.A. sec. 15.2002, Tenure of Teachers Act (Act 4 of 1937, ex. sess.), Article IV, sec. 2:

> * Provided, that charges concerning the character of professional services shall be filed at least sixty (60) days before the close of the school year * (emphasis added)

PERA obligates the board of education to negotiate wages and working conditions with the bargaining agent and to seek to reach a collective agreement (contract) covering wages and working conditions. This obligation rules out either unilateral imposition of a salary schedule or an attempt to reach salary agreements with the individual teachers. On the other hand, school boards have a duty to enter into a written contract with their teachers, specifying therein the "wages agreed upon."

I conclude that by selecting a bargaining agent pursuant to PERA section 12, the teachers delegate to that agent their power to negotiate an agreement as to wages and their concomitant power to enter into a written contract with the board of education specifying the wages agreed upon. In other words, I conclude that the traditional teacher contract contemplated by section 569 of the School Code is merged into the collective bargaining process wherever teachers exercise their PERA right to designate a bargaining agent.[2] On this basis alone I conclude that a board of education technically violates its PERA section 15 bargaining duty and commits a PERA section 10 (e) unfair labor practice by the very act of offering salary contracts to individual teachers while negotiations are pending with the bargaining agent.

What, then, is the effect of section 569 (b) of the School Code which permits a board of education, by collective bargaining, to substitute a new contract in place of an existing contract for the services of the teacher? This amendment, added in 1966 after the 1965 passage of PERA, appears to have been intended merely to remove any doubt concerning the supremacy of a collective bargaining agreement over individual teacher contracts containing lower wages. I do not read the 1966 amendment as an expression of legislative approval of the issuance of individual contracts setting forth wage figures which are expressly made subject to any later-negotiated collective bargaining agreement (contract).

Issuance of contracts, even when made subject to the results of later collective bargaining, materially interferes with the bargaining process because it requires teachers to make a decision as to whether they will return to the district at a time when they do not know what the wages and working conditions will be, and if no master contract should be successfully negotiated it binds them to the salary unilaterally set forth on their individual contracts. I conclude that the Respondent's legitimate interest in determining as early in the year as possible how many new teachers will have to be employed is no legal excuse for circumventing the determination of wages by collective bargaining. Of course, the Association could have waived its rights in this regard by agreeing in advance to the issuance of individual contracts, subject to the later master contract, but it did not waive any rights in this case.

If no master agreement has been reached by the start of the school year, the teachers are still obligated to report for work in the absence of individual teacher contracts, since, according to an operative majority of the Michigan Supreme Court in School District for the City of Holland v. Holland Education Association, 67 LRRM 2916, decided April 1, 1968, teachers continue to be employees of a school district in the absence of teacher contracts. Indeed, the prevailing opinion in the Holland case assumes that jurisdiction to mediate a master contract would attach in advance of the executing of any written contracts. If the wages have not been determined by collective agreement by the start of the school year, it would appear that the board of education would be justified in paying teachers according to the board's last offer (if an impasse exists), or according to the wages previously in effect (in absence of an impasse).

It is a well-recognized principle of statutory construction that statutes will not be regarded as conflicting where by any reasonable construction they can be reconciled. People v. Buckley, 302 Mich. 12. The undersigned concludes that the above represents the only reasonable construction which reconciles the School Code and Tenure of Teachers Act with the collective bargaining principle of PERA. As indicated above, this case presents a difficult question of application of statutory law. Since it is a case of first impression and involves a rather technical point, the Respondent can not be viewed too harshly for its actions. On the other hand, the breaking off of negotiations in May and the refusal to provide information constitute substantial noncompliance with the bargaining duty.

Accordingly, it is recommended that the Board enter the following order which will effectuate the policies of PERA:[3]

[2]The following language from Garden City School District v. Labor Mediation Board, 358 Mich. 258, strongly supports this conclusion: "The written contract provision was first adopted in 1927, and the legislature was certainly familiar with its requirements when it adopted P.A. 1947, No. 336, which we have quoted. We read these two acts together as allowing mediation of salary disputes in advance of the determination of the salary provisions of individual teacher contracts." (Emphasis supplied.)

[3]The undersigned rejects the Association's prayer for an order requiring the Superintendent to "publicly apologize" for his May 13, 1968 letter. Under our system of law even convicted murderers can not be forced to apologize, since coerced confessions are repugnant to the Constitution.

RECOMMENDED ORDER

The Respondent, Edwardsburg Public Schools, its officers and agents shall:

A. Cease and desist from refusing to bargain in good faith with the Association as the representatives of its teaching employees by:

(1) Issuing individual teacher contracts and by requiring them to be returned at a time when no collective bargaining agreement on wages and working conditions has been reached between the Respondent and the Association.

(2) Breaking off negotiations before reaching a genuine impasse.

(3) Refusing to provide the association with relevant personnel and economic data for use in the bargaining process.

B. Take the following affirmative action which, it is found, will effectuate the policies of PERA:

(1) Require its officers and agents to confer in good faith with the Association concerning wages and working conditions.

(2) Post, wherever notices to teaching employees of the Respondent are customarily posted, copies of the attached Notice, affixed on top of copies of the Board's Decision and Order, for a period of thirty (30) consecutive days. The Notices shall be signed by the Superintendent.

(3) Take reasonable steps to prevent the removal or defacement of said Notices.

(4) Notify the Board within twenty days of receipt of this Order what steps the Respondent has taken to comply therewith.

Fact-Finding Report

In the Matter of

ISLAND TREES SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 26, LEVITTOWN

and

ISLAND TREES TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The totality of working conditions should be considered when determining whether an employee organization's requests are justifiable.

The fact that other school districts have a more liberal sabbatical leave policy is not justification by itself for changing a particular district's sabbatical leave policy.

Teachers should not have to specify a reason for taking personal leave days.

Sabbatical Schedule. – The current sabbatical program provides half pay for a full year or half pay for a half year after seven years in the district. The Island Trees Teachers Association is seeking the continuation of half pay for a full year, but seeks to improve the plan, however, by having full pay for a half year.

The district takes a "no comment" position.[1]

While sabbatical plans vary from district to district and while there are districts on Long Island where the practice sought by the Association is in fact in existence, it must be noted, however, that the working condition in a district cannot be compared with the working condition in another district on one issue alone. The total picture must be measured and compared. The sabbatical leave policy may very well be better in another district, but this may also be a district which does not have a ratio index. There was insufficient justification submitted to warrant granting of this demand and it is, accordingly, denied.

Personal Leave Days.–The district now provides three personal leave days for teachers which may be had on proper notice and with reason given as to why the time is needed. The Association requests that the need to offer reason for use of personal leave days be deleted and that the unused leave days be converted to sick days which teachers may accumulate.

The district takes a "no comment" position.

It is the view of the fact-finding board that teachers who are entrusted with America's greatest asset, its children, and the molding of the minds of these future citizens, can be relied upon not to abuse the leave days provided for them. There is a nonprofessional element in a requirement that teachers specify a reason for personal leave absence. Accordingly, we recommend that the requirement for specifying reasons for personal absences be eliminated.

Further, where such days are not used, we consider it equitable that the unused days be added to the ten sick leave days presently allowed, and we so recommend.

[1]The "no comment" position, in this and many other instances, taken by the district is obviously not intended to mean acquiescence or literally "no comment." It is a form of saying "no," although the rationale for the use of the phrase was not made explicit to the board. In any event, we take judicial notice that in this proceeding "no comment" is also not to be equated with nolo contendere.

In The Matter of

The Advisory Arbitration

Between

The Board of Education of Anne Arundel County, Maryland,

and

The Teachers Association of Anne Arundel County, Maryland

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE ARBITRATION PANEL

This proceeding was conducted pursuant to the provisions of The Professional Negotiations Act of 1968 of the State of Maryland.

The parties, in the fall of 1968, began professional negotiations the aim of which was to establish for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1969 an agreement covering salaries, fringe benefits and other working conditions.

After a number of negotiating sessions, agreement was reached between the two negotiating teams on 144 items; this was a complete agreement. When the agreement was referred to the appropriate bodies for ratification, the Board of Education ratified the document in full. The Representative Council of the Association ratified 136 items but refused to ratify the other eight items.

Under the terms of the Procedure for the Implementation of Negotiations, which had previously been established and agreed to by both parties, negotiations were then resumed on the eight rejected items. Agreement was reached on six of these items but the parties became deadlocked on the remaining two.

The Association then on December 10, 1968 asked the State Superintendent of Schools to declare than an impasse existed in negotiations between the parties. This he did in a letter dated December 19, 1968.

The Board of Education named Mr. Richard G. Neal as its representative on the panel to aid in resolution of differences. The Association named Mr. Morris C. Jones. From a list of possible neutral third members for the panel, supplied to Mr. Neal and Mr. Jones, by the American Arbitration Association, they selected Mr. Morrison Handsaker as the neutral third member and chairman of the panel.

The panel met in preliminary session in Annapolis, Maryland on Thursday, January 2, 1969, and, on Friday, January 3, 1969 met with the parties in a mediation session, which began at 9:00 a.m. and concluded at 1:30 a.m. on January 4.

In the course of this mediation session, one issue was resolved by mutual agreement of the parties. This was the question of "extra pay for extra work" and involved compensation for teachers responsible for various extracurricular activities. Mediation efforts of the panel did not resolve the remaining issue, the matter of the salary scale.

On January 9, 10 and 11 the parties met with the panel in an advisory arbitration proceeding.

This document contains the recommendations of the panel on the matters presented to it in this latter proceeding.

Two aspects of the sala[illegible] were presented to the panel, on which it here ma[illegible] recommendations to the parties.

One relates to the "salary index". This is the percentage which is applied to the salary base to determine the annual amount of salary increase which added years of service bring to the teachers.

It was the position of the Association that this matter was, for reasons discussed below, not properly before the panel, and that the index had already been agreed upon.

It was the position of the Board, also for reasons discussed below, that the issue was properly before the panel.

After hearing the evidence and the arguments on this point, the panel, with Mr. Neal dissenting, makes the following recommendation: In our view the matter of the index was settled by the parties in their negotiations before impasse was declared and is therefore not properly before this panel for recommendation.

On the question of the base salary, (the starting salary for teachers with the bachelor's degree and no previous teaching experience) the position of the parties at the start of the mediation session on January 3, was as follows:

The Association urged a base salary of $6940 per year with a 6% index. (The base during the current academic year is $6300, with a 6% index.)

The Board urged the following three alternative proposals and indicated a strong preference for the third:

1. A $6,725 base with a 6% index
2. A $6,625 base with a 6% index plus a flat $175 for each teacher
3. A $7,000 base with a 5% index

During the mediation session the Association reduced the base it was seeking from $6940 with a 6% index to $6850 with a 6% index. The Board did not modify its position during the mediation session.

After considering all the evidence and arguments advanced by both parties, it is, for reasons discussed below, the majority recommendations of the panel with Mr. Neal abstaining, that the base salary be established at $6800 per year.

OPINIONS OF THE MEMBERS OF THE PANEL

MAJORITY OPINION ON THE ISSUE OF THE INDEX

The undersigned recommend that it be accepted by the parties that the index has already been determined and is therefore not properly before the panel.

The position of the parties on this issue is as follows:

The Association stresses that the Representative council approved 136 of the 144 items referred to them for ratification and that one of the items which they approved was XIII A, which established a 6% index. In the Association's view, since the Board ratified the entire agreement, only those eight items rejected by the Council were subject to the new negotiation. The Association stresses that the mutually agreed-upon negotiation procedure provides as follows:

"7. Within ten days of the conclusion of negotiations the Association and the Board shall ratify or reject each of the items which were agreed upon by the negotiating teams. If either group fails to ratify any of the items negotiated, it shall state its objections in writing to the negotiating teams."

"8. New negotiations on rejected items shall commence immediately and continue for fifteen days unless agreement is reached before the end of that time . . . "

In the Association's view, the foregoing sections of the agreed-upon procedure clearly spell out that only rejected items are up for further negotiation. Since neither party rejected item XIII A, dealing with the index, it is not open for any changes or discussion.

The Board's position was two-fold.

1. One cannot discuss the issue of base salary without considering the index which will be applied to that base. Since the base is up for negotiation the index also must be open for negotiation.

2. The Board also stresses the last sentences of Section 8 of the negotiating procedure. This sentence, which follows the part of Section 8 quoted above, reads as follows:

> "Within ten days of the conclusion of new negotiations, the Association and the Board shall ratify or reject the entire agreement, including those portions previously agreed to under Section 7 as well as those newly agreed to under Section 8."

In the view of the Board, negotiations were concluded when the Association asked the State Superintendent of Schools to declare an impasse. Since the parties did not accept or reject en toto the agreement, within ten days, there is no agreement and the issue of the index, along with anything else which either party wants to put in issue, is properly before the panel.

The majority of the panel finds the Association argument persuasive on the issue of the index. It appears to the majority of the panel that the language of Sections 7 and 8 of the agreed-upon procedure is clear and unambiguous and therefore speaks for itself. It states that the parties shall "ratify or reject each of the items which were agreed upon by the negotiating teams" and then goes on to state that "new negotiations on rejected items shall commence immediately . . . " (Underlining supplied.)

It seems clear to the majority of the panel that when the procedure states that "new negotiations on rejected items shall commence immediately", it must follow that items accepted by both sides are considered finally agreed upon and are not to be re-opened. No other construction of language appears possible to the majority.

With respect to the two arguments advanced by the Board, the majority of the panel make the following comments:

While base salary and index are, of course, related, the fact that both parties accepted the index and the fact that one party rejected the base when sent to them for ratification, means, for the reasons cited immediately above, that the base is up for negotiation but the index is not.

With respect to the argument that negotiations have been concluded for more than 10 days without either ratification or rejection by the parties, and that therefore anything a party wants to bring up, may be brought up, the majority of the panel finds that this puts an unwarranted construction on Section 8 of the procedure.

The phrase "within 10 days of the conclusion of negotiations" appears in both Section 7 and Section 8. The parties agree (by their actions at least) that in Section 7 it means "within ten days after the two negotiating teams agree on a document to be submitted to their parent bodies". It seems most logical therefore to assume that the same language mean the same thing in the very next paragraph. If this is so, the negotiations were not concluded when impasse was reached since there was no complete agreement on the once rejected items.

If further proof on this matter is needed, the majority of the panel would point out that certainly negotiations were not concluded when impasse was reached because the State law requires the impasse panel to "meet with the parties to aid in the resolution of differences." Such mediation activity, carried on by the panel over a sixteen hour period on January 3 (and into the early morning of January 4) clearly involves further negotiations between the parties in an effort to resolve differences.

DISSENTING RECOMMENDATION OF THE ADVISORY ARBITRATION PANEL FOR THE IMPASSE BETWEEN THE ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY TEACHERS ASSOCIATION AND THE ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY SCHOOL BOARD

The first issue to be decided by the panel was whether or not the index of the teachers' salary schedule was a matter upon which the panel was to render a recommendation. The majority of the panel voted negatively for the reasons stated elsewhere in this report.

I dissent from the majority recommendation for the following reasons:

1. Despite arguments to the contrary it was quite obvious that the parties agreed to all issues in the proposed collective agreement except for two remaining items, the beginning salary and the index. The teachers rejected the beginning salary, and the school board rejected the index. Despite the confused "Procedures for Implementation of Professional Negotiations" agreed to by the parties, and the lack of understanding regarding basic terms used therein ("negotiations" and "impasse") this one point should have been clear to the other two panel members—the parties still disagreed on two items, the beginning salary and the index.

2. Paragraph number 8 of the "Procedures" states:

> "New negotiations on rejected items shall commence immediately and continue for fifteen days unless agreement is reached before the end of that time. Within ten days of the conclusion of new negotiations the Association and the Board shall ratify or reject the entire agreement, including those portions previously agreed to under section 7 as well as those newly agreed to under section 8."

"New negotiations on rejected items" ceased at the time impasse was declared and neither party ratified or rejected the "entire agreement" within ten days. Consequently, there was no agreement. Consequently, all items were in a state of rejection. Consequently, the panel should have set about to find out what items were still tentatively agreed to and which were rejected. Had the panel done so it would have found that the index was one of the rejected items. Consequently, the panel would have been able to help "aid in the resolution of differences" as required by the state law.

According to the Association's interpretation of the "procedures" and the Association's definition of "negotiations," there might well be no end to negotiations.

3. In light of the great confusion of the parties and the panel concerning the "Procedures", and the school board's responsibility to the total public (not just the teachers) I am unable to concur in a recommendation which would remove the index from final recommendations of this panel.

MAJORITY OPINION ON THE ISSUE OF THE BASE SALARY

The undersigned majority of the panel, with Mr. Neal abstaining, recommends to the parties that they establish $6800 per year as a base salary.

The majority makes this recommendation for the following reasons:

1. The evidence submitted at the hearing indicates that settlements in adjoining counties are being made at $6800 and $6900 per year. These counties are close competitors of Anne Arundel County for the services of teachers. Any figure less than the one which we have recommended would, in our view, represent an unfairly low salary, as far as the teachers are concerned, and would also mean, as far as the Board is concerned, that they would have serious problems in recruiting the considerable number of new teachers which they will need next fall. For this reason, we believe a base salary below $6800 would be inappropriate.

2. At the same time, the panel has been impressed with the costliness of the very necessary additional new programs and additional staff which the Board plans. Our recommendation, if accepted and implemented, would cost the County about $218,000 more than the Board had indicated they believe is the maximum that can be provided for salary increases. We believe that these funds can be found but we are of the opinion that any recommendation in excess of $6800 would require an unrealistic increase in tax rates or the sacrificing of new and needed expenditures in other directions.

Had the panel believed that more funds for salary increases were available, we would unquestionably have recommended an increase higher than we have. Such a higher increase would have assisted the Board in its recruiting program and would have provided the teachers with a starting salary which would have given the teachers a merited increase in their income. It was the judgment of the majority of the panel, however, that such funds simply were not available.

In the Matter of:

SOUTHWESTERN MICHIGAN COLLEGE,

Case No. R68 E-174

SOUTHWESTERN MICHIGAN COLLEGE EDUCATION ASSOCIATION,
Petitioner

FINDINGS OF FACT, CONCLUSIONS OF LAW & DIRECTION OF ELECTION

APPEARANCES:

For the Employer: Thomas L. Combs, Esquire

For the Petitioner: Foster, Campbell, Lindemer and McGurrin
By James A. White, Esquire

The above-entitled matter, having come on for hearing before James R. McCormick, a Trial Examiner of the Labor Mediation Board, at Dowagiac, Michigan on September 27, 1968 and the Board, having considered the testimony, arguments of counsel, and briefs which were received from the Petitioner and the Employer on December 18 and December 23, 1968 respectively, hereby makes the following findings of fact, conclusions of law and direction of election:

FINDINGS OF FACT & CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Southwestern Michigan College, hereinafter referred to as the College, is a public employer within the meaning of Act 336 of the Public Acts of 1947 as amended (Public Employment Relations Act, hereinafter referred to as PERA.

Southwestern Michigan College Education Association, hereinafter referred to as the Petitioner, is a labor organization within the meaning of PERA.

As refined during the course of the hearing, the Petitioner seeks a unit which is described as follows:

"All full time faculty personnel including classroom instructors, counselors, librarians, regular part time day-instructors, department chairmen, twelve-month instructional personnel, director of nursing, and director of athletics; but EXCLUDING the president, vice-president, deans, and director of continuing education."

Both parties agreed to the exclusion of the College's president, vice-president, deans and director of continuing education, as being executives or supervisors. In addition, both parties agreed to the exclusion of part time evening faculty members. The parties, however, are in disagreement as to the unit placement of the following categories of personnel:

"Part time day-instructors, counselors, department chairmen, director of athletics, director of nursing, librarian, and twelve-month teaching personnel who are employed in the vocational-technical fields."

Southwestern Michigan College is a relatively new institution designed to provide education beyond the high school level for the residents of the Cass County area of Michigan. It operates a Division of Arts and Sciences and a Division of Applied Sciences. The program of the Division of Arts and Science is designed primarily for students who expect to transfer their college credits to a four-year college or university to earn a baccalaureate degree, and for students who wish to complete a two-year general education program. This Division offers programs designed for students who intend to pursue degrees in accounting, business administration, engineering, forestry, journalism, library science, law, medicine, nursing, social work and numerous other fields. The Division of Applied Sciences, which awards the associate degree in applied science after two years' successful work, offers numerous courses in vocational-technical areas. The courses of study in this Division are planned to develop specific skills and knowledge and are terminal in nature rather than leading to further work at degree-granting colleges and universities. Among the programs included in this Division are agribusiness, automotive mechanics, business management and accounting, drafting technology, industrial technology, practical nursing, sales and marketing, secretarial studies, aviation mechanics, graphic arts, and industrial architecture. The College also operates a continuing education program with specific vocational-technical courses in the evening.

The part-time day-instructors teach, on the average, half of the number of class hours taught by the full time faculty members. They teach the same subject matter in the same manner as do full-time faculty members. They maintain office hours, counsel students, and attend faculty meetings. The only difference in the working conditions of the part-time day faculty members and the full-time faculty members is that the former work under a so-called "letter of appointment" rather than a regular teaching contract. We find this difference does not affect the community of interest between full-time and part-time faculty members and conclude that the part-time day-instructors are regular part-time employees who are invariably included in appropriate bargaining units. Harper Hospital, 1966 Labor Opinions 116, 126; Saginaw County Hospital, 1968 Labor Opinions 508, 510.

The College employs counselors who perform the duties which are generally performed by that specialized profession in educational institutions. We do not find that the counselors employed by the College are either supervisors over teaching faculty members or executive employees of the College.

Each academic department is directed by a department chairman. The department chairmen are appointed after being first chosen by the members of the particular academic department. The department chairmen participate in the interviewing and evaluation of applicants for teaching positions, upon request make an evaluation of members of their departments as to their teaching ability, and participate in the scheduling of classes for members of their department. The record establishes that the evaluation function at the College has not been systematized. As a result the department chairmen are not clearly designated the responsibility of making a recommendation as to the retention of faculty members. Furthermore, the record does not indicate that the recommendation concerning the hire or retention of faculty members which might at times be made by department chairmen are accepted without further investigation or consideration by the Dean. The mere participation in observing and evaluating fellow employees, and even the existence of recommendations as to their hire or retention, are not in themselves indicia of true supervisory power as that concept is understood by this Board. It is essential to a finding of supervisory status that the individual's recommendations and evaluations be "effective." This means that they are generally accepted on their own face without further independent consideration by higher authority. Since the record here does not indicate that the recommendations of department chairmen are given such weight, the mere existence of periodic or occasional evaluation or recommendation is not in itself sufficient basis for a determination that the department chairmen are supervisors within the meaning of PERA. Finally, it is noted that the department chairmen do not determine the teaching schedules of the members of their department, but rather "suggest" class schedules and assignments of instructors. The record indicates that the making of the teaching schedule is a combined effort in which all faculty members participate. On the basis of the above it is concluded that the department chairmen of the College do not possess or exercise the kind of supervisory authority which would require their exclusion from the teaching bargaining unit. Utica Community Schools, 1966 Labor Opinions 326. While the department chairmen are included in the bargaining unit at this time, on the basis of the record made at the hearing, we note that a change in circumstances might lead to the opposite conclusion in the event that the College ultimately organizes its administration in such a manner as to designate the department chairmen as true supervisors.

The Director of Athletics and Director of Nursing are actively engaged in instruction. In addition, they participate in the hiring, evaluation, and class scheduling of members of their respective departments. In this connection their authority is comparable to that possessed and exercised by department chairmen. Accordingly, we conclude that they are not true supervisors within the meaning of PERA. The Director of Athletics and the Director of Nursing each has responsibilities in connection with the general organization of their respective programs, including the preparation of budgets. However, the Board concludes that such administrative duties are not sufficient to designate these individuals as executive employees of the College. Therefore, they are included in the faculty bargaining unit.

The College also employs one professional librarian, an assistant librarian (who does not possess a degree and is not sought to be included within the unit) and a number of student assistants. The College maintains that the professional librarian is an administrator and a supervisor and shares no community of interest with the teaching faculty. The Board concludes that the budgetary functions and organizational responsibilities of the librarian do not cause her to be an administrator of such a high level as to be designated an executive employee. Since she supervises no bargaining unit members, she may not be excluded from the unit as a supervisor. Finally, we conclude, consistent with prior holdings, that a librarian in an educational institution, as part of the overall educational team, shares a community of interest with classroom instructors. Utica Community Schools, supra. Accordingly, the College librarian is included within the bargaining unit.

The College would exclude instructors who teach on a twelve-month basis rather than on a nine-month academic year contract. It appears from the record that the twelve-month instructors are those who teach technical and vocational courses in the Division of Applied Sciences. These include instructors in practical nursing. While some twelve-month instructors possess academic degrees, it appears that the greater number of vocational and technical instructors do not possess degrees. The College asserts that such instructors share little community of interest with full-time instructors in traditional academic areas. While vocational and technical instructors are paid on a slightly different salary schedule and do not necessarily have formal academic degrees, it is nevertheless true that they lecture students, use text books, grade students, and counsel their students. They attend faculty meetings and in general their work is different from that of the academic instructors, primarily in the nature of the material taught. While there may be differences in the outlook and interests between instructors in certain academic areas and instructors in practical fields of endeavor of a non-academic nature, we conclude that there is a substantial community of interest among all persons who are engaged in the field of educational instruction. In Alpena Public Schools, 1967 Labor Opinions 187, 189, we held that there was not sufficient differentiation between the interests of teachers at the elementary and secondary level and community college instructors to warrant the severence of the community college instructors from an overall unit. The subject matter and teaching methods existing in the elementary grades is every bit as different from that which exists in the academic subjects at the college level as are the subject matter and teaching methods existing in the vocational-technical areas of the College. Accordingly, the reasoning and conclusion in the Alpena Public Schools case appears equally applicable to the question of including academic and vocational-technical instructors in the same unit. The circumstance that many of the vocational-technical courses are run on a twelve-month basis and the instructors are employed on a twelve-month basis rather than a nine-month basis seems insufficient grounds for creating separate bargaining units. Therefore, we will include within the petitioned-for unit the faculty members in the vocational-technical areas and all faculty members whether or not employed on a nine-month or twelve-month basis.

The Board finds that the unit appropriate for collective bargaining within the meaning of PERA is as follows:

> "All full-time faculty personnel and regular part-time day faculty personnel, of Southwestern Michigan College, including classroom instructors, counselors, librarians, department chairmen, twelve-month instructional personnel, director of nursing, but EXCLUDING the president, vice-president, deans, director of continuing education, supervisors and all other employees."

It has been administratively determined that the Petitioner has made a showing of at least thirty percent interest among the employees in the unit found appropriate for purposes of bargaining. A question of representation exists concerning employees of the College. Accordingly, it is ordered that an election shall be held pursuant to the attached Direction of Election. The employees in the aforementioned collective bargaining agreement eligible to vote shall vote as to whether or not they wish to be represented for the purposes of collective bargaining by the Southwestern Michigan College Education Association.

Negotiation Agreements

PROFESSIONAL AGREEMENT

Between The

LIVONIA PUBLIC SCHOOLS

SCHOOL DISTRICT

And The

LIVONIA EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

MEA-NEA

This Agreement entered into this ___ day of _____, 1968, by and between the School District of Livonia, the City of Livonia, Michigan, hereinafter called the "Board", and the Livonia Education Association, hereinafter called the "Association".

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Board and the Association recognize and declare that providing equality of education for the children of the Livonia Public Schools school district is their mutual aim, and

WHEREAS, the parties have a mutual obligation pursuant to Act 379 of the Michigan Public Acts of 1965 to bargain in good faith with respect to hours, wages, terms and conditions of employment of its teaching personnel described in Article II, hereof, and

WHEREAS, the parties have reached certain understandings which they desire to confirm in this Agreement in consideration of the following mutual covenant it is hereby agreed as follows:

ARTICLE I

Recognition

A. The Board hereby recognizes the Association as the exclusive bargaining representative for all certificated personnel, whether under contract, on leave, employed by the Board, or upon employment by the Board, including primarily, but not limited to teacher certificated professional personnel, and specifically including all classroom teachers, permanent substitutes, guidance counselors, librarians, department chairmen, school psychologists and diagnosticians, social workers, special education teachers, helping teachers, speech, hearing and orthopedic teachers or therapists, advising or critic teachers, teachers of the homebound or hospitalized, E.I.P. consultants, high school directors, and teaching consultants whether or not assigned to a building, but excluding per diem substitutes, E.I.P. program intern teachers, administrators, supervisors, coordinators, executive personnel, and supervisory consultants and any other personnel who may incidentally hold a teaching certificate but for which a certificate is not required in their position.

High school directors' positions will be redefined during the 1968-69 school year. Such redefining will clearly establish the administrative responsibilities of these positions and they may not be eligible for membership in the bargaining unit in 1969-70.

The term teacher, when used hereinafter in this agreement, shall refer to all employees represented by the Association in the bargaining or negotiating units as defined and reference to male teachers shall include female teachers.

B. The Board agrees not to negotiate with any teacher's organization other than the Association for the duration of this agreement.

ARTICLE II

Association and Teacher Rights

A. Pursuant to the Michigan Public Employee Relations Act, the Board hereby agrees that every employee in the bargaining unit shall have the right freely to organize, join and support the Association for the purpose of engaging in collective bargaining or negotiation and other concerted activities for mutual aid and protection.

The Board undertakes and agrees that it will not directly or indirectly discourage, deprive or coerce any teacher in the enjoyment of any rights conferred by the act or other laws of Michigan or the constitutions of Michigan and the United States. That it will not discriminate against any teacher with respect to hours, salaries, terms or conditions of employment, by reason of his membership in the Association, his participation in any activities of the Association or collective professional negotiations with the Board, or his institution of any grievance, complaint or proceeding under this agreement, or otherwise with respect to any terms or conditions of employment.

B. Nothing contained herein shall be construed to deny or restrict to any teacher rights he may have under the general Michigan school laws or other applicable laws and regulations. The rights granted to teachers hereunder shall be deemed to be in addition to those provided elsewhere.

C. The Association and its representatives shall have the right to use school building facilities at all reasonable hours for meetings without charges provided that when special custodial service is required, that the Board may make reasonable charges as provided in the Building Use Policies. The principal may designate a suitable and adequate place if there would be a conflict with other scheduled activities.

D. Duly authorized representatives of the Association and their respective affiliates shall be permitted to transact official Association business on school property at all reasonable times provided that this shall not interfere with or interrupt normal school operations.

E. The Board agrees to assist the Association in maintaining a secretarial staff, if necessary, and to provide printing shop and data processing services to the Association and permit the Association to use school equipment under the usual building use policies as long as it does not interfere with the regular operation of the school programs. Such services shall be paid for in full by the Association at the rates established by the Board.

F. The Association shall have the exclusive right as a teacher organization to post notices of activities and matters of Association concern on teacher bulletin boards. At least a portion of one or more shall be provided in each school building solely for that purpose. Such communications to employees shall be posted only on the bulletin board so designated. The Association shall have the exclusive right as a teacher organization for the use of the district mail services and teacher mail boxes for communications to teachers. Any communication posted on a bulletin board or sent through school means of distribution or placed in employee boxes by the Association shall have proper identification of the Association. Except for the Association's elections, political campaign literature shall not be posted on school bulletin boards or distributed through school mails by the Association or any of its members, unless approved by the Board and the Superintendent. All sections of this Article shall apply to both buildings and central office and to persons working where regular mail boxes do not exist.

G. The Board agrees to furnish the Association, on request, all available information concerning the financial resources of the district, including but not limited to, annual financial reports and audits, register of certificated personnel, preliminary budget requirements and allocations, including county allocation board budgets prior to adoption, agendas and minutes of all Board meetings, treasurer's reports, census and membership data, names and addresses of all teachers and such other information as will assist the Association in developing intelligent, accurate, informed and constructive programs on behalf of the teachers, together with information which may be necessary for the Association to process any grievance or complaint. Nothing contained in the above shall be construed to require that the Board provide any information not already available to it or to provide such information in any form other than it would normally be provided to the Board.

H. The Association shall be duly advised by the Board of fiscal, budgetary, tax, or legislative problems and programs affecting the district which are proposed or under consideration and the Board shall make every effort to provide the Association the opportunity in advance, to consult with the Board with respect, thereto, prior to general publication by the Board of any decision of such matters. The Association recognizes its responsibilities to give every possible assistance to the Board in regard to fiscal, tax, legislative and other such programs that affect the support of the school system. It is agreed and recognized, however, that except for expenditures contained in any annual budget which are required by the terms of this agreement, the authority to adopt all parts of the annual budget of the school district resides exclusively with the Board.

I. The parties agree that there shall be no discrimination against any employee or applicant for employment by reason of race, creed, color, marital status, age, sex or national origin and that the provisions of this agreement shall be applied in a manner which is not arbitrary, capricious or discriminate.

J. Teachers shall be entitled to full rights of citizenship and no exercising of such rights shall be grounds for discipline or discrimination with respect to the professional employment of such teacher. Consistent with the Code of Ethics of the Education Profession, the private and personal life of any teacher is not within the appropriate concern or attention of the Board except as it may reflect adversely on the teacher's responsibilities and relationships with students, parents, and the community.

K. As a condition of employment, all employees of the Board are required to have a physical examination and chest x-ray and/or tuberculin test. Chest x-rays and/or tuberculin tests shall be required annually and the Board shall make every effort to provide such chest x-ray and/or tuberculin test at a free clinic annually.

In recognition of the fact that by the very nature of their work teachers are more exposed to influenza, the Board agrees to provide up to $500 annually to the Association so that free influenza innoculation clinics may be held for employees. Any other preventive medical treatment which, in the Board's judgment, will protect the health and welfare of the students and teachers of the school district may be provided by the Board.

L. The Association shall be granted up to fifty (50) days released time per year for use by teachers participating in professional organization activities and conferences. If a substitute is required for more than twenty-five (25) of such days, then the Association shall reimburse the Board for the cost of the substitute. Any absence of a particular teacher will need to be approved by the immediate supervisor and Assistant Superintendent for Instruction at least one (1) week in advance of the absence.

M. The teacher who is elected president of the Association shall be released from a portion of his classroom responsibilities each day to fulfill his responsibilities to the Association and to the district. The time would be mutually agreed upon with the immediate supervisor. Any absences other than those mutually agreed upon under this clause would need to be approved by the immediate supervisor as well as the Assistant Superintendent for Instruction.

N. No polygraph or lie detector device shall be used on a teacher or witness in any investigation of any teacher unless expressly authorized by the teacher and the Association and the Board.

ARTICLE III

Rights of the Board

A. The Association recognizes that the Board has responsibility and authority to manage and direct, in behalf of the public, all the operations and activities of the school district to the full extent authorized by law, except where expressly limited by the provisions of this agreement.

ARTICLE IV

Membership, Fees, and Payroll Deductions

A. All teachers, as a condition of continued employment, shall either:

1. Sign and deliver to the Board an assignment authorizing deduction of membership dues and assessments of the Association (including the Michigan and National Education Association), and such authorization shall continue in effect from year to year, unless revoked in writing between June 1 and September 1 of a given year, or

2. Within thirty (30) days of the commencement of employment, cause to be paid to the Association either by authorizing payroll deduction or in cash, a representation fee equivalent to the dues and assessments of the Association (including the Michigan and National Education Associations). In the event the representation fee shall not be paid, the Board upon receiving a signed statement from the Association indicating that a teacher has failed to comply with this condition, shall immediately notify said teacher that his services shall be discontinued at the end of the current school year. The refusal of said teacher to contribute fairly to the costs of negotiation and administration of this and subsequent agreements is recognized as just and reasonable cause for termination of employment.

In any case in which a teacher or teachers contest a discharge under the provisions of this article, and it is necessary for the Board to defend its position and to engage legal counsel and to incur expenses in so doing, the Association agrees to pay such expenses so incurred by the Board, provided that the Association shall have the sole right to select the legal counsel for which they are assuming the expenses.

B. The deduction of membership dues shall be made in twenty (20) equal installments, beginning with the first pay check of each new school year, and the Board agrees to promptly remit to the respective Associations all monies so deducted, accompanied by a list of the teachers' names from whom such deductions have been made and the amount of the deduction. The balance of the annual dues or representational fees shall be deducted from the final pay check of any teacher resigning his position, receiving a leave of absence or terminating his employment after the opening of school.

The Association shall, at least sixty (60) days prior to the beginning of each school year, give written notification to the Business Office of the amount of its dues and those of the MEA and NEA which are to be deducted in that school year under such authorizations. The amounts of the deductions for these dues or representation fees shall not be subject to change during the entire school year except that the dues or representation fees for second semester employees shall be reduced according to the regulations of the Association. For the purpose of this article, the term "school year" shall mean the twelve-month period beginning with the opening of school in the fall of each year.

The right to refund to teachers monies deducted from their salaries under such authorization shall lie solely with the Association. The Association agrees to reimburse any teacher for the amount of any dues deducted by the Board and paid to the Association, which deduction is by error in excess of the proper deduction, and agrees to hold the Board harmless from any claims of excessive deduction.

C. The Board shall also make payroll deduction, upon written request and authorization from teachers, for benefits in addition to Board sponsored insurance, annuities, credit union, savings bonds, charitable donations or any other plans or programs approved by the Board.

ARTICLE V

Professional Responsibilities Including Teaching Hours and Class Loads

A. It is agreed by the Board and the Association that teaching, by the very nature of the task, cannot be analyzed or circumscribed in finite limits of time and that some teacher responsibilities cannot, by their very nature, be fulfilled during the teacher's regular workday. Direct contact with students comprise the fundamental responsibilities of teachers. It is recognized that learning is not limited to the physical limits of the classroom, and that teachers have a responsibility for the mental, physical, and emotional growth of students at all times that school is in session including those extensions of the normal school day and other school activities as are set forth in the remaining sections of this Article, except as these responsibilities are limited by this Article.

The instructional responsibility includes the daily preparation for effective teaching, defining teaching goals in terms of the learner, having a wide knowledge of methods from which selection may be made, and the using of evaluative techniques that are consistent with those goals. However, these responsibilities are only one element of the total professional task. The success or failure of other instruction-related activities, professional activities, and social and/or recreational activities is to a large extent dependent upon the willingness of teachers to acknowledge the significance of such activities in the total educational program and to share responsibility for participation in and supervision of these activities.

In some instances such activities are requisite to the operation of the regular school program and teachers are subject to balanced assignment to the activities by the principal as indicated under Article III.

Illustrative of these activities are the following:

1. Commencement, Baccalaureate, Honors Night
2. Parent and student conferences to report and evaluate pupil progress
3. Conferences with other teachers and administrators regarding students
4. Research, development and evaluation of programs including accreditation
5. Participating in curriculum planning and activities
6. Committee assignments to improve the educational program at building and system level
7. College and Career Night
8. P.T.A. or parent club meetings

*9. Parent's Night
*10. Back-to-School Night
*11. Program orientation meeting for parents.

Whereas some of the above activities, such as those marked with an asterisk (*), require the participation of all teachers, others may be handled by only a few or may pertain, at a given time, to only one individual.

It is recognized that other activities which require an extensive amount of time beyond the normal school day should receive additional compensation beyond the regular salary schedule. Those which extend over all, or a considerable portion, of the school year are incorporated in Appendix B of this agreement. Others which may be quite limited in time assignment include the following:

1. Athletic events
2. Student dances
3. Activity nights
4. Other activities requiring student and/or crowd control
5. Similar activities determined through agreement between the Association and the Board.

All teachers not otherwise assigned to such events but interested in assisting with them should have the opportunity to do so. Such supervisory work will be remunerated according to the rates set forth in Appendix B.

A third kind of responsibility, related to instruction and the broad professional role of teachers, is the sponsorship of club activities. Since the potential value of such an activity can only be realized through the enthusiastic leadership of the teacher sponsor and the interested participation of the students, such clubs will be initiated only when such student interest exists and when a qualified teacher volunteers to sponsor the activity without remuneration. Such necessary conditions and any other requirements must be approved by the principal prior to the initiation of the club. Among these activities are the following:

1. French Club
2. Future Nurses Club
3. Historical Society
4. Masque and Mike Club
5. Math Club
6. Model United Nations
7. Science Club
8. Young Moderns
9. Future Teachers Club
10. Chess Club

All teachers shall be given the opportunity to indicate interest in club sponsorship during the first few weeks of school in the fall and during the following May and June. The purpose of providing this opportunity to indicate an interest is to facilitate the planning for clubs.

B. The Association recognizes the right of the Board to develop complete job descriptions and to publish these descriptions in the Teacher Handbook, job postings, teacher evaluation materials, or other appropriate places. These job descriptions may not be in conflict with the expressed terms of this Agreement, but may be used for the purpose of evaluating a teacher's job performance, provided that the job description of any existing position in the bargaining unit will not be substantially altered or increased during the period of this Agreement without prior agreement of the Association. The future status of high school directors is covered by Article I.

C. The Board recognizes the principle of a minimum continuous seven and one-half hour teacher workday with no more than five clock hours required in the classroom supervision of students. The seven and one-half hour teacher workday is subject to the conditions of the remaining sections of this Article. The workday for part-time teachers shall be pro-rated according to the 1968-69 Teacher Handbook. In no instance shall a teacher be required to report earlier than seven a.m., nor remain later than six p.m., as a part of their regular teaching assignment unless contracted for individually with the teacher. Exceptions may be mutually agreed upon by the Board and the Association.

D. The normal weekly classroom teaching load for teachers, and specifically including librarians, counselors, and reading consultants in the junior-senior high schools shall include twenty-five teaching and supervised study hours and five hours for conferences, preparation of instructional materials, and similar instruction related activities. The twenty-five teaching and supervised study hours would normally be divided into five approximately equal periods per day.

The normal weekly teaching load in the elementary school shall include twenty-five teaching hours, excluding relief time. It is recognized that at the elementary level a portion of the extended lunch period and the additional time before and after school which secondary teachers do not have is for the purposes of conferences, preparation of instructional materials, and similar instruction related activities.

In addition to the above, teachers may be expected to spend some time in supervising halls, bus duty, homerooms, and similar responsibilities. This may be either before or after the student's day but shall be within the teacher's minimum seven and one-half hour day. In those elementary schools where the amount of bus duty exceeds the average of those elementary schools having buses, teachers shall be compensated according to Appendix B for the amount of time above the average.

E. In the establishment of experimental programs involving flexible modular schedules or other varying time blocks maxima established in D above shall not apply, but such programs shall not be established without the mutual consent of the Association and the Board. Such innovative programs shall be evaluated by May 1 of each year to determine further actions concerning such programs.

F. Elementary teachers shall have a minimum fifty-minute duty-free lunch period, while secondary teachers shall have a minimum twenty-five minute duty-free lunch period. The difference between elementary and secondary lunch time partially compensates for elementary teachers not having a regular daily conference or preparation period. If elementary classroom teachers desire to work a portion of their lunch period in the supervision of students, they shall be given the opportunity each fall to ask for such assignment and shall be employed prior to the employment of non-professional people for this job. It is understood that noon-hour supervision by teachers in elementary schools will be compensated for as agreed under the salary provisions for extra-duty pay in Appendix B.

G. Elementary classroom teachers and other elementary teachers who do not have periods of time free from direct student contact will be provided with a minimum of one fifteen-minute relief period per day. Such time may be taken at pupil recess or similar times, and the building principal will be responsible for establishing an appropriate schedule. In the event of inclement weather or other unusual circumstances which necessitate indoor recess, teachers may alternately monitor one another's classroom in order to insure a fifteen-minute relief period for each teacher each day.

H. No departure from the above provisions except in the case of emergency shall be made without prior consultation with the Association. In the event of any disagreement between the representatives of the Board and the Association as to the need and desirability of such deviation, the matter may be processed through the Professional Grievance Procedure hereinafter set forth.

I. No regularly assigned teacher shall be used as a substitute teacher unless it is a scheduled part of the total teaching hours except in case of emergency, it being expressly understood that failure of a substitute to arrive on schedule or the inability of the Board to secure a substitute shall be considered an emergency. Such emergency assignments shall be rotated among qualified available personnel. Such substituting would be in the areas of certification as far as possible.

In such emergency cases when a regular teacher has been assigned to substitute during a conference period or other available time, the teacher shall be reimbursed at the rate established in Appendix B of this Agreement. No teacher shall be assigned more than one hour of such substituting per day, nor shall be paid for more than one hour per day of such substituting.

J. Monday afternoon following the regular teachers' workday shall be reserved for Association meetings. Exceptions may be made when mutually agreed to by both parties. One Monday per month such meetings may be held fifteen minutes after the dismissal of students if there are no conflicts.

K. Teachers serving as delegates to the Association's Representative Assembly or members of the Association's Board of Directors shall be allowed to leave their respective buildings as soon as their responsibilities related to the health and welfare of children are completed on those Mondays when such meetings are regularly scheduled. The Association shall provide each building principal with a list of the Representative Assembly Delegates and/or Board of Directors members from their buildings along with a schedule of such meeting dates as soon as possible following the commencement of the school year.

L. Any teacher engaged in a formal meeting where his attendance is required in negotiating in behalf of the Association with any representative of the Board or participating in any professional grievance procedure shall be released from regular duties without loss of salary.

M. Teachers shall be expected to remain on duty as long as needed in the event of emergency situations. Such situations should be similar but not limited to severe weather warnings, civil or student disturbances or situations which may threaten health or safety of students.

N. Attendance at faculty meetings scheduled beyond the regular teacher's workday shall not be required except that a maximum of one faculty meeting per week may extend up to thirty minutes beyond the regular teacher's workday with attendance being required. Faculty meetings shall not be used for Association business except short announcements may be made by representatives of the Association.

O. The Board and the Association recognize the right for voluntary participation by teachers in in-service activities, and similar professional tasks which may go beyond these guidelines.

ARTICLE VI

Special Student Program

The parties recognize that children having special physical, mental and emotional problems may require specialized classroom experience and their presence in the regular classroom may place extraordinary demands on the teacher.

Teachers are encouraged to make referrals of students who appear to need specialized assistance to Pupil Personnel Services. Principals shall assist teachers in making appropriate referrals. Supportive personnel such as School Social Workers, Psychologists, Type "C" Consultants, Helping Teachers and other appropriate personnel from the Department of Pupil Personnel Services will be provided within budgetary limits. It is normal that a small percentage of these children may be present in any classroom, but occasionally the extraordinary demands required of classroom teachers becomes excessive because of the number of such children, the severity of their problem, or the inability to make immediate placement in a special classroom. In these cases reduction of total class size may be appropriate in addition to the other supportive help provided.

If, after exhausting all recognized avenues to minimize the extraordinary requirements in these situations, the teacher feels more help is needed, a request may be made to the principal for the Director of Pupil Personnel Services to initiate a complete evaluation of the situation and take additional appropriate action to reduce the extraordinary demands, if such further action is found needed.

ARTICLE VII

Teaching Conditions

A. Inasmuch as the pupil-teacher ratio is an important aspect of an effective educational program and is directly related to the volume of a teacher's work, it is agreed the following maximum class sizes and pupil-teacher ratios will be adhered to. In the event of any disagreement between the representative of the Board and the Association as to the needs and desirability of deviation from these class sizes, it may be processed through the Professional Grievance Procedure set forth in Article XXVII. The Board recognizes that the pupil-teacher ratio established here is not an optimum pupil-teacher ratio and will give improvements in this area prime consideration as the finances of the district may allow for improvement.

1. Elementary - 33.5 classroom teachers per 1,000 students. Consultants, special education teachers, librarians, administrators, and other professionals at the elementary level who do not contribute to the reduction of class size shall not be included in the 33.5 classroom teachers per 1,000 students. Maximum class size at the elementary level shall be 35 in grades 3 through 6 and 32 in grades K, 1 and 2.

2. Secondary - 33.5 classroom teachers per 1,000 students. Only that portion of a teacher's day which contributes to the reduction of class size may be included in the 33.5 classroom teachers per 1,000 students.

   a. The maximum number of students to be assigned an individual teacher except in specially classified classes such as music, physical education, and study halls shall not exceed 175 students for a 5 period classroom teaching day. If a teacher has fewer than 5 classroom teaching periods, then the maximum per day shall be 35 times the number of teaching periods.

   b. The maximum number of students assigned to a given section of the above classes with the exception of the specifically classified classes shall be 35. Given sections of these classes shall not be smaller than 19 unless physical facilities or the most efficient use of personnel so dictates.

   c. The maximum number of students in laboratory classes (BUSINESS EDUCATION: Computer concepts, data processing, and business machines classes; HOME ECONOMICS: All foods and clothing classes except specifically excluding home and family classes; INDUSTRIAL ARTS: All woods, auto, and metals classes except specifically excluding drafting and graphics classes; SCIENCE: All science classes except specifically excluding general science in 7th and 8th grades) shall not exceed 140 students for a 5 period classroom teaching day. If a teacher has fewer than 5 classroom teaching periods then the maximum per day shall be 28 times the number of teaching periods.

   d. The maximum number of students assigned to a given section of such laboratory classes shall be 28.

3. Special Education Classes - Maximum class sizes and consultative loads shall not exceed the standards adopted as maximums by the Michigan Department of Education. When students normally assigned to a special education classroom are integrated into a regular classroom they shall be counted in computing the number of students in the regular classroom.

4. Exceptions to the preceding in this Article may be made but such exceptions must be mutually approved by representatives of the Association and the Board.

B. In the establishment of experimental education programs involving large group instruction or other organizational patterns with high pupil-teacher ratios, maxima established above will not apply, but such programs shall not be established without the mutual agreement of the Association and the Board. The development of mutual consent for such programs shall include full discussion by the principal and staff including representatives of the Association at the local building level. However, if an individual teacher is to receive or has a class load that exceeds the limits of this contract, that teacher must agree in writing to the exceeding of the maximum load. The Association's representative shall seek a statement of position from the Association. All information shall be forwarded to the appropriate director who shall give it the same consideration as any other proposal. The director may arrange for any further discussions deemed necessary prior to making any further recommendations following normal administrative channels. Innovative programs and/or courses shall be evaluated jointly by the appropriate Association and Board representatives by May 1 of each year to determine further action concerning such programs.

C. Recognizing the desirability of experimenting with flexible class sizes for various instructional situations, and under the auspices of the Professional Study Committee and with Board and Livonia Education Association approval there have been jointly selected six experimental advisory councils in six schools to advise the building principal and to help plan the staffing patterns in those schools. These six schools are Stevenson High School, Bryant and Emerson Junior High Schools, and Tyler, Garfield and Buchanan Elementary Schools. These six schools are to operate under guidelines approved by the Professional Study Committee. These six schools shall receive at least the minimum teacher allocation for the number of pupils in their schools, as provided in other sections of this contract.

   In these six schools class sizes may be varied by a joint agreement of the Staff Advisory Council and the principal of that school. However, if an individual teacher is to receive or has a class load that exceeds the limits of the contract, that teacher must agree in writing to the above the maximum load.

D. The ratio of pupils to counselors at the junior high school level shall not exceed 325 to 1 and the ratio at the senior high school level shall not exceed 300 to 1. Because of the nature of the counselor's work, the Board requires a counselor's school year to precede the regular teacher's contract year by one week and extend beyond the regular teacher's contract year by one week. Such additional weeks are to be prorated on the annual contract salary as set forth in Appendix A.

E. The Board recognizes the importance of Instructional Materials Centers as part of the total educational program. In a fully operating senior high school there shall be at least the equivalent of two and one-half librarians and a full-time director of Instructional Materials. At the junior high school level there shall be at least one full-time librarian, and in those junior high schools having over 1,000 students, one and one-half librarians. In addition, there shall be at least the equivalent of a full-time person in charge of Audio-Visual Instructional Materials. Minor exceptions to this policy may be necessary during the current school year. However, this person shall not be assigned more than one teaching period.

Depending upon their enrollment elementary schools shall have at least:

Two-fifths-time librarian for schools enrolling less than 500 students;
One-half-time librarian for schools enrolling 500 students or more;
A full-time librarian for schools enrolling more than 700 students

F. Department Chairmen in the secondary schools shall exercise the coordination of programs and materials and shall serve as instructional liaison between teachers of the department and the school administration. The duties, qualifications and method of selection of department chairmen in both junior and senior high schools shall be in accordance with established Board Regulations as approved on August 16, 1968.

Chairmen shall be selected for the following separate and distinct departments in the junior and senior high schools:

Senior High: art, business, counseling, English, foreign language, home economics, industrial education, mathematics, music, physical education, science, social studies.

Junior High: English-social studies, mathematics-science.

Department chairmen shall receive compensation in accordance with Appendix B.

G. The Board recognizes that appropriate text books, library reference facilities, maps, globes, laboratory equipment, audio-visual equipment, art supplies, athletic equipment, current periodicals, standardized tests, questionnaires and similar instructional materials are the tools of the teaching profession and the Board shall make every effort at all times to keep the schools reasonably and properly equipped with such material. The Board further recognizes the value of teacher participation in the selection and use of instructional materials and will confer from time to time with the Association for the purpose of improving the methods of selection and use of such educational tools. The Board will attempt to implement all joint decisions made by its representative and the Association, however, the Board reserves the right to approve final purchase and selection of such instructional materials.

H. The Board will provide a maximum of one pair of protective shoes per year to each teacher of welding, auto, wood and machine shop. The Board shall supply each science laboratory, industrial arts classroom, and art room with protective smocks, laboratory coats or shop coats for teacher's use while teaching in such classrooms. Such clothing may be laundered by the school laundering service.

I. The Board shall make available in each school, lunch room, restroom and lavatory facilities exclusively for adult use and at least one room which shall be reserved for use as an adult lounge. The lunch room and adult lounge may be the same room.

J. Telephone facilities shall be made available to teachers for their reasonable use according to Board regulations, dated November 28, 1967.

K. At the request of the Association, a vending machine for beverages may be installed by the Association in the faculty room, provided that no alteration to the building is necessary. All financial and operational arrangements shall be the responsibility of the Association and it shall be the responsibility of the LEA building organization to properly protect any such vending machines at all times.

L. Parking facilities, as far as possible, shall be made available to teachers and maintained for their use. The Board reserves the right to free certain parking locations for election day or other emergency building use.

ARTICLE VIII

Professional Qualifications and Assignments

A. The Board agrees to employ under contract, only those teachers who possess the minimum of a Bachelor's degree and the necessary qualifications for Provisional,

Permanent, Continuing or Life Certification; social workers and psychologists and psychological examiners, shall have approval as determined by the State of Michigan. Teachers hired as substitutes or for classes in adult education and extended school services would require certification, but would not necessarily require a Bachelor's degree. As vocational education programs expand, there may be added programs such as culinary arts for which there are very limited or no professional training programs. Prior to the employment of any person who does not have a Bachelor's degree but does have vocational certification for such a program, the Board will notify the Association of the recruitment efforts made for the position. It is the responsibility of each teacher to maintain proper certification.

B. Teachers shall not be assigned outside the scope of their teaching certificates and their major or minor field of study, except temporarily and for good cause, and the Association shall be so notified in each instance, along with written statement of reasons for such assignment.

C. Prior to the close of school each school year, teachers, other than newly appointed and substitute teachers, shall be notified in writing of their tentative programs for the coming year, including the schools to which they will be assigned, the grades and/or subjects that they will teach, any special or unusual classes that they will have and including tentative class lists for the elementary grades. Teachers affected by any subsequent changes in assignment shall be consulted, if possible, and any change in assignment will be made according to the provisions of Vacancies, Promotions and Transfers under Article IX of this Agreement.

D. Any scheduled extra-pay assignments in addition to the normal teaching schedule during the regular school year, including adult education courses, driver education, extra duties enumerated in Appendix B, and summer school courses outside the regular school year shall not be obligatory but shall be with the consent of the teacher. This restriction does not limit the professional activities as outlined in Article V of this Agreement.

E. Teachers are employed and assigned on the basis of their area of teaching competency. Extra-pay assignments are ordinarily offered to those people who have exhibited an interest in them and who have the ability to conduct this extra-pay assignment as evidenced by course work or experience. A third factor is the balancing of extra-duty assignments among those people with the interest and ability. Seldom would one individual have more than two (2) extra-duty pay assignments if anyone else has the ability and the interest. Method of appointment to extra-duty pay assignments shall be as follows:

1. A vacancy shall exist when a new position is created, when a person who has held the position leaves or requests not to have the position any longer, or when the principal declares the position vacant for reasonable and just cause.

2. When a vacancy exists for an extra-duty assignment, the principal shall post appropriate notices in the building soliciting written applications. The vacancy shall not be filled except in case of an emergency, and then only on a temporary basis until such vacancy shall have been posted for at least ten days.

3. When more than one person indicates an interest, ability and balance will become the prime factors of consideration. If these are essentially equal; then seniority in the Livonia Public Schools will become the deciding factor, with the person with greatest seniority given preference. Any person denied a position after indicating an interest in the vacancy may request the principal to state the reason(s) for such denial.

4. If there is no one with the ability and interest at a building for a particular extra-duty assignment, applications may be sought from other buildings.

5. It is recognized that tenure does not apply to any extra-duty assignment.

F. The Board agrees to maintain at all times an adequate list of substitute teachers. Teachers shall call to report unavailability for work at least one and one-half hours before their teaching day commences. Between the hours of 6:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. they may call 422-1200. Between the hours of 5:00 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. they may call 422-1810. When a teacher has reported unavailability for work it shall be the responsibility of the Superintendent to arrange for a substitute teacher.

G. Administrative, supervisory, and executive personnel will not be assigned any extra-curricular or summer school positions as a teacher as long as a qualified Livonia Public Schools teacher is available to fill the position. For any person appointed to such an administrative, supervisory, or executive position who has held such an extra-curricular or summer school position, there may be a one-year grace period on this provision. The Association shall be informed of any such assignments for this grade period and the reasons for the assignment.

ARTICLE IX

Vacancies, Promotions, and Transfers

A. Vacancies and Promotions

1. Whenever any vacancy in any promotional professional position in the District shall occur, the Board shall publicize the same by giving written notice of such vacancy to the Association and provide for appropriate posting in all schools or through a staff newsletter. No vacancy shall be filled, except in case of an emergency, and then only on a temporary basis, until such vacancy shall have been publicized for at least ten days. A promotional position is defined as an advancement in salary other than normal increments. Extra-duty assignments are not promotional positions. Teachers are encouraged to submit in writing an indication of their intent to apply for a particular promotional position prior to the time that the position becomes vacant. All teachers submitting such an indication of their intent to apply shall be sent a copy of the job posting by the Personnel Office when the position does become vacant.

2. Whenever vacancies other than promotional positions shall occur, the Board shall publicize the same by giving written notice of such vacancy to the Association and provide for appropriate posting in all schools or through a staff newsletter within five days of the first day of November, December, January, February, March, and April. Up-to-date information regarding vacancies may be obtained from the Personnel Office at any time by an employee. Teachers may file applications for positions at any time.

3. The Association recognizes that, when vacancies occur during the school year, it may be difficult to fill them from within the district without undue disruption to the existing instructional program. If the Superintendent, in his reasonable judgment, so determines, such vacancy may be filled on a temporary or tentative basis until the end of the normal school year, at which time the position will be considered vacant. This position must be posted by March 1, or as soon as possible after the vacancy becomes known, if the vacancy occurs after March 1.

4. Any qualified teacher may apply for a vacancy. All applicants applying to fill a posted vacancy shall receive from the Personnel Office a form indicating that his application has been received and is being processed. Vacancies shall be filled on the basis of experience within and outside the system, training, certification, proven and potential ability, and other personal and professional qualifications considered pertinent by the Board for the position.

   Applicants for transfer shall be notified of the status of their application prior to the close of the teachers' school year. An applicant from outside the system, or an applicant with less service in the system, shall not be awarded such a position unless his qualifications are demonstrably superior to applicants within or with greater service in the system. When a teacher within the system is denied a position for which he has applied, he shall be entitled to a conference with the Superintendent or his designee, and the reasons for denying his application stated and discussed. After such discussion, if the conference is not satisfactory to the teacher, the teacher shall have recourse to the grievance procedure. "Service in the system", for purposes of this Agreement, shall mean continuous employment in the district, including permanent substitute teaching service, but shall exclude all periods when the teacher was on a nonprofessional leave of absence for any cause, except military service.

5. The parties recognize that the filling of vacancies at the supervisory and administrative levels and the filling of newly created supervisory and administrative positions according to job description posting is the prerogative of the Board, and the decision of the Board with respect to such matters shall be final.

6. Administrative intern positions are assignments developed to assist the Board in identifying potential administrators, supervisors, and instructional leaders. Such positions shall be open to all teachers as outlined in this article. Teachers placed in these positions shall serve in this capacity, full time if possible, for not more than two (2) years. If, at the end of the internship period, interns are not placed in an administrative, supervisory or instructional leadership position, they shall be returned to their previous or equivalent teaching assignments, and shall be personally informed by the Superintendent or his designee of their status in terms of promotion. An intern during the internship period shall advance on the salary schedule the same number of steps he would have advanced had he remained a teacher during that period.

   The Superintendent shall annually appoint a system-wide committee to coordinate the intern program. One member of this committee shall be appointed by the Superintendent upon receipt of recommendation from the Association. The responsibilities of this committee are delineated in The Internship Program. If the selection committee for interns is different than the system-wide committee, then the Association representative shall serve on both committees.

B. Transfers

Although the Board and the Association recognize that frequent transfers of teachers from one school to another are disruptive of the educational process and interfere with optimum teacher performance, they also recognize that relocation of staff personnel may become necessary to meet load conditions, to meet instructional requirements, to maintain a balance of experienced teachers on a particular staff, to honor the wishes of employees for service elsewhere in the system, and to provide a better opportunity for professional growth.

1. Each February, or as unusual vacancies occur, an opportunity shall be given to all tenure teachers to make an official request for a change in assignment for the following year on a form provided by the Personnel Office. Teachers may, however, file such transfer request forms at any time. All transfer requests received prior to March 15, shall be acted upon by the Superintendent in cooperation with all parties affected and considering instructional needs of all schools concerned, seniority, certification and other pertinent qualifications. The applicant shall be notified of the status of his application prior to the close of the teacher's school year. Transfer requests received after March 15 shall be acted upon the following school year, however, the Personnel Office will make every attempt to honor transfer requests to fill vacancies as they become known after that date.

2. All persons applying for a transfer shall receive from the Personnel Office a form indicating that his request has been received and is being processed.

3. Any teacher who shall be transferred to an administrative, supervisory or instructional leadership position, and shall later return to teacher status, shall be entitled to retain such rights as he may have had under this Agreement prior to such transfer. However, he is not automatically reinstated to such additional responsibilities as coaching or department chairman.

4. Probationary assignment. If practicable, probationary teachers will be retained in the same assignment throughout their probationary period. In those instances when the Board feels it is to the advantage of all parties concerned to transfer a probationary teacher during the period of probation, the Association shall be notified.

5. Transfers and changes of assignments will be on a voluntary basis, whenever possible. In making involuntary assignments and transfers, the convenience and wishes of the individual teacher will be honored to the extent that these considerations do not conflict with the instructional requirements and best interests of the school system and the pupils.

6. An involuntary transfer will be made only after notification of the teacher. Notice of such transfer will be given to the teacher not later than thirty (30) days prior to the end of the semester preceding the effective date of the transfer, if at all possible. The teacher being so transferred shall have the opportunity to meet with the Superintendent or his designee and a representative of the Association to discuss the need and desirability of such a move.

   A list of open positions in other schools will be made available to all teachers being involuntarily transferred. Adequate released time will be provided for visiting schools at which open positions exist. If not in conflict with the instructional requirements and best interests of the school system and the pupils, preference will be given in filling such positions on the basis of length of service in the school system. Disputes under this section will be subject to the grievance procedure.

C. In order to facilitate transfers, as well as general recruitment, the Association agrees to encourage teachers to communicate to their immediate supervisor their plans for the following year as soon as possible. The Board may survey the staff, using whatever means appropriate, to determine the employment status of teachers for the ensuing school year.

ARTICLE X

Illness and Disability

On an experimental basis during the period of this Agreement, the Board and the Association agree to incorporate a new concept of illness and disability protection for teachers. Such illness and disability protection shall be provided as hereinafter set forth:

A. Coverage

1. Group I

   a. Teachers who have less than three full years service with the Livonia Public Schools shall be known as Group I teachers for the purposes of this Article.

   b. Group I teachers shall be provided with ten (10) annual days leave per year for the purpose of illness, disability, and/or personal business. Such annual days shall not be cumulative; however, the unused portion of said annual days shall be remunerated from the Illness and Disability Bank, prior to June 30, in accordance with the formula prescribed in B. 2, of this Article.

   c. Group I teachers shall also be provided by the Board with salary continuation insurance protection in the amount of $50/wk., as provided by MESSA.

2. Group II

   a. Teachers who have three or more full years service with the Livonia Public Schools shall be known as Group II teachers for the purposes of this Article.

   b. Group II teachers shall be guaranteed a sum equal to the total amount of their annual salary as set forth in Appendix A, in the event they are ill or disabled and unable to work. This salary guarantee shall be for any period of illness or disability up to one calendar year from the onset of the illness or disability. In no event, however, shall any teacher be paid under this provision an amount in excess of the total salary he would have earned had he been able to work during the period of the illness or disability.

c. Group II Teachers shall be allotted ten (10) computational days leave per year for the purpose of illness, disability, and/or personal business. Such computational days shall not be cumulative; however, the unused portion of said computational days shall be remunerated from the Illness and Disability Bank prior to June 30 in accordance with the formula prescribed in B.2, of this Article.

3. For any absence which exceeds three consecutive school days the teacher shall upon request provide the office of the Assistant Superintendent for Personnel with a written statement from a qualified physician as to the need for such absence.

a. Only in emergencies may leave days be taken under the provisions of this Article on the last two days of school or immediately preceding or following a holiday. Any use of leave days under this emergency provision must be approved by the Superintendent of Schools in advance if at all possible. The teacher shall furnish verification upon request from a qualified physician if they are ill on these days.

B. Illness and Disability Bank

1. *Funding

a. For the purposes of administering the illness and disability protection for teachers, an Illness and Disability Bank shall be established in the amount of $_____ , (this sum having been determined by multiplying the number of members of the bargaining unit by the average number of days used for the purposes of illness, disability, and/or personal business, and in turn multiplying that figure by the current per diem substitute rate).

b. The Illness and Disability Bank shall have two (2) sections: A and B. The purposes of the A section shall be: (1) to charge all absences of Group I teachers actually requiring a substitute against; and (2), to provide Group I teachers with a base for remuneration of unused annual days. The purpose of the B section shall be: (1) to charge all absences of Group II teachers actually requiring a substitute against: and (2), to provide Group II teachers with a base for remuneration of unused computational days.

The amount of the A section shall be $_____ , and the amount of the B section shall be $_____ , the basis for said amounts having been determined according to Paragraph a. above.

c. Ninety per cent of the initial amount allocated to the respective sections (A and B) of the Illness and Disability Bank shall be used to remunerate teachers for unused days according to the following paragraphs of this Article. Ten per cent of the initial amount shall be reserved by the Board for use in this program in future years.

d. In addition, there shall be maintained a Reserve Illness and Disability Bank in the amount of $_____ . The Reserve Illness and Disability Bank shall be used expressly for the purpose of protecting the liability of the Board during the period of this Agreement, and shall not be included in the remuneration for the unused portion of annual days in the case of Group I teachers, nor the remuneration for the unused portion of computational days in the case of Group II teachers.

2. Remuneration

a. Teachers in Group I shall be remunerated for unused annual days according to the following formula:

(A-B-C) ÷ D = E, where

A = Total of Section A Bank
B = 10% for future years
C = Total number of days for which substitute was required x current substitute rate
D = Total number of unused annual days
E = Amount of remuneration per unused annual day.

b. Teachers in Group II shall be remunerated for unused computational days according to the following formula:

(A-B-C) ÷ D = E, where

A = Total of Section B Bank
B = 10% for future years
C = Total number of days for which substitute was required x current substitute rate

*NOTE: The dollar amounts cannot be filled in until the rate of pay for substitutes, number of teachers in the bargaining unit and average number of days used is determined. The dollar amounts shall be as set forth in these paragraphs.

D = Total number of unused computational days
E = Amount of remuneration per unused computational day.

C. Evaluation

1. In recognition of the experimental nature of the Illness and Disability Program contained herein, the Association and the Board agree to evaluate the program prior to the close of the school year in order to assess its effect upon reducing the usage of substitute days within the district and its attempt to provide increased benefits for teachers.

2. Such evaluation shall result in the mutual determination of the desirability of continuing the program in future years.

It is expressly understood that all members of the bargaining unit who have accumulated sick leave days under the provision of previous contracts shall retain that accumulation and, in the event that it is mutually agreed as a result of the evaluation to return to the plan set forth in the Agreement of 1966-68 or a similar plan involving the accumulation of sick leave days, such accumulation shall be restored in full. Toward this end, the Office of the Assistant Superintendent for Personnel shall forward a statement to this effect including the total accumulated days to each member of the bargaining unit having such accumulation, a carbon copy of which shall be placed in the teacher's personnel file.

It is further understood that such accumulation shall not be used during the period of this Agreement, except that a teacher in Group I who has exhausted his ten (10) annual days may use any portion or all of the days accumulated under previous contracts, should he so desire. In such an instance, the Board agrees not to charge days used from prior accumulation against the Illness and Disability Bank.

The Superintendent's office shall forward to the Association on a monthly basis a list indicating the actual number of days for which a substitute was required for both Group I and Group II teachers. No later than Wednesday following the last day of school, the Association shall be furnished with the data and computations necessary to determine remuneration to both Group I and Group II teachers on the basis of the formulas established in this Article.

ARTICLE XI

Insurance Protection and Annuities

A. Pursuant to the authority set forth in the Michigan School laws, the Board agrees to contribute for each teacher who requests such protection by filing the proper authorization form, the payment of premiums in the amounts hereinafter prescribed.

Teachers new to the district, or those who have not been covered by MESSA insurance, may take advantage of a choice of one of the two following plans of health care and life insurance under the current Michigan Education Special Services program.

Plan I

1. The Board shall contribute toward the payment of premiums for Super-Med hospitalization and major medical according to the following schedule:

a. Insured only	$10.20/mo.
b. Insured and spouse	20.85/mo.
c. Insured and children	17.00/mo.
d. Full family	25.25/mo.

2. The Board shall contribute full premiums to provide life insurance of $5,000 (over age 50 – $3,750).

3. The Board shall contribute full premiums to provide dependent life insurance.

4. Teachers new to Livonia, in order to have the benefits of Plan I, shall authorize payroll deduction for the following differences in the premiums between the above and Super-Med:

a. Insured only	$ 1.80/mo.
b. Insured and spouse	3.30/mo.
c. Insured and children	3.25/mo.
d. Full family	4.70/mo.

Plan II

1. The Board shall contribute full premiums to provide life insurance of $12,500 (over age 50 – $11,250).

2. The Board shall contribute full premiums to provide dependent life insurance.

B. Teachers having taught in the system prior to the ratification of this Agreement, and who have been covered by MESSA health insurance programs, shall have the option of selecting either the Super-Med coverage of their previous coverage with the exception of salary continuation. In those instances where a teacher shall elect to remain with previous MESSA health insurance programs, the Board shall contribute full premiums for up to full family coverage.

In those instances where a teacher shall elect the Super-Med coverage, the teacher shall authorize payroll deduction for the difference in premium between the two plans now available according to the amounts in A 4 above.

C. During the month of September, the Board shall forward to all teachers having taught in the system prior to the ratification of this Agreement, notification of the increased benefits available under Super-Med so they may make a determination whether to remain with the previous MESSA health insurance coverage or file appropriate forms to revise their coverage to include Super-Med.

It shall be the responsibility of the teacher to file the appropriate form, including authorization for payroll deduction for this additional premium with the Insurance office prior to the close of the open period, November 1.

D. The Board shall make payment of insurance premiums for each teacher to provide insurance coverage for the full twelve-month period, commencing September 1 and ending August 31; when necessary, premiums in behalf of the teacher shall be made retroactively or prospectively to assure uninterrupted participation and coverage.

E. The Board shall provide Association members the right to benefits of the MEA and NEA Tax Deferred Annuity Programs on payroll deduction. Payroll deduction for other tax deferred annuity programs shall be allowed by the Board upon designation of intent on the part of a minimum of 100 teachers.

ARTICLE XII

Leaves of Absence

A. Sabbatical Leave

Pursuant to Michigan School Law, teachers who have continuously been employed by the Board for seven (7) years may be granted a sabbatical leave for one year. During a sabbatical leave, the teacher shall be considered to be in the employment of the Board, and shall be paid one-half his scheduled salary as set forth in Appendix A.

Up to 2% of the total teaching staff may be granted such leave. Determination of teachers to be granted such leave shall be made by a six member panel, composed of three representatives chosen by the Board and three representatives chosen by the Association, according to the following guidelines:

1. Qualifications

a. The applicant must possess a Michigan Life or Permanent Certificate.

b. The applicant must have been employed in the Livonia Public Schools School District for at least seven consecutive years. Absence from service for a period of not more than one year under a leave of absence without pay for professional improvement, restoration of health, or maternity shall not be deemed a break in continuity of service, but neither shall such a one-year leave be counted in the total of seven required by this qualification.

c. The applicant must not have been granted a sabbatical leave of absence from the Livonia Public Schools School District during the seven consecutive years of service immediately preceding current application.

d. The applicant must sign an agreement to return to service with the Livonia Public Schools School District immediately upon termination of the sabbatical leave and continue in such service for a period of two years (one year in the event of a half-year sabbatical leave), unless causes beyond his control prevent, or to refund all or part of any compensation received during the sabbatical leave from the Livonia Public Schools School District, according to the following schedule:

Years Service Following Leave	Refund
0	100%

A proportionate schedule shall be followed in the event of a half-year sabbatical leave. In the event of extenuating circumstances, the Board may, by special action, waive any obligation to refund compensation.

e. All applications shall be reviewed for recommendation to the Board by a committee consisting of six members, three appointed by the Superintendent and three appointed by the Association. The committee shall consider, among other qualifications, the following:

1) The proposed program of the applicant as related to professional graduate study, travel, writing or research.

2) The value of the proposed program to the Livonia Public Schools School District, its pupils, and the individual applicant.

3) The applicant's length of total service to the Livonia Public Schools.

4) When the number of applicants exceeds 2% of the teaching staff, the ratio of recipients should reflect the ratio of applicants, taking into account the total number of teachers eligible for a sabbatical from the areas of elementary, secondary, and pupil personnel. The committee would be responsible for maintaining this balance.

2. Application

a. Applications shall be filed with the office of the Assistant Superintendent for Personnel by March 1, for leave beginning the following September. For leave beginning the second semester, applications shall be filed by October 1 of the preceding calendar year.

b. Applicants requesting sabbatical leave commencing in September shall be notified by April 1 as to the status of their application. Applicants requesting leave commencing the second semester shall be notified by November 1 as to the status of their application.

c. Applicants for sabbatical leave shall include with their application forms an outlined plan for the period requested for sabbatical leave. This plan shall be indicated on the application form or as an attached statement, and shall include details either for graduate study in an approved college or university or a project (research, writing, travel) to be pursued independently by the applicant.

3. Compensation

a. A teacher on sabbatical leave will be paid 1/2 of his salary as set forth in Appendix A, on either 21 or 26 pays, as he so indicates.

b. A teacher granted such leave shall advance on the salary schedule the same number of steps he would have advanced had he been on the staff in the Livonia Public Schools School District.

4. Status while on Sabbatical Leave

a. A teacher on sabbatical leave shall be considered to be in the employ of the Livonia Public Schools School District, and shall have a contract.

b. Full insurance benefits as set forth in Article XI shall be provided teachers on sabbatical leave.

c. Teachers on sabbatical leave shall be entitled to participate in any and all benefits that may be provided other contracted teachers by the Board.

d. Full-time employment by the recipient of sabbatical leave shall be prohibited. This does not, however, preclude the recipient's accepting grants, fellowships or remuneration for part-time work of any sort which does not interfere with the outlined sabbatical plan.

e. Teachers shall be responsible for notifying the Payroll Department of the Livonia Public Schools School District as to the place to which payroll checks should be addressed during the period of sabbatical leave.

5. Status upon return from Sabbatical Leave

a. A teacher, upon return from a sabbatical leave, shall be restored to his former teaching position, if possible, or to a position of like nature, retirement status, and seniority status; however, he is not automatically reinstated to such additional responsibilities as coaching, department chairman, etc.

b. A teacher returning from sabbatical leave shall file with the Assistant Superintendent for Personnel within 60 days a written report of his educational pursuits while on sabbatical leave and in the event the leave was granted for graduate study, a transcript from the college or university attended.

B. Professional Leave

1. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of special teaching such as the Peace Corps, National Teacher Corps, exchange or overseas teaching. Upon return from such leave, a teacher shall be placed at the same position on the salary schedule as he would have been had he taught in the district during such period.

2. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of study, travel, research, or other teaching or employment involving probable advantage to the school district. Upon return from such leave, a teacher shall be placed at the same position on the salary schedule as he would have been had he taught in the district during such period.

3. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of serving as an officer or member of the staff of the Livonia Education Association, the Michigan Education Association or the National Education Association. Upon return from such leave, a teacher shall be placed at the same position on the salary schedule as he would have been had he taught in the district during such period.

4. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of study related to the teacher certification field or study to meet eligibility requirements for a certificate other than that held by the teacher.

5. Requests for professional leaves must be submitted by March 1 for the succeeding school year, or November 1 for the second semester of the year.

C. Personal Leave

1. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of campaigning for, or serving in, a public office.

2. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher for the purpose of maternity or adoption. The maternity leave shall commence not later than the sixth month of pregnancy, except that when this date falls within one school month of the end of a semester, the teacher may be permitted to complete the semester. Maternity leave requests must be filed not later than the end of the third month of pregnancy, and a doctor's certificate of pregnancy, stating the expected delivery date, must accompany the written request. The teacher shall be entitled to return to service with the Livonia Public Schools School District no sooner than six weeks following delivery, and only upon certification by a doctor that she is physically capable of performing the duties of teaching.

3. A leave of absence without pay shall be granted for one semester or one year, renewable upon application, to any tenure teacher who gives detailed information indicating family or personal hardship.

4. A teacher called during the school year for National Guard or Reserve duty necessary to the national security as shown by proper authority, shall be granted special leave for this purpose, and shall be compensated for the difference between the teaching pay and the pay received for the performance of such duty up to the end of the contract year. Such special leave shall not be deducted from either sick leave or personal business leave.

5. Requests for Personal Leave, except for maternity, must be requested as soon as the need for such a leave is known. The leave shall commence on a date determined by the Board when the request is received after March 1 for the succeeding school year, or November 1, for the second semester.

D. Military Leave

A military leave of absence without pay shall be granted to any regularly appointed teacher who shall be inducted, or shall, during a declared period of war or national emergency, enlist for military duty with any branch of the armed forces of the United States. Tenure status is not required.

A probationary teacher returning to employment from military service shall be regarded as retaining the period of probationary service achieved prior to his military service.

Teachers on military leave shall be given the benefit of any increments which would have been credited to them had they remained in active service with the school system, the Board reserving the right to give or to withhold increments or to deny extension of leave to those remaining in military service beyond the compulsory period. Sick leave allowance will be maintained but shall not accrue during military leave.

E. Return from Leave

Requests for reinstatement following a leave, for any reason, shall be filed in the Superintendent's office on or before December 1, for return at the beginning of the second semester, and on or before April 15, for the ensuing school year. Nothing contained herein shall obligate the Board to reinstate any teacher returning from leave if such a request for reinstatement is not filed on or before the above dates.

A teacher returning from an extended leave of absence will not be guaranteed his former assignment, but will be placed in a position for which he is certified and qualified, when such a vacancy exists. It is anticipated that a teacher would return from leave at the beginning of a semester, however, if a suitable vacancy arises at some other time during the year, he may be assigned to that vacancy.

A teacher returning from extended leave, for any reason, must present certification from a doctor that he is physically capable of performing the duties required in the position in which assignment is anticipated.

Sick leave allowance will be maintained but shall not accrue during any leave of absence with the exception of sabbatical and military leave.

Unless otherwise specified, all leaves of absence, for any reason, shall be for a period of one year. A leave may be extended for one additional year, and in unusual or extenuating circumstances a second additional year, if the request is received by April 15, for the ensuing school year, or by December 1, for the second semester.

F. Bereavement Leave

Three days leave with pay may be granted for death in the immediate family. The immediate family is defined as father, mother, brother, sister, wife, husband, child, or persons in a similar relationship to the family household. Such days shall neither be deducted from the ten annual days for Group I teachers nor the ten computational days for Group II teachers. Further, no deductions shall be made from the Illness and Disability Bank for such days.

Additional time for death in the immediate family due to extenuating circumstances may be taken from the ten annual days for Group I teachers or the ten computational days for Group II teachers established in Article X.

ARTICLE XIII

Academic Freedom

A. The parties seek to educate young people in the democratic tradition, to foster a recognition of individual freedom and social responsibility, and to inspire meaningful awareness of and respect for the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. It is recognized that these democratic values can best be transmitted in an atmosphere which is free from censorship and artificial restraints upon free inquiry and learning, and in which academic freedom for teacher and student is encouraged.

B. Academic freedom, appropriate to the level of the learner, shall be guaranteed to teachers in the study, investigation, presentation, and interpretation of facts and ideas concerning man, human society, the physical and biological world, and other branches of learning subject to accepted standards of professional responsibility set forth in the Code of Ethics of the Education Profession.

C. The Board recognizes that children must be free to learn and teachers free to teach broad areas of knowledge, including those considered controversial, but according to policies and regulations of the Board.

Whenever any group or individual brings charges against a teacher in writing concerning the teacher's freedom to teach, the Board, at the request of the teacher or the Association, shall provide, without charge to the teacher, the necessary information and support as mutually agreed upon, for the protection of the teacher's academic freedom.

ARTICLE XIV

Teacher Evaluation

A. The parties recognize that the evaluation of teachers is a continuous process of primary concern to both the Association and the Board. In order to establish the type of climate most conducive to professional growth through objective evaluation, the parties are presently involved in a re-examination of policies, practices, and procedures currently in effect regarding teacher evaluation. In light of the preceding, the parties agree that for the duration of this Agreement, the existing Teacher Tenure Evaluation Procedures will remain in full force and effect subject to the following:

1. The Board shall provide each teacher in the district with the most recent copy of Teacher Tenure Evaluation Procedures published by the Livonia Public Schools, Livonia, Michigan.

2. Classroom observations and other contacts shall be of sufficient time and frequency for both the Tenure Coach and the Administrator to insure a valid assessment of performance. Although what is sufficient may vary, a minimum of two (2) thirty minute observations under a normal classroom situation shall be required prior to a written formal evaluation.

   All monitoring or observation of the performance of a teacher shall be conducted openly and with the full knowledge of the teacher. The use of any mechanical device shall be prohibited unless expressly authorized by the teacher in writing.

3. Written, formal evaluations shall be made a minimum of twice a year during the probationary period and at least once a year thereafter until the teacher has been employed by the Board for five years.

4. The written evaluation shall indicate those areas where growth is needed, if any, and suggestions for improvements in such areas shall be listed. Either the teacher, the Administrator, or the Tenure Coach may ask for consultants or other resource personnel to provide the kind of assistance required for optimum growth. The Board shall make every reasonable effort to provide such assistance.

5. Following each formal evaluation by either the Tenure Coach or the Administrator, which shall include a conference with the teacher, and may include a self-evaluation by the teacher, a written report shall be completed by the individual conducting the evaluation. The teacher being evaluated shall sign all such completed reports. A copy of all completed reports shall be given to the teacher. The teacher may submit any additional comments to any written evaluation in the event he does not agree with the contents of the evaluation. All written formal evaluations are to be placed in the teacher's personnel file. A teacher shall be entitled to confer with the Superintendent or his designee regarding his evaluation upon request.

6. In the event that the Teacher Tenure Evaluation Procedures and/or the sections of this Article are not adhered to in the evaluation of the performance of a teacher, the teacher shall have recourse to the grievance procedure hereinafter set forth.

ARTICLE XV

Personnel Files

A. Each teacher shall have the right, upon request, to review the contents of his own personnel files maintained at the teacher's school or at the Administration Building. A representative of the Association may, at the teacher's request, accompany the teacher in this review. The review shall be made in the presence of the Administrator responsible for the safekeeping of these files.

Privileged information, such as confidential credentials and related personal reference normally sought at the time of employment are specifically exempted from review. The Administrator shall, in the presence of the teacher, remove these credentials and confidential reports from the file prior to a review of the file by the teacher.

Any complaints by a parent of a student, or any person, directed toward a teacher and deemed serious enough to become a matter of formal record, shall be promptly called to the teacher's attention. Teachers are entitled to know the identity or source of all such complaints.

B. No material derogatory to a teacher's conduct, service, character or personality shall be placed in either a teacher's building personnel file or in his personnel file in the Administration Building, unless the teacher has had an opportunity to read the material. The teacher shall acknowledge that he has read such material by affixing his signature on the actual copy to be filed, with the understanding that such signature merely signifies that he has read the material to be filed, and does not necessarily indicate agreement with its contents.

C. The teacher shall have the right to answer any material contained in the files, and his answer shall be attached to the file copy. In the event that charges made against a teacher are proven to be without substance, such teacher shall have the prerogative of deciding what shall be done with any records of such proceedings.

ARTICLE XVI

Professional Behavior

A. The Board recognizes that the Code of Ethics of the Education Profession is considered by the Association and its membership to define acceptable criteria of professional behavior. The Association shall accept responsibility to deal with ethical problems in accordance with the terms of such Code of Ethics of the Education Profession.

B. The Association recognizes that abuses of sick leave or other leaves, chronic absence or tardiness or willful deficiencies in professional performance by a teacher, reflect adversely upon the teaching profession and create undesirable conditions in the school system and may constitute failure on the part of the teacher to carry out his contractual responsibilities. Alleged breaches of discipline of the Code of Ethics of the Education Profession shall be promptly reported to the offending teacher and the Association. The Association will use its best efforts to correct breaches of professional behavior by any teacher and, in appropriate cases, may institute proceedings against the offending teacher.

C. The Board may adopt rules and regulations not in conflict with the terms and conditions of this agreement concerning the discipline of teachers, however, a teacher shall not be disciplined, reprimanded, suspended with or without pay, reduced in rank or compensation, demoted, discharged, nor deprived of any professional advantage without reasonable and just cause.

Any such discipline, reprimand, suspension or reduction in rank, compensation or advantage, including adverse evaluation of teaching performance asserted by the Board or representative thereof shall be subject to the professional grievance procedure hereinafter set forth. All information forming the basis for disciplinary action shall be made available to the teacher and the Association.

D. A teacher shall be entitled to have present a representative of the Association, if one is available when he is being reprimanded, warned or disciplined for any infraction of rules or delinquincy or professional performance. When a request for such representation is made, no action shall be taken with respect to the teacher until such representative of the Association is present.

ARTICLE XVII

Professional Improvement

A. The parties support the principle of continuous training of teachers, participation by teachers in professional organizations in the area of their specialization, leaves for work on advanced degrees or special studies, and participation in community educational projects.

B. At the request of the Association, or on the Board's initiative, arrangements may be made for: after-school courses, workshops, conferences, and programs designed to improve the quality of instruction. Compensation may be provided for such after school in-service training, according to Appendix B. Every effort will be made to obtain people of the highest qualification to participate as consultants or resource people in such activities. Except as provisions may be made by the Board as a condition of employment prior to the hiring of a teacher, attendance at such after school in-service training activities, whether initiated by the Association, the Board, or jointly, shall be voluntary on the part of the teacher.

C. In addition to time which may be expended outside the student school day for the study and improvement of the instructional program, additional time for such purposes shall be provided as follows:

1. In the elementary schools, a substitute time bank equivalent to a minimum of one day per classroom teacher per building will be made available to each building staff. Such time may be used to enable the principal or curriculum representative to work with teachers, to permit teacher groups to do intensive planning, or to permit teachers to engage in other improvement efforts as may be determined cooperatively by the principal and teaching staff of each building with the approval of the Director of Elementary Education.

2. In the secondary schools, one half day will be provided to each school staff for curriculum study and instructional planning on the second Thursday of October, November, January, February, March, and May. Use of this time shall be planned cooperatively by the administrators and teachers of each building; or, by agreement between the administrative staff and groups of teachers with common interests, it may be used for such activities by area or system-wide groups.

D. Specific areas of the curriculum to be studied shall be determined by the staff of each building for building centered curriculum studies, and by the appropriate system-wide committee or group for system-wide curriculum studies.

System-wide curriculum committees composed of at least five teachers and at least one administrative representative shall be created to study and make recommendations to the Board and/or Association regarding the instructional program. Such committees may be organized on a grade level basis or on a subject matter basis or both, and should be representative of as many schools as possible.

ARTICLE XVIII

Reductions in Personnel and Annexations and Consolidations of Districts

A. To the full extent permitted by law, this Agreement shall be binding upon the Board and its successor personnel and upon any school district into which or with which this district shall be merged or combined.

B. Should substantial and unforeseen changes in student population or other conditions make necessary a general reduction in the number of teachers employed by the Board, the Board will retain, as nearly as possible those tenure teachers having the longest service in the district in accordance with the Michigan Tenure of Teachers' Act. The Board will further use its best efforts to assist all teachers whose positions are terminated for reasons of necessary reductions in personnel due to annexations or consolidation to secure employment in other school districts upon terms and conditions as nearly comparable as possible to those contained herein.

ARTICLE XIX

Continuity of Operations

A. Both parties recognize the desirability of continuous and uninterrupted operation of the instructional program during the regular school year and the avoidance of disputes which threaten to interfere with such operations. The Association, accordingly, agrees that it will not, during the period of this Agreement, directly or indirectly engage in or assist in any strike, as defined by Section 1 of the Public Employment Relations Act.

B. The Board also agrees that it will not, during the period of this Agreement, directly or indirectly engage in or assist in any unfair labor practice as defined by Section 10 of the Public Employment Relations Act.

C. Nothing in this Article shall require the Board to keep schools open in the event of severe inclement weather or other Acts of God. The parties recognize that those inclement weather conditions which are judged severe enough to prohibit the safe operation of buses for the transportation of youngsters shall also be considered severe enough to jeopardize the life, limb, and safety of the district's teachers. In those instances when it is judged appropriate not to operate the district's buses because of severe inclement weather, the schools shall be closed and teachers shall not be required to report for duty. The Superintendent or his designee shall make every effort to announce such school closings one hour before the earliest teacher reporting time by notifying radio stations WWJ, WJR, CKLW, WXYZ, and the main switchboard.

ARTICLE XX

School Calendar

A. For the term of this Agreement, the school calendar shall be as set forth in Appendix D. There shall be no deviation from or change in the school calendar, except by mutual agreement of the Board and the Association.

ARTICLE XXI

Professional Compensation

A. The basic salaries of teachers covered by this agreement are set forth in Appendix A which is attached to and incorporated in this Agreement. Such salary schedule shall remain in effect during the term of this Agreement.

B. Teachers entering the system shall be given full credit for up to five years of outside teaching experience on the salary schedule as set forth in Appendix A. Additional years of credit for outside teaching experience may be recommended in the case of outstanding applicants for positions requiring unusual experience. Full credit shall be granted for all teaching experience in the Livonia Public Schools except for substitute teaching. Substitute teachers in the Livonia Public Schools may be credited in the same manner as contract teachers, however, no more than three year's credit may be granted for substitute teaching. One full semester, at least 90 days of teaching, shall be credited as one-half year on the salary schedule. Teachers allowed half-year credit shall be placed one-half way between the appropriate steps on the salary schedule. 135 days or more of teaching shall be credited as a full year on the salary schedule.

The Superintendent may recommend credit for other than public school or college teaching experience, if, in his opinion, it contributes to the qualification of the teacher for a particular assignment. This could include military service, Peace Corps, VISTA, and other job related experience which would be in the same field as the teaching area assigned and a direct relationship exists. Ordinarily this would be work which may be required for vocational certification. Any decision regarding related work experience shall be subject to review at the request of the Association or an individual teacher. However, the Superintendent's decision on related experience shall be final.

The credit which may be granted for other than public school or college teaching experience shall be no more than three years and the maximum credit allowed for both teaching and other experience shall be limited to five years unless additional years credit for total outside teaching and related experience has been recommended.

It is expected that beginning in 1969-70 the amount of credit allowable for outside teaching experience will be six years with the possibility of this being increased in subsequent years. This expected increase in 1969-70 and any further increases in subsequent years will be contingent upon the Board being able to do this without increasing the credit allowed to people employed prior to the time of the increase in allowable credit for outside experience.

C. For each semester hour of graduate work up to 20 semester hours taken beyond the Bachelor's degree the teacher will receive ten dollars. Credit shall be shown by an official transcript from a fully accredited college or university and shall be awarded in semester hours. All transcripts must be in the Superintendent's Office not later than October 31 in order to receive salary credit for the first semester or March 31 for the second semester. Degrees earned or other graduate work by members of the teaching staff must be in the field in which the teacher is teaching to be credited on the salary schedule unless a prior exception has been made by the Superintendent.

D. The salary schedule is based upon the regular school calendar as set forth in Appendix D and the normal teaching assignment as defined in this agreement. If a teacher shall teach more than the normal teaching load as set forth in Article V as a regular part of his assignment and be classified as a permanent substitute in such additional assignment, he will be compensated at 1 1/2 times his individual hourly rate. A permanent substitute is one who substitutes in the same assignment for two continuous school weeks or longer. If it is known that the assignment will be for two weeks or more when the teacher assumes this assignment, then permanent substitute status will begin immediately. In the event that a temporary substitute assignment over and above the normal teaching load as set forth in Article V becomes permanent, the permanent substitute rate shall begin immediately but shall not be retroactive. It is the responsibility of the building principal to notify the teacher and the personnel office immediately in such an instance.

E. A teacher's daily rate is to be determined by dividing his basic annual salary as set forth in Appendix A by 200 days. A teacher's hourly rate is to be determined by dividing his daily rate by 7.5. It is recognized that the numbers in this paragraph are for computational purposes only.

F. Teachers involved in extra-duty assignments and other activities which are recognized as calling for additional compensation are set forth in Appendix B of this agreement. All compensations shall be in accordance with the provisions of this agreement.

G. Teachers required in the course of their work to drive personal automobiles from one building to another shall receive a car allowance of ten cents per mile. The same allowance shall be given for use of personal cars for field trips or other approved business of the district when the teacher is required to use his personal car for such business. Mileage allowance is computed only after the person has reached his initial established work location for that day and specifically excludes traveling to and from such established work location.

H. Pay days shall be at the close of each two-week period during the school year. Employees working the school year only may elect the option of collecting the unpaid balance at the close of the regular school year provided that a written request for such payment has been made to the business office at least 30 days before the close of school. An employee on 26 pays who leaves during the year should not expect to receive the remaining portion of his pay until one pay period following his termination unless official notification of termination is submitted thirty days in advance and the request for complete payment made at that time. The employee will indicate in writing to the Superintendent of Schools his choice of method of payment before the effective date of the contract. If school is not in session on payday, the payroll office will prepare checks and deliver them to the buildings the last day school is in session.

I. When employees begin work after the opening of school in September, experience is determined by the amount of creditable year's experience the person would have been eligible for had they started work in September of that year.

J. There are some subject areas in which an Educational Specialist degree is not offered. If the Educational Specialist degree is offered in the subject area by the college where the teacher is doing graduate work, then no consideration shall be given to an "equivalent" of an Educational Specialist degree, unless such degree has been "by-passed" in order to receive a Doctor's degree. If the Educational Specialist degree is not offered, or if it has been by-passed as above, then the following shall be considered the equivalent of an Educational Specialist degree:

1. 30 graduate semester hours after completion of the Master's degree in the same field and in a planned program. The official transcript must be accompanied by a letter from the Dean of the Graduate School or the teacher's graduate advisor stating that in his judgment the work completed is equivalent to what is ordinarily required for an Educational Specialist degree at that institution.

2. 45 graduate semester hours after completion of the Master's degree in which at least 30 graduate semester hours are in the same subject area and identified as being appropriate to the teacher's field.

3. The Master of Social Work is considered the equivalent of an Educational Specialist degree for school social workers.

K. Occasionally other programs are taken by teachers which improve their competencies for teaching a technical or vocational subject but for which college credit is not offered. This would include apprentice training programs in the trades and other similar formal training programs. In such cases a combination of two years work and classroom experience shall be equated to one year of college and the teacher may be granted up to one additional degree equivalent on the salary schedule for such training according to the following:

Example:

B. A. ⟶ to M. A.

M. A. ⟶ to M. A. + 30

M. A. + 30 ⟶ to Ed. Spec.

Ed. Spec. ⟶ to Ph.D.

Any decision regarding additional training credited or to be credited on the salary schedule shall be subject to review at the request of the Association or an individual teacher, however, the Superintendent's decision on additional equivalent credit for training shall be final.

ARTICLE XXII

Retirement

A. The age at which retirement shall be considered automatic unless some specific action is taken by either the employee or the Board shall be 65. The Board of Education reserves the right to require retirement prior to age 65 when an employee's physical or mental health makes it impossible to meet the normal obligations of his regular assignment.

Teachers who will reach the retirement age of 65, and who desire to remain in the school system, will submit annually to the Board a written request for continuation of employment not later than March 1 of that year. The request for extension of contract may be granted on a one-year basis up to the age of 67, when recommended by the Superintendent and approved by the Board. Failure of the Board to give the teacher a written notification on a request for extension of contract prior to May 1 of that year shall constitute acceptance of the request to continue teaching. Failure of the teacher to request an extension prior to March 1, shall constitute sufficient reason for automatic retirement.

Teachers under 65 who intend to retire will submit to the Board a written notice of intention to retire at least sixty (60) calendar days prior to the date of retirement.

B. In appreciation for services to the school district, a terminal pay will be granted upon retirement or death. To qualify for terminal pay the teacher shall have been employed in the school district for at least ten (10) consecutive years, shall be holding a full-time teaching assignment to the Livonia Schools and shall be eligible for Michigan School Employees Retirement Fund benefits. In the event of extenuating circumstances the Board may, by special action, waive any or all of the preceding qualifications. If an employee qualifies for terminal pay he shall receive $100.00 per year for each year of full-time teaching service.

The Assistant Superintendent for Personnel shall check official school records and forward a final financial statement to the retiree. Terminal pay will be paid when the applicant shows evidence of eligibility for the Michigan School Employees Retirement Fund benefits. If applicable, full terminal payment will be paid to the beneficiary of the employee in case of death.

ARTICLE XXIII

Summer School, Adult Education, and Extended School Services Selection of Personnel

A. Both parties recognized that there is a wide variety of skills and competencies needed for teachers in teaching Adult Education, Summer School, Driver Education, Swimming, and other programs under the direction of the Department of Extended School Services.

Factors which must be considered in the selection of personnel for these programs would include teacher aptitude, unique qualifications, and competencies needed for these specific programs. Experience in particular areas, training to teach in these areas, tenure in Livonia, a method of rotation among qualified personnel, and seniority in the Livonia Public Schools are also factors to be considered.

It is agreed that a committee comprised of three appointees of the Board of Education and three appointees of the Livonia Education Association shall study and make recommendations to the Board of Education prior to February 1, 1969 regarding the criteria for the selection of personnel in this area. Such guidelines and criteria shall be adopted as soon as possible by the Board of Education, and shall become the criteria upon which the selections are based.

ARTICLE XXIV

Student and Intern Teaching Assignments

A. Supervisory teachers of record of student, associate or pre-intern teachers shall be fully certificated tenured teachers, teaching in their major area of preparation and possessing, whenever possible, a minimum of a Master's degree in academic preparation, who voluntarily accept the assignment and shall be known as cooperating teachers. Cooperating teachers, in so far as possible, shall have previously taken a university course in the basic principles of supervising student teachers or shall indicate a willingness to accept such an academic learning experience when offered locally on a tuition free basis.

B. The Board shall notify the Association of the amount of money received from the various universities placing student, associate, or pre-intern teachers in the district. Funds made available to the district by the placing universities shall be administered by a joint committee composed of representatives of the cooperating teachers, and representatives of the Board. The following areas, which will contribute to the improvement of the associate teacher program, shall be considered by the committee as possible uses for the funds: in-service training programs, recognition of cooperating teachers, released time, material and equipment and direct payment to the cooperating teacher.

C. In recognition of its responsibility to provide the best possible training programs and experiences for pre-teachers, the Association agrees to accept a maximum of ten (10) EIP interns during the 1968-69 school year, provided that strict adherence to the ratio established by the university of one (1) intern consultant for each five (5) EIP intern teachers is observed, and provided that no more than two (2) EIP intern teachers be placed in any elementary school building.

D. The Board and the Association agree to evaluate the EIP program at least ninety (90) days prior to the expiration of this Agreement.

ARTICLE XXV

Student Discipline and Teacher Protection

A. It is the aim of the Board of Education, Administration and instructional staff to promote through its policies and regulations the highest possible standard of conduct and an atmosphere for good instruction. Policies and regulations are in the Teacher Handbook, Board of Education Policy Book, and various building teacher and student handbooks. Early in the 1968-69 school year, the Board with the assistance of the Association, will prepare a source booklet incorporating the existing guidelines, making additions and revisions where necessary, and shall distribute a copy of this booklet to all teachers. It is earnestly desired to have high standards of conduct, behavior and school achievement. Development of good habits in citizenship and conduct as individuals, requires a consistent, calm atmosphere which will promote the individual and group learning process.

B. It is the responsibility of the principal and staff members to maintain discipline and a climate for good instruction in our schools. Consistent with the Code of Ethics, it is the teacher's responsibility to deal justly and considerately with each student. The superintendent and his administrative staff will support principals and teachers in all reasonable disciplinary measures in accordance with the policies and regulations referred to in Paragraph A of this Article.

C. After exhausting all avenues reasonably expected of a teacher in maintaining discipline in accordance with the policies and regulations referred to in Paragraph A of this Article a teacher may refer and/or send to an appropriate administrator a student who is causing disruptions and/or violating Board policies. The teacher and administrator shall communicate the necessary information regarding the problem including its disposition. Each school shall develop appropriate guidelines for teachers in the handling of discipline problems and providing for adequate communication between the teacher and the administrator. Suspension of a student from school may be imposed only by a principal or his designated representative.

D. A teacher may use such force as is necessary to protect himself from physical attack by a student, or other person, in pursuit of his employment or to prevent injury to another student. Any case of assault upon a teacher shall be promptly reported to the Board or its designated representative, in most cases the principal. Likewise, any time a teacher finds it necessary to use such force, he shall immediately report this to his immediate supervisor whether or not he considers this to be necessary to protect himself or a student. The Board will provide legal counsel to advise the teacher of his rights and obligations with respect to any such assault and shall promptly render all reasonable assistance to the teacher in connection with the handling of the incident with law enforcement and judicial authorities.

E. Time lost by a teacher in connection with any incident mentioned in this Article shall not be charged against the teacher as long as the teacher is held to be innocent. This provision is limited to 90 days and there must be competent medical verification that the teacher is unable to return to work.

F. It is agreed by the Board and the Association that a committee will be established to be composed of four members to be appointed by the Board and four members to be appointed by the Association. The purpose of this committee shall be to review existing discipline policies and procedures and to make recommendations to the Board regarding same.

ARTICLE XXVI

Professional Study Committee

There is hereby established a Professional Study Committee composed of not more than six (6) members selected by the Board and six (6) members selected by the Livonia Education Association.

The primary purpose of the Professional Study Committee shall be to investigate and review areas and problems related to the improvement of education for the students of the Livonia Public Schools, and for the improvement of understanding and relationships between teachers, administrators, and the Board.

Areas similar to the following are considered valid areas for study, but in no way are to be considered exclusive or complete: curriculum, communication, professional growth and in-service training, staffing patterns and class load and teacher-administrator-Board relationships. The parties agree that among the specific areas for study in 1968-69 shall be included: job descriptions of extra-duty assignments, development of student discipline procedures, supplemental salary schedule Appendix C including special education positions not presently covered, and selection of personnel for extended school services and summer school teaching. The Professional Study Committee may consider any problem or topic mutually agreed upon by both parties.

The Professional Study Committee is charged with:

1. Reviewing problems and areas agreed on by both parties of the Professional Study Committee

2. Setting priorities for dealing with these problems, and

3. Determining methods for studying these areas or problems and for implementing the recommendations from the studies.

The Committee may establish and/or recommend that the Board establish such sub-committee or other organizational structure necessary for adequate study of such problems.

The committee can request the use of existing administrative or association resources and personnel to carry out its work.

The Professional Study Committee is not to be considered the exclusive group to consider or deal with the areas it is considering. However, if the Professional Study Committee is considering an area in which action may take place, all significant recommendations for action to administrators or the Board should be communicated to the Professional Study Committee as soon as possible.

The Professional Study Committee shall advise, and make recommendations to, the respective parent groups in any area it is considering and work for the implementation of these recommendations.

Minutes shall be kept of the Professional Study Committee meetings and they shall be public and available upon request to anyone after approval by the Professional Study Committee. Minutes shall be sent to the Board of Education, administrative staff, and association leaders.

Progress reports shall be issued as the need develops. There shall also be a year-end report. Such reports shall be available, upon request, to all educators in the system, Board of Education members, administrative staff and the public.

The Board shall furnish for the committee:

1. Secretarial assistance
2. An adequate meeting place
3. Facilities for publishing and distributing minutes and reports
4. Upon request, subject to the approval of the Board or Superintendent, funds for released time, compensations for out-of-school work for the Professional Study Committee or its sub-committees, study workshops, resource personnel, or funds for other work or needs the Professional Study Committee may have.

ARTICLE XXVII

Professional Grievance Procedure

A. A claim by a teacher or the Association that there has been a violation, misinterpretation or misapplication of any provision of this Agreement or any rule, policy or regulation of the Board may be processed as a grievance as hereinafter provided.

B. Procedure — In the event that a teacher believes there is a basis for a grievance, he shall first discuss the alleged grievance with his building principal or immediate supervisor, either personally or accompanied by an Association Representative.

Step I

If, as a result of the informal discussion with the building principal, a grievance still exists, he may, as soon as possible, invoke, the formal grievance procedure on a form signed by the grievant and a representative of the Association, which forms shall be provided by the Board and shall be available from the Association Representative in each building. If the grievance involves more than one school building, or involves a central office administrator, it may be filed directly with the Board of Education through the Superintendent or his representative.

The principal shall indicate his disposition of the grievance in writing within three (3) school days, and shall furnish a copy thereof to the Association.

Step II

If the Association is not satisfied with the disposition of the grievance, or if no disposition has been made within three (3) school days of such meeting, the grievance shall be transmitted to the Association's Board of Reference for review. Within five (5) school days of receipt of the grievance, the Board of Reference shall decide whether or not there is a grievance. If the Board of Reference decides that no grievance exists, and so notifies the claimant, the teacher may continue to process his claim without Association support. If the Board of Reference decides there is a grievance, it shall immediately process the claim with the Board of Education, through the Superintendent or his representative. A meeting between a Board of Education representative(s) and the Association's Board of Reference may be requested by either party within the time limits established in this step. Within fifteen (15) school days, the Board of Education shall indicate its disposition of the grievance in writing, and shall furnish copies thereof to all parties involved.

Step III

If the Association is not satisfied with the disposition of the grievance by the Board of Education, or if no disposition has been rendered within the fifteen (15) days specified immediately above, the grievance shall be immediately transmitted to the State Labor Mediation Board for mediation, and subsequently, fact finding may be invoked if deemed necessary.

C. The time limits in this article shall be strictly observed, but may be extended by agreement of both parties. In the event a grievance is filed after May 15 of any year and strict adherence to the time limits may result in hardship to any party, the Board shall use its best efforts to process such grievance prior to the end of the school year, or as soon thereafter as possible.

D. If an individual teacher has a personal complaint which he desires to discuss with a supervisor, he is free to do so without recourse to the grievance procedure. However, no grievance shall be adjusted without prior notification to the Association and opportunity for an Association representative to be present, nor shall any adjustment of a grievance be inconsistent with the terms of this Agreement. In the administration of the grievance procedure, the interests of the teachers shall be the sole responsibility of the Association.

ARTICLE XXVIII

Negotiation Procedures

A. Representatives of the Board and the Association, including at least one (1) member of the respective bargaining teams, will reserve up to two hours for a meeting on the last school Tuesday of each month, or such other day as mutually agreed upon, for the purpose of reviewing the administration of the contract and to discuss concerns which may arise. These meetings are not intended to by-pass the grievance procedure. Each party will submit to the other on or before Wednesday prior to the meeting, an agenda covering what they wish to discuss. All meetings between the parties will be scheduled to take place during the regular school day unless otherwise mutually agreed.

Should such a meeting result in a mutually acceptable amendment to the Agreement then the amendment shall be subject to ratification by the Board and the Association. During the term of this Agreement neither party will be required to negotiate with respect to any such matter, whether or not covered by this agreement and whether or not within the knowledge or contemplation of either or both of the parties at the time they negotiated or signed this agreement.

B. Beginning not later than March 15, nor earlier than March 1 of the calendar year in which this agreement expires, the Association and the Board agree to negotiate over a successor agreement in accordance with the provisions set forth herein in a good faith effort to reach agreement concerning teacher salaries, hours, and other terms or conditions of employment. Any agreements so negotiated shall apply to all teachers and shall be reduced to writing and signed by the Board and the Association.

C. The parties mutually pledge that their representatives will have all necessary power and authority to make proposals, consider proposals, and make concessions in the course of negotiations.

ARTICLE XXIX

Miscellaneous Provisions

A. This Agreement shall constitute the full and complete commitments between both parties and may be altered, changed, added to, deleted from or modified only through the voluntary, mutual consent of the parties in written and signed amendments to this Agreement.

B. Any and all individual contracts between the Board and teachers shall be subject to and consistent with this Agreement. If any individual contract contains language inconsistent with the terms of this Agreement, this Agreement during its period in force shall be controlling.

C. This Agreement shall supersede any rules, regulations or practices of the Board which shall be contrary to, or inconsistent with, its terms. The provisions of this Agreement shall be incorporated into and be considered part of the established policies of the Board.

D. If any provision of this Agreement or any application of the Agreement to any employee or group of employees shall be found contrary to law, then such provision or application shall not be deemed valid and subsisting except to the extent permitted by law, but all other provisions or applications shall continue in full force and effect.

E. Copies of this Agreement, titled "Professional Agreement between the Livonia Public Schools School District and the Livonia Education Association, MEA-NEA", shall be printed at the mutual expense of both parties within thirty (30) days of the signing of this Agreement and at that time shall be available in the Board of Education Offices or at the teacher's building assignment if school is in session at such time.

ARTICLE XXX

Duration of Agreement

This Agreement shall be effective as of September____, 1968, and shall continue in effect until the 15th day of August, 1969. This Agreement shall not be extended orally, and it is expressly understood that it shall expire on the date indicated.

FACTS ABOUT FACT-FINDING

Robert R. Bickal*

It is best to avoid fact-finding, says PERB fact-finder Bickal, but if you have to resort to that stage, here are some tips which should prove helpful.

A board of education and its teachers share a considerable community of interest. The principal concern of both parties is to arrive at an agreement that will be the instrument for providing the best possible education for the children of the district and one which the patrons of the school district will support through their approval of the tax levy needed to finance it. Although in the heat of vigorous negotiations that community of interest may appear to be seriously diminished, it is well for both parties to remember that it does exist, although it may not always be politic for the board's representatives to invoke it.

My most important piece of advice regarding fact-finding as a means of concluding negotiations is to avoid it. Fact-finders—like lawyers, physicians, and undertakers—thrive on the misery of others; but like the practitioners of those more respectable professions, we would prefer that our prospective clients never needed our services.

If you can work out your own agreement without third party intervention, that is obviously ideal. However, if you run into problems, mediation is generally, I am persuaded, much more satisfactory than fact-finding. With mediation you resolve your own differences, with the mediator simply running interference for both parties. But with fact-finding, you turn your troubles over to someone else who—however able he may be and how much time he devotes to your case—will, at best, know considerably less about your situation than you do.

However, if you are going to be in a position to use the services of a mediator, both parties are under obligation to move the negotiations along rapidly enough so that, if problems develop, there is sufficient time to use mediation services before the proximity of the budget submission date mandates a fact-finding hearing and report.

I also think it a poor practice for either party artificially to push the negotiations into fact-finding in the hope that the fact-finder will present them with a better deal than they could get through direct negotiation. First, that is not bargaining in good faith; and second, the fact-finder may stab you in the back.

The Taylor Law requires that the mediation and fact-finding panel be made up of citizens "broadly representative of the public," and the approximately 160 individuals who comprise the present panel of the Public Employment Relations Board fulfill that mandate. Some are professional arbitrators who have had years of labor relations experience in the private sector. The others have a variety of backgrounds and qualifications, but presumably each has demonstrated some quality that suggests competence at pouring oil on troubled waters.

So far as the makeup of the panel is concerned, I want to emphasize one point in particular. The fact-finder appointed to help you resolve your impasse may have had little or no experience in the complexities and peculiarities of staff relations in the field of public education. And you must, therefore, keep in mind that public education employs a lexicon of jargon and a panoply of practices which have no counterpart in other areas of labor relations.

A typical teacher's salary schedule is a strange and mysterious thing to a person who has never seen one before, and when that schedule contains a variable index vertically and a fixed index horizontally, you have a device of wondrous complexity.

In many cases you may have to go to considerable lengths to explain what terms mean and why a particular issue is of major importance. A fact-finder can only make competent recommendations if he understands the issues. It is your job to see that he does.

Let me set the scene of a typical fact-finding procedure. The fact-finding session is set for 7:30 in the evening. The fact-finder has driven for two hours over unfamiliar roads; has gotten lost twice; has had trouble finding the school building; has tried three doors before finding the one that is unlocked and is now wandering through murky corridors looking for the meeting room. He is 20 minutes late and he probably has to go to the toilet. At this point he wonders if he wouldn't be better off selling encyclopedias door to door. Anything you can do to make him feel needed and wanted will pay great dividends in good will.

From this point on everyone operates in pretty much his own way, and all I can really relay to you are my own practices and the little I have heard about those of my colleagues.

My experience last spring in a number of public school cases persuaded me that the parties rarely had much of an idea of what a fact-finding hearing was or how to prepare for it. My principal purpose here is to give you some insight into how to get ready for fact-finding, if and when you are faced with it, and how to make effective presentations to the fact-finder. Some parts of my counsel may seem obvious and others trivial. But I will suggest nothing that has not at one time or another been neglected and nothing which, in my judgment, does not contribute to a competent report.

A fact-finding hearing is a relatively formal, quasi-judicial proceeding, although the degree of formality with which it is conducted will vary with the circumstances and the fact-finder. The hearing, incidentally, may be much longer than you anticipate. The longest hearing at which I have presided lasted 13 hours beginning at noon on Sunday and concluding at one the following morning.

Who should be present? Generally, when negotiations reach the point of fact-finding, everyone wants to get in the act. It is not unusual for the entire employees. negotiating committee, the entire board, the superintendent and one or more members of his staff and the board's attorney to be present. I have no particular objection to a large delegation, but each party should identify the individuals who are principally responsible for making the presentation. This does not mean that others cannot make points and raise questions, but if the hearing degenerates into a free-for-all, it will go on endlessly and may become hopelessly confused.

I don't mean to suggest that the entire presentation must be made by one representative from each party. But responsibilities should be clearly assigned in advance of the hearing.

Initially, I think the fact-finder generally likes to know something about the school district for which he is working. Therefore, it is, in my judgment, a good idea to have prepared a brief profile of the district covering such things as the pupil population; the number of school buildings; the number of teachers and other staff; the nature of the community which the district serves and so on.

The fact-finder will usually want a brief history of the negotiations up to the point at which he enters the picture—how long negotiations have been in progress; how many meetings have been held; whether mediation preceded fact-finding.

Although I am not sure all fact-finders would agree on this point, I personally feel it essential to know what items have already been agreed upon and are, therefore, not before the fact-finder. I am also interested in whether those agreements represent the formalization of past practice or whether they represent new concessions.

It is extremely helpful if the parties agree on what the issues are which are in dispute. Before any specific discussion, I insist that the issues to be presented in the hearing be identified, agreed upon by both parties, and stated in writing. If this can be accomplished before the fact-finder arrives, a great deal of time can be saved and haggling avoided.

I find it convenient to classify issues into three categories.

The first category is those issues with significant economic implications—salary, fringe benefits, class size, teaching load, etc.

Second is those issues that are essentially non-economic—teachers' role in policy formation, the length and frequency of teachers' meetings, grievance procedure, use of bulletin boards, and things of that kind.

Finally, there are issues involving negotiability. The term "conditions of employment" does not define very precisely what matters must be accepted by the board for negotiation and what matters remain the exclusive prerogative of the board. Therefore, there may be a dispute over whether the substance of a demand falls within the scope of matters on which the board is required to negotiate.

The fact-finder may wish to organize the hearing in such a way that all of the items in one category are dealt with before moving to those of another.

The issues in dispute are not always as easy to classify as the paragraph above would suggest. Employers are often adroit at finding financial implications and demands that would appear to be totally unrelated to dollars. And, by the same token, employees are quite capable of minimizing the economic implications of a demand in order to be able to include it in the non-economic column.

The question of negotiability causes considerable anxiety, particularly among employers, and it is an anxiety which cannot easily be allayed. There are no guidelines governing what must be negotiated and the variables which influence the matter are sufficiently complex so that, in my judgment, none can be drawn. In the first place, the negotiability of a particular issue may depend on past practice. Quite conceivably, for example, the policy governing teacher transfer may in one district be such that it is clearly negotiable. In the neighboring district past practice might well provide the board with a persuasive argument against negotiability. Also, the negotiability of an issue may depend in large part on the way in which the demand is stated.

The range of provisions which have appeared in negotiated agreements, though not infinite, is very long. Therefore, an employee organization can probably present as authority a clause from an existing contract that covers the matter around which a negotiability dispute revolves. Finally, it is important to keep in mind that negotiability is itself negotiable. That is to say that either party can trade off its position on a question of negotiability for something it considers a higher order of priority.

Anticipate the part of statistical information which the fact-finder will require. Have it prepared in understandable form and prepare enough copies for everyone involved in the hearing.

1. Operating budget, personnel, salaries and benefits.
2. Cost of economic items demanded and offered.
3. Cost of economic items already granted.
4. Gross budget increase represented by demands and offers.
5. Impact on true tax rate of demands and offers.
6. Impact of changes in state and formula on the districts' revenue.

It is most important to keep in mind that the fact-finder can develop his recommendations only on the basis of the information you present to him and the cogency and persuasiveness of the arguments you construct to defend your positions.

Generally, I would think the criteria on which the recommendations are based are:

1. Impact on the educational program.
2. Equity.
3. Practicality.
4. Comparative standards.
5. Future implications.
6. Ability to pay.
7. Compromise.

Let us examine each of these in a little more detail.

1. Impact on the Educational Program

If the fact-finder can be persuaded that the granting of a demand will result in an improvement in the educational program, he is likely to be justifiably impressed. If, on the other hand, it appears to him that the effect will be negative, he is likely to be unmoved. This factor applies both to economic and non-economic issues. For example, will the base salary offered by the board be adequate to recruit competent new teachers to fill in the classrooms? Or, will a change in the reporting time demanded by the teachers mean that the pupils will have less time to counsel with their instructors?

2. Equity

The factor of equity can be applied in a great number of situations. Example: A fact-finder is considering an impasse between the board and the school bus drivers. He is informed that the board has settled with the teachers at a salary increase averaging 15%. The board is offering the bus drivers a 5% increase. The fact-finder may push the board rather hard to justify the difference in the treatment of the two classes of employees.

Or: The board has agreed to grant high school teachers freedom from an administrative assignment for one semester of each school year. The elementary teachers ask equitable treatment through some relief during the course of the school day. Is their request justified?

3. Feasibility

Is a demand, however desirable, really practical? Example: In a large city district, the teachers demand that the maximum class size in the elementary schools be reduced from 33 to 25. They compute the cost of this demand in terms of the cost of organizing and staffing for 20% more elementary school classes than at present. The board points out that all of its existing classrooms are now in use, so that in order to implement the demand, it would have to build eight new school buildings before the opening of school in September. Is the demand, however desirable, feasible?

4. Comparative Standards

There is no question that your own school district is unique; there is none other exactly like it. On the other hand, it does have a good deal in common with other districts of comparable size in your geographic area. Therefore, your fact-finder is almost certainly going to be interested in salary schedules; policies and agreements in neighboring districts. It is very helpful if, in advance, the parties can agree on the accuracy and relevance of the comparative information they intend to present.

5. Future Implications

Once a provision is written into an agreement, it is very difficult to get it out. Therefore, the fact-finder must give some consideration to the long-range implications of his recommendations.

6. Ability to Pay

One of the great controversies among the professions in the field is whether ability to pay—which is not the same thing as willingness to pay—should be taken into consideration by the fact-finder. In my judgment this criterion is only a factor in New York State in those city school districts that operate under a constitutional tax limit which they cannot exceed. Here the question is, should the fact-finder recommend settlements which he is quite certain cannot be financed within the legal limits imposed on taxation. It depends.

7. Compromise

There is an old saying that an arbitrator is someone who has gone just far enough in school to be able to add two numbers together and divide by two. This really isn't altogether fair. But it is often the case that the fact-finder will find, on money questions, a home somewhere between the final demand of the employee organization and the final offer of the board.

However, the fact-finders have been known to recommend a salary schedule, for example, that is lower than that offered by the employer. There is some question as to whether this is ethical but it has been done.

In conclusion, there are some general points to remember:

1. The fact-finder is working for you. He is as eager as you are to find a resolution to your impasse. Help him to help you.
2. The competence of the fact-finder's report will vary inversely in relation to the number of issues with which he has to deal. If the number of issues are greater than he feels can be dealt with adequately, he may require the mediation of some issues before moving into the fact-finding procedure. The fact-finder may also refuse to make a recommendation on a particular issue. This reaction most frequently occurs when the issue is so localized that the fact-finder feels that it is impossible to make a judgment on it without more intimate knowledge of the district than the fact-finding procedure can possibly provide.
3. A fact-finder's report can help the passage of a budget.
4. Don't ask the fact-finder to make judgments or give opinions prior to the submission of his report.
5. Don't be too impatient about the submitting of the report. If time is pressing, he will do his best to get the report in your hands as soon as possible. But a good report takes time and he usually is occupied with matters other than your case.
6. If you have questions of clarification about the report, don't hesitate to call your fact-finder and ask. But on the other hand don't be offended if he doesn't respond. Some fact-finders feel that they should not deal with the parties after the report is submitted. Others are willing to review their reports with the parties.
7. Don't expect the fact-finder to intuit the merits of your position. His recommendations will almost certainly be profoundly influenced by the effectiveness and relevance of the presentations made on the issues in question.

GROUND RULES FOR EMPLOYEES REPRESENTATIVE ELECTION SPRINGFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION

1. Employees eligible to vote shall constitute the voting unit.

Those eligible to vote shall consist of all persons employed by and under contract for a full teaching year to the Springfield Board of Education and holding a teacher's certificate from the State of Ohio, except.

(a) The Superintendent, Assistant Superintendent, Director of Curriculum and Instruction, Director of Personnel, Supervisors, all Principals, and all Assistant Principals.

2. A list of the names and addresses of those meeting the eligibility requirements set forth in #1 in each building shall be made available by the Board of Education to both organizations not later than two weeks prior to the election date.

3. The polls shall be open from 8:00 A.M. and closed at 10:30 A.M. The polls shall remain open for the full time irrespective of whether all eligible voters have voted or not.

4. Voting shall take place in each building wherein eligible voters work or are assigned.

One polling place shall be established in each of the buildings. Persons regularly assigned to more than one building shall vote in the building to which they are assigned on election day and the names and addresses of such persons shall be sent to the proper school on election day. Any persons unassigned to a building or for whom the assignment has not been made in time to send the name to the building shall vote at the central election headquarters, where two polling booths shall be installed.

5. Voters must show positive identification (driver's license or similar official document) which shall be checked by the voting official. Voters shall sign the voting roster as an eligibility test.

6. Voters shall vote by secret ballot and in a place devoid of campaign material.

7. Any persons, on the voting roster, challenged by either of the observers shall be permitted to vote a challenged ballot. Such ballot shall be placed in a challenged vote envelope with the cause of challenge noted thereon. Validity of all challenges shall be determined by the election referee.

8. Any persons unable by reason of sickness or disability to come to the polls may request, in writing, supplying verification of the sickness or disability, to vote at home or hospital. The election referee or one A.A.A. election official together with an observer from each organization in the election shall then take a ballot to the person so requesting it. The ballot shall be handed to such person by the election official and then all persons shall retire at least 20-feet from the voter to insure that the voting is secret. The ballot shall be handled only by the election official.

9. No unauthorized persons shall be permitted within 50-feet of the polling places during the voting hours. "Authorized persons" are all American Arbitration Association election officials, observers for the parties and persons in the process of voting.

10. The ballots shall be printed listing the areas for voter choice horizontally as follows:

Springfield Education Association (OEA-NEA)	Springfield Federation of Teachers (OFT-AFT)	No Organization

Such listing shall be rotated on the ballots.

11. A sample copy of the official ballot shall be given to each organization for approval not less than two weeks before the election.

12. The winner of the election shall be the one receiving the highest number of votes. In the event of a tie, another election shall be held within ten (10) school days.

13. The sealed ballot boxes for each building shall be taken to the central election headquarters. Tabulation of the election shall be completed at a place designated by the A.A.A. with five observers from each of the competing parties present.

14. Only the over-all result including the vote count totals will be announced and that release will be made by the neutral third party from the central place where the votes are counted.

15. The election will be valid and final when the results are announced by the neutral third party. Such announcement shall follow rulings on any contested ballots.

16. The elected organization shall immediately become the sole and exclusive bargaining agent for the voting unit and such other certificated persons as shall request the elected organization to bargain for them.

17. The cost of the election shall be paid by the two competing organizations and the Board of Education; each contributing one-third.

18. These election ground rules shall be published by the A.A.A. and distributed to all certificated personnel no later than two weeks prior to the election.

19. After the election the minority group shall retain such rights as organization, meetings, mail, and distribution of newsletters.

20. Immediately following the election, the Board of Education will enter into negotiations with the elected organization and bona fidely bargain for a contract.

21. Classes shall not be interrupted and a teacher shall not be out of his classroom for campaign purposes while pupils are present in his class during the regular school day.

22. State and national representatives of the two organizations may visit the school buildings any time during the campaign so long as classes are not interrupted.

23. No posters or other campaign material may be displayed in school buildings except on bulletin boards and other areas as provided for the staff.

24. An election which has been conducted along the guidelines set forth in this presentation shall constitute a valid election.

25. The recognition gained by this election will commence with completion of the election and will continue for three years. At the end of three years, if 30% of the eligible voters petition for a new election, another election will be held. If no petitions are filed at the end of the three year period, the recognized organization will represent the teachers for another three years. Petitions for an election must be filed no sooner than 60-days nor later than 30-days prior to the election date set forth in these rules. The election requested by said petition will then occur the following September.

26. The Board of Education and administrative personnel shall not engage in campaigning for any party or position in the election, but shall remain entirely neutral.

27. Voting shall be by ballot marked by each voter.

28. The A.A.A. system and rules shall apply as to absentee voting.

29. State and national representatives and members of the voting unit are to be permitted to enter school buildings before and after school hours during the time preceding election as follows:

1. Classroom work and classes are not to be disturbed;
2. Meetings may be held in the buildings at convenient places including teachers' lounges;
3. Arrangements for meetings of more than six persons shall be made with the Principal or Assistant Principal or person having charge of such arrangements.
4. All meetings shall be orderly.

30. All procedural matters relating to the election shall be under A.A.A. rules and direction.

37. Membership or non-membership in an organization is not necessary for voting.

38. Observers shall wear identification provided by the A.A.A. indicating they are "observers." The observers for the two organizations shall be members of the voting unit.

39. A.A.A. representive(s) at the polling place(s) shall be properly identified.

40. The two teacher organizations shall provide the election judge with a list of observers and alternates at least five days before the election.

Description and Analysis

NEW YORK STIFFENS STRIKE PENALTIES

New York's Taylor Law has been amended to include stiffer penalties for strikes by public employees. The chief executive officer of the government involved (the superintendent or district principal in the case of school districts) will determine which employees were on strike, and appeals of this decision must be made to him. Any employee absent from work without permission during a strike will be presumed to have participated in the strike. Each striking employee will be placed on probation for one year, and he will lose two days' pay for each day he was on strike. In addition, he "may be subject to removal or other disciplinary action provided by law for misconduct."

Striking unions will lose dues deduction privileges "for such specified period of time as the board [Public Employment Relations Board] shall determine, or in the discretion of the board, for an indefinite period of time. . . ." Unions striking in defiance of a court injunction will be fined an amount limited only by the discretion of the court.

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES MAY SEEK RELIEF UNDER CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1871

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit ruled that public employees, discharged for union membership, have a right of action for damages and injunctive relief under Section 1 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. §1983, against the public official who discharged them. This decision is in accord with the ruling in McLaughlin v. Tilendis, 398 F. 2d 287 (7th Cir. 1968), (see Negotiation Research Digest, January 1969).

The complaint was brought by the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, LeRoy Gage and John Engleman against the City Commissioner of the City of North Platte, Nebraska. Gage and Engleman, employees of the Street Department, claimed that they were discharged solely because they joined the Union. They claimed relief under the Civil Rights Act on the grounds that their Constitutional rights to free association as guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments had been violated.

The District Court had dismissed the case, stating that plaintiffs had failed to allege facts constituting a claim under the Civil Rights Act. This decision was reversed by the Court of Appeals and the case was remanded to the District Court for trial on its merits.

NORTH CAROLINA ANTI-UNION LAW STRUCK DOWN

The U.S. District Court for the Western District of North Carolina, Charlotte Division, declared that Section 95-97 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, which prohibits public employees from joining labor unions, is unconstitutional and therefore void on its face as an abridgment of freedom of association protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States.

Section 95-98, which forbids collective bargaining agreements between units of government and labor unions was found to be a valid prerogative of the state. The Court stated, "There is nothing in the United States Constitution which entitles one to have a contract with another who does not want it." "The State is within the power reserved to it to refuse to enter into such agreements and so to declare by statute."

The case was brought by employees of the Charlotte Fire Department, with the International Association of Fire Fighters intervening.

Data and Statistics

NEGOTIATION AGREEMENTS: QUALIFICATIONS FOR PROFESSIONAL GROWTH AND IN-SERVICE TRAINING

Do collective negotiations lead to an emphasis on high salaries for teachers and a corresponding neglect of professional training? Research shows that two areas of joint concern, qualifications for professional growth and in-service training, which bear directly upon the quality of teaching within a given school system are now being negotiated by teachers and school boards. Many school systems, therefore, are negotiating provisions designed to ensure the upgrading of educational instruction in addition to negotiating purely monetary matters.

The NEA Research Division's survey of 2,225 negotiated agreements for the school year 1967-68 shows that 603 agreements are comprehensive. Of these 603 comprehensive agreements, 238 (39.5 percent) have provisions relative to qualifications for professional growth and/or in-service training. Of the 238 provisions, 103 are found in Michigan; 42 in Massachusetts; 29 in Wisconsin; 22 in Connecticut; 15 each in Illinois and New York; 4 in Rhode Island; 2 in Ohio; and 1 each in Colorado, Indiana, Montana, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Washington.

Table 1 shows the distribution of these provisions by state and the number of professional personnel in school systems with agreements containing these provisions.

a The total number of comprehensive agreements surveyed is 603. These 14 states have 99.5 percent of the total number of comprehensive agreements surveyed.

b All professional growth and in-service training provisions reported are in comprehensive agreements.

c 39.5 percent of the total number of comprehensive agreements (603) have professional growth and/or in-service training provisions.

Content of Provisions

Table 2 shows the content of the 238 professional growth and in-service training provisions. Each provision has been analyzed and its content categorized according to the requirements for professional growth or the method of achieving professional growth which has been negotiated. The total beside each heading indicates the number of agreements which contain each negotiated requirement or method. The number of agreements with each requirement or method and the number of provisions with each requirement or method are the same. For example, 34 of the 238 agreements have provisions listing travel as a possible method of meeting professional growth requirements. Thus 34 provisions deal at least in part with travel. The four major requirements or methods listed in the table are mutually exclusive. The subheadings under "specific requirements for, or methods of professional growth negotiated" are not mutually exclusive. Some provisions give several methods or requirements and may be counted in several categories.

Seven provisions are reprinted in this report: New London, Connecticut; Northampton, Massachusetts; Alpena, Michigan; Utica, Michigan; Patchogue-Medford, New York; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; and Janesville, Wisconsin. These seven provisions are a sample selected on the following bases: variation in approach; all-inclusiveness; clear presentation; state of school system.

To qualify as having a provision relative to professional growth and/or in-service training, an agreement has to have at least one of the following: a committee established to study qualifications for professional growth and/or in-service training, a statement that professional growth and/or in-service training is encouraged or is necessary, a requirement abolished, a specific method of attaining professional growth negotiated, or the specific requirements necessary to qualify for professional growth negotiated. Since the first three major items in column 1, Table 2, are self-explanatory, only the specific requirements for, or methods of professional growth negotiated need be analyzed.

University or College Courses

Table 2 shows that 134 provisions list the taking of college or university courses in connection with professional growth. Seventy-six provisions state that in order to advance vertically from one step to another within a given salary classification (e.g., BA, MA, MA+30 credits), a teacher has to earn a specific number of college credits within a given time. One provision indicates that college credit is a means of attaining professional growth and refers to a professional growth procedure already established by the school system. Fourteen provisions mention college credit only in relation to a horizontal movement on the salary schedule, for example, the requirements to change classification from the BA level to the MA level. The remaining 43 provisions merely mention that college credit is a means of attaining professional growth. All seven of the sample provisions in this article contain statements concerning college or university credit.

In-Service Training

One-hundred and thirty provisions list in-service training as a means of attaining professional growth. Six of these provisions indicate that in-service training can be used as a substitute for college or university credit. Twenty-five provisions refer to in-service training as workshops. Two of these 25 provisions state that teachers must attend such workshops. One other agreement states that the school board will attempt to get courses for in-service training. The remaining 98 provisions merely indicate that some form of in-service training for professional growth is available. The Janesville, New London, Patchogue-Medford, and Philadelphia provisions contain statements relative to in-service training.

Travel

Thirty-four agreements list travel as a means of attaining professional growth. Two provisions state that only teachers who have already received a master's degree can use travel to qualify for professional growth increments. Five provisions specifically give the credit equivalency of educational travel or state which professional growth increments can be earned by travel (one of these five also restricts travel to those teachers who have MA Degrees). The remaining 28 provisions give educational travel as one of the means of achieving professional growth. The Alpena, Utica, Janesville, Patchogue-Medford, and Northampton provisions deal with travel.

Service to Teaching Profession

Twenty-eight provisions indicate that service to the teaching profession will count toward professional growth. This category is defined most frequently as attendance at educational conferences and working for educational groups or organizations. One agreement indicates that reading professional journals, and three agreements indicate that membership in professional organizations are ways of showing professional growth. The Alpena, Janesville, Utica, New London, and Patchogue-Medford agreements provide examples for this category.

Evaluation of Teaching

In eighteen provisions, evaluation of teaching is a factor in professional growth. Two provisions indicate that exceptionally good teaching will be recognized. Two other agreements state that a double increment will be the reward for outstanding teaching. The other 14 provisions indicate that a teaching evaluation is one factor considered in evaluating a teacher's professional growth. The Northampton agreement gives an example.

Committee Work/Non-Teaching Duties

Sixteen agreements have provisions which stipulate that some form of committee work or non-teaching duties are professional growth activities. Fourteen mention committee work in such areas as curriculum development, textbook selection, educational experimentation, personnel policies, and instructional improvement. Of the two others, one mentions only student teacher supervision; the other mentions only lunch room duty. Of the fourteen which did list committee work, one also mentions student teacher supervision and four others also indicate that other activities for the betterment of the school may count toward professional growth but do not specify the nature of these activities. The sample provisions which list committee work and/or non-teaching duties as professional growth activities are Alpena, Utica, and Patchogue-Medford.

Writing, Research, Publication

Fourteen provisions state that a teacher can earn professional growth credit by writing or research which deals with education or with the teacher's subject area. This writing and research must also be of the same caliber as a book or thesis, or it must be published in a magazine or professional journal. The Alpena and Patchogue-Medford agreements provide examples.

Related Work Experience

Nine agreements state that work experience relative to teaching in general, or to the teacher's specialty or subject area will be considered for professional growth credit. None of these nine provisions specifies exactly what type of work experience is considered relevant.

The Alpena, Janesville, and Utica agreements provide examples.

Service to the Community

Seven agreements give community service as an acceptable growth activity. Community service is defined in these provisions as the holding of a political office, free community service, charity work, work with cultural organizations, and work with youth groups. See the Alpena agreement for an example.

Extracurricular Activities

Three provisions list supervision of student extracurricular activities as a method of obtaining professional growth credit. Only one states that this type of activity is absolutely necessary. See the Alpena Agreement.

School Visitation and Exchange Teaching

Three provisions state that visiting other schools and observing other teachers constitute professional growth activity. The Patchogue-Medford and New London agreements give examples. Two provisions indicate that exchange teaching can count for professional growth credit. See the Janesville provision.

Table 3 presents a graphic analysis of the content of the sample provisions for easy reference. In reproducing the sample provisions, some sections which did not deal at all with anything relative to professional growth activity have been deleted. All sections dealing directly or indirectly with professional growth activity, however, have been retained and appear in full. The "other" category in Table 3 itemizes sections of these provisions which bear indirectly upon professional growth activity. No comprehensive analysis was made of provisions which have an indirect effect on professional growth and which do not

PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT AND EDUCATIONAL IMPROVEMENT

A. Professional Growth

All employees shall be provided opportunities for the development of increased competence beyond that which they may attain through the performance of their assigned duties. In light of their impact upon the lives of students and in keeping with the breadth of experience and depth of training which they possess, opportunities for the professional staff shall be especially rich and varied. The Superintendent shall provide the staff with opportunities in areas such as the following: (1) Visits to other classrooms and other schools. (2) Conferences involving other personnel from the district, county, state, region, or nation. (3) Membership on committees drawing personnel from such sources. (4) Training in classes and workshops offered within the district. (5) Further training in institutions of higher learning at expense of teacher unless attendance is on a scholarship or fellowship basis.

B. The Board shall pay the reasonable expenses (including fees, meals, lodging and/or transportation) incurred by teachers who attend workshops, seminars, conferences, or other professional improvement sessions at the request and/or with the advance approval of their principal or immediate supervisor and the Superintendent of schools.

NORTHAMPTON SCHOOL DEPARTMENT, NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

F. Super-Maximum–Professional Increments

Four Professional increments of $100 each are available for professional study or its equivalent in travel.*

1. Hours of Study

Four semester hours of approved study with credit are required for one increment. Each four-hour credit must be earned by taking two courses. To receive credit for any professional work done, actual attendance at the required number of classes is necessary.

2. First Increment

The first increment must be earned through study.

3. Second, Third, Fourth Increment

The second, third, and fourth professional increment may be earned through study or its equivalent in travel.

4. Travel

Only two increments may be earned through travel. Four credits may be earned for domestic travel only when the trip consists of at least five consecutive weeks of travel and for foreign travel only when the trip covers at least four weeks of travel in foreign countries.

5. Approval

All courses and travel must be approved in advance by the superintendent of schools.

6. Time Limit on Courses

Only one $100 increment may be earned during any twelve-month period except through full-time study.

An excess of credits earned in any one year cannot be carried over to a succeeding year. For this purpose, the twelve-month period may be counted from July first or from September first. Credit obtained during the school year or during the summer may not be divided so as to apply in two different school years or for two different increments.

7. Time Limit on Increments

Once an increment is received for professional study, this increment remains as part of the teacher's salary as long as he is employed in the Northampton Public School system.

8. Professional Study

No teacher shall receive more than five annual increments in salary unless he presents evidence of approved professional study in his field of work equal to six college credits earned during each five year period. Travel and other factors worthy of recognition, such as courses in education will be evaluated by the Superintendent of Schools.

Withholding Increments

Any teacher whose work is judged unsatisfactory by the Superintendent of Schools, and the combined evaluation of the Elementary Supervisor, Head of Department, and the Principal in charge of his work shall have his salary increases withheld even though he may be on tenure. This is, provided that the teacher has been given written notice of the reasons for withholding said increase at least sixty days in advance of the awarding of contracts and provided that the teacher, when on tenure, if he so desired, had been granted a hearing before the School Committee.

III. PROFESSIONAL SALARY:

A. The purpose of the salary schedule is to secure and retain quality teaching staff, to encourage improvement of teachers while in service, to give credit for training and experience, and to stimulate the continuous growth of all teachers. It further provides a definite basis for determining budget requirements.

F. In order that each teacher may be correctly located on the new salary schedule, staff members must provide evidence of the hours they have earned past their BA/BS and MA/MS degrees. When this data has been provided, a new contract reflecting the change in status will be issued.

1. An up-to-date transcript of credits showing total number of hours earned from each institution attended is required. Thereafter it will only be necessary to present a credit slip which will be photostated and attached to the transcript of credits.

2. Payment for credits earned toward placement on the salary schedule will be retroactive thirty (30) days from receipt of transcript.

3. A grandfather clause shall be included on the 1967-68 salary schedule whereby a Permanent Certificate and/or a Life Certificate with a BA/BS degree is for a one (1) year period, ending 1 September 1968, equivalent to ten (10) semester hours. The next five (5) toward the total of fifteen (15) hours of the BA + 15 scale must be graduate credit. At the end of the 1967-68 school year a staff member holding a Permanent or a Life Certificate who has not earned five (5) additional hours of graduate credit will be frozen at the final step on the BA/BS scale.

4. To qualify for compensation under this schedule, it is required that such training be directly related to the instruction program.

5. A form has been developed establishing the procedure for evaluation of criteria for placement on the MA/MS + 30 point category, as follows:

Points	Area
1	Each semester hour of graduate credit. To qualify, credit should be directly related to the instructional program.
1	Each semester hour of undergraduate credit (maximum 5 hours). To qualify, credit should be directly related to the instructional program.

No more than ten (10) points may be counted other than academic credit toward the MA + 30 step of the salary schedule.

Points will be evaluated prior to September 30 and February 28 of each school year by a committee made up of the Superintendent (or his representative), the building principal, the Association's building representative, and a member of the Professional Committee. Application for point credit must be made within one year after said credit has been earned.

H. Advanced Training:

Teachers who earn graduate credit from an accredited institution will be given expense money amounting to fifteen (15) dollars per semester credit hour for courses taken on campus and ten (10) dollars per semester credit hour for courses taken off campus up to a maximum of six (6) semester hours. No more than four (4) of these credit hours may be earned during the regular school year. To qualify for reimbursement the teacher must obtain prior written consent from the building principal. PROGRAM FOR PROFESSIONAL GROWTH

JOINT STATEMENT OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE PATCHOGUE-MEDFORD PUBLIC SCHOOLS AND THE PATCHOGUE CLASSROOM TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

I. TO FACILITATE PARTICIPATION OF THE PROFESSIONAL STAFF OF UFSD #24 IN PROFESSIONAL GROWTH ACTIVITIES, THE BOARD OF EDUCATION AND THE ASSOCIATION SUGGEST THAT:

1. During each three-year period of service, each teacher enroll in and regularly attend two or more UFSD #24 sponsored or approved in-service training courses, graduate college or university courses or workshops, or some equivalent professional growth activity, such as curriculum development, a research project related to improvement of the educational system, preparation of articles and books in the educator's field, travel associated with classroom activities of the educator, etc. The Superintendent will consult with the Association periodically on the types of approvable activity to be included.

2. Each teacher limit his participation to no more than two organized in-service or university courses during the same Patchogue school semester.

3. Each teacher avail himself of the Board's intervisitation policy and arrange with the building principal to visit and observe one qualified teacher in this or another district for a full school day each year.

4. The Board of Education make every effort to hire only certifiable teachers; each teacher holding a provisional certificate during each year of employment prior to permanent certification will proceed to complete such courses as will lead to permanent certification within the time allowed by regulations of the Commissioner of Education.

5. PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC SCHOOLS, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ARTICLE V—PROFESSIONAL IMPROVEMENT

1. The Board shall negotiate with local area colleges for an extension of in-service training in cooperation with the colleges whereby such course work will be recognized for purposes of teacher certification and advanced degrees.

2. (a) A sum of $600,000 shall be appropriated for the summer of 1967 and a like sum for the summer of 1968 for teacher fellowships for study in accredited colleges and universities under the criteria hereinafter set forth. The intent is to provide a grant of a sum equal to 70% of summer school teachers' salary. However, since the summer school sessions at the various school levels are substantially different in length, it is believed equitable to establish a fixed sum to be paid each teacher participating in this program.

(b) To allocate these fellowships equitably, the Superintendent shall in February of each year determine the ratio of the total possible participants to the total number of appointed teachers. The number of participants to be allocated to each school shall be determined by applying the same ratio to all appointed teachers on the payroll for such school, except that where a fraction of one-half or more results, the allocation shall be increased to the next higher whole number. However, the total number of participants shall not exceed 800.

(c) Where applications for more than the number of participants allocated to the given school are received, they shall be approved in the order of seniority in the school system of those who apply within that school, except that in the summer of 1968, applicants who participated in the program during the summer of 1967 shall be placed in the order of their seniority in the school system at the end of the list of eligible applicants in their respective schools.

(d) The criteria for operation of this program shall be as follows:

1. Participants shall be teachers who have completed two years of satisfactory service in the state of Pennsylvania.

2. The applicant will not during the same summer be a participant in another program in which he will be compensated $200 or more in which he will receive an equivalent of such sum in room, board or tuition.

3. The applicant will take an equivalent of six semester hours during the summer in courses to be approved by the Superintendent.

4. Courses must be related to applicant's subject of appointment or current assignment. In the event the courses selected by an applicant are not approved, timely notification of such fact shall be given to the applicant who shall with reasonable promptness notify the Superintendent of his substitute course selection.

(e) If there are insufficient applications to fill the total number of possible participants allocated to a school or in the school system, the Superintendent will designate the remaining balance of teacher participants within his discretion. If a teacher who was selected for the program withdraws before June 25 or for any other reason becomes ineligible to participate, a replacement from other applicants in the same school shall be selected in accordance with the above criteria.

(f) Each participant shall be paid the sum of $750 as a fellowship grant for participating in this program. Such participant shall be paid on a bi-weekly basis.

(g) An applicant shall agree to remain in the school system as a teacher for 5 years after completing a summer as a participant in this program. In the event a participant fails to remain in the school system as a teacher for 5 years, except by reason of disability, he shall refund the fellowship grant paid to him.

(h) Before the beginning of the school year following the summer study program, the participant shall deliver to the Superintendent a final transcript from the college or university he attended evidencing the taking of the course or courses under this program.

(i) The Superintendent will inform the faculties in each school of the number of fellowships allocated to such school by March 1 of each year. A list of the names of the teachers to whom fellowships hereunder are granted shall be posted in each school at the same time as the summer school and summer playground 80% lists. (See Article XXV, Section 5.)

(j) The applications, on forms to be furnished by the Superintendent, shall be submitted not later than March 15 of each year by each teacher desiring to participate in the program.

JANESVILLE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, JANESVILLE, WISC.

ARTICLE XI. PROFESSIONAL IMPROVEMENT REQUIREMENTS

Section 1. Teachers shall comply with the following professional growth requirements:

(a) Teachers holding a Bachelors Degree shall be required to complete 6 semester hours of approved study in a recognized college or university summer school program for each 4 year interval after receiving such degree. Updating of professional growth shall be completed within 4 years after completion of the preceding 4 year requirement.

(b) Teachers holding a Masters Degree shall be required to complete 6 semester hours of approved study in a recognized college or university summer school program for each 5 year interval after receiving such degree. Updating of professional growth shall be completed within 5 years after completion of the preceding 5 year requirement.

(c) Teachers who do not have a Bachelors Degree are required to make continuous advancement until a degree is obtained. The completion of 6 semester hours of study in a recognized college or university summer school program shall be required during each calendar year.

Section 2. During any four year period, professional staff members shall be reimbursed in an amount up to $200 for approved work toward a higher degree in a recognized summer school for only recognized semester credit hours. Payments shall be paid only for completed semester credit hours and shall be paid according to the following schedule:

Completed Semester Hours	Amount of Reimbursement
4	135

Payments of $100 or more shall be made in two equal installments, in October and February following completion of the credit hours. In order to be entitled to such payments, the staff member must be an employee of the school system at the time the payment is to be made.

Section 3. The Board may permit the following to be used to satisfy the foregoing summer school requirements:

(A) Equivalent credits for completed courses of study in a recognized Extension Division, or by attending Saturday or evening classes in a recognized college or university. No reimbursement shall be paid for such studies.

(B) Eight professional growth equivalency credits by:

a. In-service credits for regular school year term workshops. These may consist of such things as math workshops, science workshops, guidance workshops, mental health workshops, etc. One professional growth credit may be permitted for each 16 hours that a workshop is in session. No reimbursement shall be paid for such studies.

b. In-service credit granted for workshops conducted by the Board of Education during summer vacation time. Two professional growth credits may be granted for each week that a workshop is in session. A week's session is defined as six (6) hours daily for five (5) days a week. Compensation is granted in accordance with the Board of Education specifications for that year's workshop.

(C) Credit granted for service on state committees and other unusual services. Employment experiences which may enrich the individual as a teacher in the judgment of the Board of Education, are included. No reimbursement shall be paid for such services. Conditions for granting credit are as follows:

a. Applications for such credit must be made to the Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Instruction immediately following such experience.

b. The application must be outlined in such form as may be required by the Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Instruction so that evaluation of such a request may be made.

(D) Exchange Teacher Policy. In case any teacher employed by the Janesville Public Schools serves overseas for one school year as a result of being accepted in the Exchange Teacher Program, he or she may receive full professional growth for one full professional growth period of four or five years as the case may be. This must meet the approval of the Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Instruction.

(E) A combination of three credit hours from a recognized college or university, plus four alternative professional growth credits may satisfy the summer school requirement for a four year period.

(F) Once every 12 years a teacher may satisfy the summer school requirement by meeting the following travel requirements:

a. One credit will be allowed for each week of travel and eight credits will satisfy the summer school requirement. Travel may be one eight-weeks trip, one six-weeks trip plus one two-weeks trip or two four-week trips. One week trips may not be used to satisfy this requirement.

b. The following procedures shall apply to travel which shall satisfy the summer school requirement.

(1) By May 1 of the year in which the teacher intends to travel, an outline of the proposed trip(s) must be presented to the Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Instruction who will in turn give it to the Chairman of the J.E.A. Travel Committee. This outline should include (a) approximate number of miles to be traveled, (b) map of the intended trip, (c) places or things to be seen, (d) duration of the trip, (e) the value of the trip to the job the teacher is performing.

(2) By May 15, the J.E.A. Travel Committee will pass judgment as to whether or not this trip has merit enough to be sanctioned. Should the possibility of a trip arise toward the close of school or during the summer, the same required outline should be left with the Assistant Superintendent In Charge of Instruction or with his Secretary. The Board of Education shall make the final determination as to whether credit for the trip will be allowed.

(3) A complete summary of the trip must be submitted after the trip (in booklet form, including pictures, etc.) following the outline submitted. It is desirable that a travelog of the trip be given before a group or groups. The deadline for filing the summary of the trip with the Assistant Superintendent In Charge of Instruction is November 15 following the summer trip.

(4) After the written report has been evaluated by the J.E.A. Travel Committee, it will be placed on file in the office of the Assistant Superintendent In Charge of Instruction until the end of the school year.

(5) If a teacher can obtain semester credit hours for summer travel from a recognized college or university, he shall be reimbursed for such credits according to the schedule set forth in Section 2 above. Otherwise, there shall be no reimbursement.

(6) A combination of one four-week trip which qualifies for credit and three semester hours or four professional growth credits will satisfy summer school requirements.

Section 4. General Procedures

(a) In all instances, approval must be received from the Assistant Superintendent In Charge of Instruction prior to enrollment in a course (either at summer school or extension work), or prior to enrollment in workshops or prior to a trip. Special permission must be received from the Assistant Superintendent In Charge of Instruction prior to enrollment in a course which is not a requirement for a degree or which does not pertain to the teachers subject field.

(b) An official transcript of credits is to be on file in the office of the Superintendent of Schools before summer school expense will be paid and before advancement on salary schedule will be effected.

2. Public employers are hereby empowered to enter into written agreements with recognized or certified employee organizations setting forth procedures to be invoked in the event of disputes which reach an impasse in the course of collective negotiations. Such agreements may include the undertaking by each party to submit unresolved issues to impartial arbitration. In the absence or upon the failure of such procedures, public employers and employee organizations may request the board to render assistance as provided in this section, or the board may render such assistance on its own motion, as provided in subdivision three of this section.

3. On request of either party or upon its own motion, as provided in subdivision two of this section, and in the event the board determines that an impasse exists in collective negotiations between such employee organization and a public employer as to the conditions of employment of public employees, the board shall render assistance as follows:

(f) If the board determines that an employee organization has violated the provisions of subdivision one of this section, the board shall order forfeiture of the rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this chapter, for a specified period of time, as the board shall determine, but in no event to exceed eighteen months; provided, however, that where a fine imposed on an employee organization pursuant to subdivision two of section seven hundred fifty-one of the judiciary law remains wholly or partly unpaid, after the exhaustion of the cash and securities of the employee organization, the board shall direct that, notwithstanding such forfeiture, such membership dues deduction shall be continued to the extent necessary to pay such fine and such public employer shall transmit such moneys to the court.

(g) An employee organization whose rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this chapter have been ordered forfeited pursuant to this section may be granted such rights after the termination of such forfeiture only after complying with the provisions of clause (b) of subdivision three of section two hundred seven of this article.

4. Orders of the board made pursuant to this article (including, but not limited to, orders made pursuant to subdivision three of this section) shall be (a) reviewable under article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, and (b) enforceable, upon petition of such board, by the supreme court, which shall have jurisdiction of the proceeding and the power to grant such temporary relief or affirmative or restraining orders as it deems just and proper.

3. Application. In applying this section, fundamental distinctions between private and public employment shall be recognized, and no body of federal or state law applicable wholly or in part to private employment, shall be regarded as binding or controlling precedent.

§210. Prohibition of strikes. 1. No public employee or employee organization shall engage in a strike, and no public employee or employee organization shall cause, instigate, encourage, or condone a strike.

2. Violations and penalties; presumption; prohibition against consent to strike; determination; notice; probation; payroll deductions; objections; and restoration. (a) Violations and penalties. A public employee shall violate this subdivision by engaging in a strike or violating paragraph (c) of this subdivision and shall be liable as provided in this subdivision pursuant to the procedures contained herein. In addition, any public employee who violates subdivision one of this section may be subject to removal or other disciplinary action provided by law for misconduct.

(b) Presumption. For purposes of this subdivision an employee who is absent from work without permission, or who abstains wholly or in part from the full performance of his duties in his normal manner without permission, on the date or dates when a strike occurs, shall be presumed to have engaged in such strike on such date or dates.

(c) Prohibition against consent to strike. No person exercising on behalf of any public employer any authority, supervision or direction over any public employee shall have the power to authorize, approve, condone or consent to a strike, or the engaging in a strike, by one or more public employees, and such person shall not authorize, approve, condone or consent to such strike or engagement.

(d) Determination. In the event that it appears that a violation of this subdivision may have occured, the chief executive officer of the government involved shall, on the basis of such investigation and affidavits as he may deem appropriate, determine whether or not such violation has occurred and the date or dates of such violation. If the chief executive officer determines that such violation has occurred, he shall further determine, on the basis of such further investigation and affidavits as he may deem appropriate, the names of employees who committed such violation and the date or dates thereof. Such determination shall not be deemed to be final until the completion of the procedures provided for in this subdivision.

(e) Notice. The chief executive officer shall forthwith notify each employee that he has been found to have committed such violation and the date or dates thereof; he shall also notify the chief fiscal officer of the names of all such employees and of the total number of days, or part thereof, on which it has been determined that such violation occurred. Notice to each employee shall be by personal service or by certified mail to his last address filed by him with his employer.

(f) Probation. Notwithstanding any inconsistent provision of law, any public employee who has been determined to have violated this subdivision shall be on probation for a term of one year following such determination during which period he shall serve without tenure.

(g) Payroll deductions. Not earlier than thirty days nor later than ninety days following the date of such determination, the chief fiscal officer of the government involved shall deduct from the compensation of each such public employee an amount equal to twice his daily rate of pay for each day or part thereof that it was determined that he had violated this subdivision; such rate of pay to be computed as of the time of such violation. In computing such deduction, credit shall be allowed for amounts already withheld from such employee's compensation on account of his absence from work or other withholding of services on such day or days.

(h) Objections and restoration. Any employee determined to have violated this subdivision may object to such determination by filing with the chief executive officer, (within twenty days of the date on which notice was served or mailed to him pursuant to paragraph (e) of this subdivision) his sworn affidavit, supported by available documentary proof, containing a short and plain statement of the facts upon which he relies to show that such determination was incorrect. Such affidavit shall be subject to the penalties of perjury. If the chief executive officer shall determine that the affidavit and supporting proof establishes that the employee did not violate this subdivision, he shall sustain the objection. If the chief executive officer shall determine that the affidavit and supporting proof fails to establish that the employee did not violate this subdivision, he shall dismiss the objection and so notify the employee. If the chief executive officer shall determine that the affidavit and supporting proof raises a question of fact which, if resolved in favor of the employee, would establish that the employee did not violate this subdivision, he shall appoint a hearing officer to determine whether in fact the employee did violate this subdivision after a hearing at which such employee shall bear the burden of proof. If the hearing officer shall determine that the employee failed to establish that he did not violate this subdivision, the chief executive officer shall so notify the employee. If the chief executive officer sustains an objection or the hearing officer determines on a preponderance of the evidence that such employee did not violate this subdivision, the chief executive officer shall forthwith restore to the employee the tenure suspended pursuant to paragraph (f) of this subdivision, and notify the chief fiscal officer who shall thereupon cease all further deductions and refund any deductions previously made pursuant to this subdivision. The determinations provided in this paragraph shall be reviewable pursuant to article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules.

3. (a) An employee organization which is determined by the board to have violated the provisions of subdivision one of this section shall, in accordance with the provisions of this section, lose the rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this chapter.

(b) In the event that it appears that a violation of subdivision one of this section may have occurred, it shall be the duty of the chief executive officer of the public employer involved (i) forthwith to so notify the board and the chief legal officer of the government involved, and (ii) to provide the board and such chief legal officer with such facilities, assistance and data as will enable the board and such chief legal officer to carry out their duties under this section.

(c) In the event that it appears that a violation of subdivision one of this section may have occurred, the chief legal officer of the government involved, or the board on its own motion, shall forthwith institute proceedings before the board to determine whether such employee organization has violated the provisions of subdivision one of this section.

(d) Proceedings against an employee organization under this section shall be commenced by service upon it of a written notice, together with a copy of the charges. A copy of such notice and charges shall also be served, for their information, upon the appropriate government officials who recognize such employee organization and grant to it the rights accompanying such recognition. The employee organization shall have eight days within which to serve its written answer to such charges. The board's hearing shall be held promptly thereafter and at such hearing, the parties shall be permitted to be represented by counsel and to summon witnesses in their behalf. Compliance with the technical rules of evidence shall not be required.

(e) In determining whether an employee organization has violated subdivision one of this section, the board shall consider (i) whether the employee organization called the strike or tried to prevent it and (ii) whether the employee organization made or was making good faith efforts to terminate the strike.

(f) If the board determines that an employee organization has violated the provisions of subdivision one of this section, the board shall order forfeiture of the rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this chapter, for such specified period of time as the board shall determine, or, in the discretion of the board, for an indefinite period of time subject to restoration upon application, with notice to all interested parties, supported by proof of good faith compliance with the requirements of subdivision one of this section since the date of such violation, such proof to include, for example, the successful negotiation, without a violation of subdivision one of this section, of a contract covering the employees in the unit affected by such violation; provided, however, that where a fine imposed on an employee organization pursuant to subdivision two of section seven hundred fifty-one of the judiciary law remains wholly or partly unpaid, after the exhaustion of the cash and securities of the employee organization, the board shall direct that, notwithstanding such forfeiture, such membership dues deduction shall be continued to the extent necessary to pay such fine and such public employer shall transmit such moneys to the court. In fixing the duration of the forfeiture, the board shall consider all the relevant facts and circumstances, including but not limited to: (i) the extent of any wilful defiance of subdivision one of this section (ii) the impact of the strike on the public health, safety, and welfare of the community and (iii) the financial resources of the employee organization; and the board may consider (i) the refusal of the employee organization or the appropriate public employer or the representative thereof, to submit to the mediation and fact-finding procedures provided in section two hundred nine and (ii) whether, if so alleged by the employee organization, the appropriate public employer or its representatives engaged in such acts of extreme provocation as to detract from the responsibility of the employee organization for the strike. In determining the financial resources of the employee organization, the board shall consider both the income and the assets of such employee organization. In the event membership dues are collected by the public employer as provided in paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this chapter, the books and records of such public employer shall be prima facie evidence of the amount so collected.

(g) An employee organization whose rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of this article have been ordered forfeited pursuant to this section may be granted such rights after the termination of such forfeiture only after complying with the provisions of clause (b) of subdivision three of section two hundred seven of this article.

(h) No compensation shall be paid by a public employer to a public employee with respect to any day or part thereof when such employee is engaged in a strike against such employer. The chief fiscal officer of the government involved shall withhold such compensation upon receipt of the notice provided by paragraph (e) of subdivision two of section two hundred ten; notwithstanding the failure to have received such notice, no public employee or officer having knowledge that such employee has so engaged in such a strike shall deliver or cause to be delivered to such employee any cash, check or payment which in whole or in part represents such compensation.

4. Orders of the board made pursuant to this article (including, but not limited to, orders made pursuant to subdivision three of this section) shall be (a) reviewable under article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules, and (b) enforceable, upon petition of such board, by the supreme court, which shall have jurisdiction of the proceeding and the power to grant such temporary relief or affirmative or restraining orders as it deems just and proper.

The failure to perform the duties required by subdivisions two and three, of this section and by section two hundred eleven of this chapter shall be reviewable in a proceeding under article seventy-eight of the civil practice law and rules by any taxpayer, as defined in section one hundred two of this chapter. Any such taxpayer shall also have standing to institute any action described in subdivisions one and two of section one hundred two of this chapter.

5. Within sixty days of the termination of a strike, the chief executive officer of the government involved shall prepare and make public a report in writing, which shall contain the following information: (a) the circumstances surrounding the commencement of the strike, (b) the efforts used to terminate the strike, (c) the names of those public employees whom the public officer or body had reason to believe were responsible for causing, instigating or encouraging the strike and (d) related to the varying degrees of individual responsibility, the sanctions imposed or proceedings pending against each such individual public employee.

§211. Applications for injunctive relief. Notwithstanding the provisions of section eight hundred seven of the labor law, where it appears that public employees or an employee organization threaten or are about to do, or are doing, an act in violation of section two hundred ten of this article, the chief executive officer of the government involved shall (a) forthwith notify the chief legal office of the government involved, and (b) provide such chief legal office with such facilities, assistance and data as will enable the chief legal officer to carry out his duties under this section, and, notwithstanding the failure or refusal of the chief executive officer to act as aforesaid, the chief legal officer of the government involved shall forthwith apply to the supreme court for an injunction against such violation. If an order of the court enjoining or restraining such violation does not receive compliance, such chief legal officer shall forthwith apply to the supreme court to punish such violation under section seven hundred fifty of the judiciary law.

§212. Local government procedures. 1. This article, except sections two hundred one, two hundred two, two hundred three, two hundred four, paragraph d of subdivision five of section two hundred five, paragraph b of subdivision three of section two hundred seven, section two hundred eight, section two hundred nine-a, subdivisions one and two of section two hundred ten, and section two hundred eleven, shall be inapplicable to any government (other than the state or a state public authority) which, acting through its legislative body, has adopted by local law, ordinance or resolution, its own provisions and procedures which have been submitted to the board by such government and as to which there is in effect a determination by the board that such provisions and procedures and the continuing implementation thereof are substantially equivalent to the provisions and procedures set forth in this article with respect to the state. 2. With respect to the city of New York, such provisions and procedures need not be related to budget submission dates; and with respect to provisions and procedures adopted by local law by the city of New York no such submission to or determination by the board shall be required, but such provisions and procedures shall be of full force and effect unless and until such provisions and procedures, or the continuing implementation thereof, are found by a court of competent jurisdiction, in an action brought by the board in the county of New York for a declaratory judgment, not to be substantially equivalent to the provisions and procedures set forth in this article.

In order to promote harmonious and cooperative relationships between the city of New York and its employees, and thereby to protect the public from the interruption of vital public services, it is necessary that the city of New York adopt provisions and procedures which would effectuate the fundamental principles of the public employees fair employment act of nineteen hundred sixty-seven. Consequently, on or before August one, nineteen hundred sixty-nine the mayor of the city of New York shall submit to the temporary president of the senate, the speaker of the assembly and the public employment relations board a report of the steps taken and a plan designed to bring such practices of the city of New York into substantial equivalence with such state law. This report and plan shall, among other things, particularly deal with making effective the jurisdiction of the office of collective bargaining, the need for a specified final step in the impasse procedures, and the relation of negotiations and impasse procedures to budget submission dates. On or before December one, nineteen hundred sixty-nine the public employment relations board shall submit to the temporary president of the senate and speaker of the assembly its comments and recommendations regarding such report and plan. If the report of the mayor is not received as aforesaid, the special provisions relating to the city of New York contained in paragraph two of section two hundred twelve of the civil service law, shall cease on August one, nineteen hundred sixty-nine and such paragraph shall be deemed null and void. (McKinney's Consolidated Laws of New York Annotated, Civil Service Law, Secs. 200-212.)

Section seven hundred fifty-one of the judiciary law was also amended to read as follows:

§751. Punishment for criminal contempts. [punishment] 1. Except as provided in subdivision (2), punishment for a contempt, specified in section seven hundred and fifty, may be by fine, not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars, or by imprisonment, not exceeding thirty days, in the jail of the county where the court is sitting, or both, in the discretion of the court. Where a person is committed to jail, for the nonpayment of such a fine, he must be discharged at the expiration of thirty days; but where he is also committed for a definite time, the thirty days must be computed from the expiration of the definite time.

Such a contempt, committed in the immediate view and presence of the court, may be punished summarily; when not so committed, the party charged must be notified of the accusation, and have a reasonable time to make a defense.

Subdivision two of section seven hundred fifty-one of the judiciary law, as added by chapter three hundred ninety-two of the laws of nineteen hundred sixty-seven, is hereby amended to read as follows:

2. (a) Where an employee organization, as defined in section two hundred one of the civil service law, wilfully disobeys a lawful mandate of a court of record, or wilfully offers resistance to such lawful mandate, in a case involving or growing out of a strike in violation of subdivision one of section two hundred ten of the civil service law, the punishment for each day that such contempt persists may be by a fine fixed in the discretion of the court. In the case of a government exempt from certain provisions of article fourteen of the civil service law, pursuant to section two hundred twelve of such law, the court may, as an additional punishment for such contempt, order forfeiture of the rights granted pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of such law, for such specified period of time, as the court shall determine, or, in the discretion of the court, for an indefinite period of time subject to restoration upon application, with notice to all interested parties, supported by proof of good faith compliance with the requirements of subdivision one of this section since the date of such violation, such proof to include, for example, the successful negotiation, without a violation of subdivision one of this section, of a contract covering the employees in the unit affected by such violation; provided, however, that where a fine imposed pursuant to this subdivision remains wholly or partly unpaid, after the exhaustion of the cash and securities of the employee organization, such forfeiture shall be suspended to the extent necessary for the unpaid portion of such fine to be accumulated by the public employer and transmitted to the court. In fixing the amount of the fine and/or duration of the forfeiture, the court shall consider all the facts and circumstances directly related to the contempt, including, but not limited to: (i) the extent of the wilful defiance of or a resistance to the court's mandate (ii) the impact of the strike on the public health, safety and welfare of the community and (iii) the ability of the employee organization to pay the fine imposed; and the court may consider (i) the refusal of the employee organization or the appropriate public employer, as defined in section two hundred one of the civil service law, or the representatives thereof, to submit to the mediation and fact-finding procedures provided in section two hundred nine of the civil service law and (ii) whether, if so alleged by the employee organization, the appropriate public employer or its representatives engaged in such acts of extreme provocation as to detract from the responsibility of the employee organization for the strike. In determining the ability of the employee organization to pay the fine imposed, the court shall consider both the income and the assets of such employee organization.

(b) In the event membership dues are collected by the public employer as provided in paragraph (b) of section two hundred eight of the civil service law, the books and records of such public employer shall be prima facie evidence of the amount so collected.

(c) (i) An employee organization appealing an adjudication and fine for criminal contempt imposed pursuant to subdivision two of this section, shall not be required to pay such fine until such appeal is finally determined.

(ii) The court to which such an appeal is taken shall, on motion of any party thereto, grant a preference in the hearing thereof. (McKinney's Consolidated Laws of New York Annotated, Judiciary Law. Sec. 751.)

DECISION OF COURT OF APPEALS FOR EIGHTH CIRCUIT IN CASE OF AMERICAN FEDERATION OF STATE, COUNTY AND MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES v. MILTON WOODWARD

No. 19,261

American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, LeRoy Gage, and John Engleman, Appellants, v. Milton Woodward, as City Commissioner of the City of North Platte, Nebraska, Appellee.	Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of Nebraska.

[January 17, 1969.]

Before Van Oosterhout, Chief Judge; Mehaffy and Heaney, Circuit Judges.

Heaney, Circuit Judge.

The principal question raised on this appeal is whether public employees, discharged because they joined a labor union, have a right of action for damages and injunctive relief under Section 1 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. §1983,[1] against the public official who discharged them.[2] The answer to this question turns on whether public employees have a constitutionally protected right to belong to a labor union.[3]

[1]Section 1, Civil Rights Act of 1871, 42 U.S.C. §1983, provides:

"Every person who, under color of any statute, ordinance, regulation, custom, or usage of any State or Territory, subjects, or causes to be subjected, any citizen of the United States or other person within the jurisdiction thereof to the deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws, shall be liable to the party injured in an action at law, suit in equity, or other proper proceeding for redress."

[2]The defendant has not raised the issue of sovereign immunity on this appeal. In Board of Trustees of Arkansas A & M College v. Davis, 396 F.2d 730 (8th Cir. 1968), this Court reaffirmed the principle that state officials are not immune from suit when they transcend their lawful authority by invading constitutional rights.

[3]Nebraska law prohibits strikes by public employees, Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §48-821, and provides that no governmental subdivision can be compelled to enter into a collective bargaining agreement with a labor organization. Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §48-810.01. The Union does not contend on this appeal and we express no opinion as to whether a union has a federally protected right to engage in either activity.

The District Court dismissed the plaintiffs' complaint on the grounds that it failed to allege facts constituting a claim under 42 U.S.C. §1983. We reverse.

The complaint alleged: that LeRoy Gage and John Engleman had been employed by the Street Department of the City of North Platte, Nebraska; that in May 1967, the Union began an organizational campaign among the employees of the Street Department; that a number of employees, including Gage and Engleman, became members of the Union; that Defendant Woodward, the City Commissioner in charge of the Street Department, learned of the Union activities and of the fact that Gage and Engleman had become members of the Union; that Woodward "purposely and maliciously and solely for the purpose of discriminating against such employees of the Street Department * * * as joined or wanted to join a Union, threatened said employees with possible discharge; * * * [and] did in fact discharge * * * GAGE and ENGLEMAN" solely because they joined the Union; and that Woodward reduced the salaries of other employees for the same reason.

Engleman and Gage claimed damages in the sum of $5,000 and, along with the plaintiff Union, sought an injunction prohibiting the defendant from discriminating against any employee of the Street Department because of membership or nonmembership in a union and interfering with the organization of the employees of the department.

To invoke the remedies provided by the Civil Rights Act of 1871, the plaintiffs must show that the Commissioner deprived them of rights, privileges or immunities secured by the United States Constitution or by the laws of the United States, and that the Commissioner acted under color of law.[4] The plaintiffs argue that this was done here as the Commissioner deprived them of their right to freedom of association under the First Amendment made applicable to the states by the Fourteenth Amendment.

The First Amendment protects the right of one citizen to associate with other citizens for any lawful purpose free from government interference.[5] The guarantee of the "right of assembly" protects more than "the right to attend a meeting; it includes the right to express one's attitudes or philosophies by membership in a group or by affiliation with it or by other lawful means. * * *." Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479, 483 (1965); N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449, 460-61 (1958).

Union membership is protected by the right of association under the First and Fourteenth Amendments. Thomas v. Collins, 323 U.S. 516 (1945); McLaughlin v. Tilendis, 398 F.2d 287 (7th Cir. 1968).

The Court commented in Thomas:

> "* * * Great secular causes, with small ones, are guarded. The grievances for redress of which the right of petition was insured, and with it the right of assembly, are not solely religious or political ones. And the rights of free speech and a free press are not confined to any field of human interest.
>
> "The idea is not sound therefore that the First Amendment's safeguards are wholly inapplicable to business or economic activity. * * *"

Id. at 531.

> "* * * This Court has recognized that 'in the circumstances of our times the dissemination of information concerning the facts of a labor dispute must be regarded as within that area of free discussion that is guaranteed by the Constitution. . . . For discussion concerning the conditions in industry and the causes of labor disputes appears to us indispensable to the effective and intelligent use of the processes of popular government to shape the destiny of modern industrial society.' Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U.S. 88, 102, 103, * * *. The right * * * to discuss, and inform people concerning, the advantages and disadvantages of unions and joining them is protected not only as part of free speech, but as part of free assembly. * * *"

[4]The defendant stated in his brief that he "was acting in his official capacity as Commissioner of the City of North Platte and was performing a function of his office in hiring and firing employees." Under Monroe v. Pape, 365 U.S. 167 (1961), the defendant was clearly acting under color of law.

[5]The right to free association under the First and Fourteenth Amendments as a bar to government interference has most frequently arisen in cases involving political and civil rights. The right to free association has been held to bar a state from: compelling local affiliates of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to disclose membership lists where disclosure might restrain citizens from joining, Gibson v. Florida Legislation Investigation Committee, 372 U.S. 539 (1963); Bates v. Little Rock, 361 U.S. 516 (1960); N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449 (1958); requiring teachers to list all the organizations to which they belonged in the last five years as a condition of employment, Shelton v. Tucker, 364 U.S. 479 (1960); from permanently enjoining an association from doing business within the state even though it planned to organize a boycott of city buses, N.A.A.C.P. v. Alabama, 377 U.S. 288 (1964); and from exercising its traditional supervisory power over the legal profession, United Mine Workers v. Illinois Bar Association, 389 U.S. 217 (1967); Brotherhood of R. Trainmen v. Virginia Bar Association, 377 U.S. 1 (1964). The right to free association has been held to bar the federal government from denying employment in a defense facility to a member of the Communist Party without regard to the quality and degree of membership because "the operative fact upon which the job disability depends is the exercise of an individual's right of association, which is protected by the provisions of the First Amendment." United States v. Robel, 389 U.S. 258, 263 (1967).

In Tilendis, the Court held that a complaint alleging that a non-tenure teacher was dismissed because of his membership in a union stated a claim upon which relief could be granted under the Civil Rights Act of 1871. The Court stated:

> "It is settled that teachers have the right of free association, and unjustified interference with teachers' associational freedom violates the Due Process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. * * * Public employment may not be subjected to unreasonable conditions, and the assertion of First Amendment rights by teachers will usually not warrant their dismissal. * * * Unless there is some illegal intent, an individual's right to form and join a union is protected by the First Amendment. * * *"

McLaughlin v. Tilendis, supra at 288-89 (citations omitted).

The defendant argues that the plaintiffs have no federally protected right to be continued in public employment. The Supreme Court disposed of his argument in Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U.S. 183, 191-92 (1952):

> "* * * [T]he facile generalization that there is no constitutionally protected right to public employment is to obscure the issue. For, in United Public Workers, though we held that the Federal Government through the Hatch Act could properly bar its employees from certain political activity thought inimical to the interests of the Civil Service, we cast this holding into perspective by emphasizing that Congress could not 'enact a regulation providing that no Republican, Jew or Negro shall be appointed to federal office, or that no federal employee shall attend Mass or take any active part in missionary work.' 330 U.S. at 100. See also In re Summers, 325 U.S. 561, 571 (1945). We need not pause to consider whether an abstract right to public employment exists. It is sufficient to say that constitutional protection does extend to the public servant whose exclusion * * * is patently arbitrary or discriminatory."

This same theme has been repeated by the Supreme Court on a number of occasions. In Beilan v. Board of Ed. of Phila., 357 U.S. 399, 405 (1958), the Court stated that, "By engaging in teaching in the public schools, petitioner did not give up his right to freedom of belief, speech or association. * * *" Again, in Keyishian v. Board of Regents of New York, 385 U.S. 589, 605 (1967), the Court specifically rejected the theory that public employment "may be conditioned upon surrender of constitutional rights which could not be abridged by direct government action." See, Pickering v. Board of Education, 391 U.S. 563 (1968).

No paramount public interest of the State of Nebraska or the City of North Platte warranted limiting the plaintiffs' right to freedom of association. To the contrary, it is the public policy of Nebraska that employment should not be denied on the basis of union membership. The Constitution of the State of Nebraska, Article XV, Section 13, and the laws of Nebraska, Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §48-217, specifically provide that "no person shall be denied employment because of membership in or affiliation with * * * a labor organization." Neither the Constitution nor the statute is limited by its terms to private employment and, in our view, it is not so limited. See, Levasseur v. Wheeldon, 112 N.W.2d 894 (So. Dak. 1962); Potts v. Hay, 229 Ark. 830, 318 S.W.2d 826 (1958). We further note that Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §48-224 provides that a municipal corporation may "check off" union dues if an employee so requests.

The defendant finally contends that the plaintiffs must exhaust available state judicial and administrative remedies prior to seeking relief in United States District Court. He argues that Nebraska law, Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §§48-810—48-836, establishing a court of industrial relations, provides an adequate judicial remedy and that Nebraska law, Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §§48-824—48-836, establishing a procedure for conciliation and arbitration of disputes between municipalities and unions, provides an adequate administrative remedy.

The plaintiffs argue that it is unnecessary to exhaust state judicial and administrative remedies, even though adequate, as a precedent to relief. See, Damico v. California, 389 U.S. 416 (1967); McNeese v. Board of Education, 373 U.S. 668 (1963); Monroe v. Pape, 365 U.S. 167 (1961); 68 Colum. L. Rev. 1201; Jaffe, Judicial Control of Administrative Action 438-440, 449, n. 106; Davis, Administrative Law Treatise Vol. 3, §20.07. They argue, in the alternative, that neither remedy suggested by the defendant is adequate.

We do not determine whether it is necessary to exhaust adequate state judicial and administrative remedies as the suggested remedies have not been shown to be adequate. See, Marsh v. County School Board of Roanoke County, Va., 305 F.2d 94, 98-99 (4th Cir. 1962); Farley v. Turner, 281 F.2d 131 (4th Cir. 1960); School Board of City of Charlottesville, Va. v. Allen, 240 F.2d 59, 63-64 (4th Cir. 1956), cert. denied, 353 U.S. 910 (1957).

The court of industrial relations is one of limited powers. See, International Bro. of Elec. Wkrs. v. City of Hastings, 179 Neb. 455, 138 N.W.2d 822 (1965). It is neither authorized to restrain public officials from discriminating against public employees because of union membership nor empowered to correct the results of such discrimination. The defendant does not contend that Nebraska state courts of general jurisdiction have or would exercise jurisdiction to protect the plaintiffs' rights under the Nebraska Constitution and Statutes to belong to a labor organization. Article XV, Sections 13, 14 and 15; Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943, §48-217. Nor has the plaintiffs' statement that "no Nebraska court or agency has ever ordered reinstatement and compensation of public employees discharged for joining a union or directed a public official to stop interfering with a union organizing campaign" been challenged.

The inadequacy of the administrative procedure for resolution of this dispute is obvious. Reissue Revised Statutes of 1943 §48-836 specifically provides that a decision or report of an arbitration board as to a dispute submitted to it shall be advisory only and shall not be binding on either party.

Reversed and remanded.

(Argued November 21, 1968 Decided Feb. 25, 1969)

CRAVEN, Circuit Judge:

This is a civil action brought to obtain a declaratory judgment and injunctive relief declaring unconstitutional and preventing enforcement of Sections 95-97, 95-98 and 95-99 of the General Statutes of North Carolina. We hold G.S. 95-97 unconstitutional on its face. We hold G.S. 95-98 a valid and constitutional exercise of the legislative authority of the General Assembly of North Carolina. As for G.S. 95-99, we hold it to be so related to G.S. 95-97 that it cannot survive the invalidation of that section.

Counsel have not been able to agree on findings of facts. We have carefully examined their separate submissions, and, although we note variances, we are more impressed with the similarities. The differences are almost entirely those of degree and emphasis, and, we think, are without legal significance. From the pleadings, answers to interrogatories, depositions, exhibits, briefs and statements of counsel, the court finds the facts to be as follows:

FACTS

The statutes sought to be invalidated are these:

N.C.G.S. 95-97: Employees of units of government prohibited from becoming members of trade unions or labor unions. –No employee of the State of North Carolina, or of any agency, office, institution or instrumentality thereof, or any employee of a city, town, county, or other municipality or agency thereof, or any public employee or employees of an entity or instrumentality of government shall be, become, or remain a member of any trade union, labor union, or labor organization which is, or may become, a part of or affiliated in any way with any national or international labor union, federation, or organization, and which has as its purpose or one of its purposes, collective bargaining with any employer mentioned in this article with respect to grievances, labor disputes, wages or salary, rates of pay, hours of employment, or the conditions of work of such employees. Nor shall such an employee organize or aid, assist or promote the organization of any such trade union, labor union, or labor organization, or affiliate with any such organization in any capacity whatsoever. The terms "employee," "public employee" or "employees" whenever used in this section shall mean any regular and full-time employee engaged exclusively in law enforcement or fire protection activity.

N.C.G.S. 95-98: Contracts between units of government and labor unions, trade unions or labor organizations concerning public employees declared to be illegal. –Any agreement, or contract between the governing authority of any city, town, county, or other municipality, or between any agency, unit, or instrumentality thereof, or between any agency, instrumentality, or institution of the State of North Carolina, and any labor union, trade union, or labor organization, as bargaining agent for any public employees of such city, town, county or other municipality, or agency or instrumentality of government, is hereby declared to be against the public policy of the State, illegal, unlawful, void and of no effect.

N.C.G.S. 95-99: Penalty for violation of article.–Any violation of the provisions of this Article is hereby declared to be a misdemeanor, and upon conviction, plea of guilty or plea of nolo contendere shall be punishable in the discretion of the court.

All of the plaintiffs are members of the Charlotte Fire Department, and the gist of the complaint is that the statutes are overbroad and prohibit constitutionally guaranteed rights of the plaintiffs in violation of the First Amendment and the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Specifically, plaintiffs want to become dues paying members of a Local which would become affiliated with International Association of Fire Fighters, the intervenor. Affidavits of some 400 fire fighters of the Charlotte Fire Department have been put into evidence to the effect that, if allowed to do so by law, affiants would join the Union.

The City of Charlotte is a municipal corporation which operates and maintains the Charlotte Fire Department pursuant to the City Chapter. The Chief of the Department is appointed by the City Council and is accountable to the Council for the faithful performance of his duties. He is responsible for the discipline and efficiency of the Department and for carrying out all orders, rules and regulations approved by the Council. He is also responsible for approving all promotions of members in the Department subject to the approval of the Civil Service Board.

The Department has approximately 438 employees, consisting of the Chief, two assistant chiefs, 14 deputy chiefs, 60 fire captains, and 56 fire lieutenants, with the remainder being fire fighters, inspectors, fire alarm personnel and office personnel. The plaintiffs consist of deputy chiefs, captains, lieutenants and fire fighters and range in service with the department from two to 40 years.

For many years prior to the enactment in 1959 of the North Carolina General Statutes complained of, the International Association of Fire Fighters operated or maintained a union made up of Charlotte Fire Department members and designated as Local 660, an affiliate of the International Association of Fire Fighters. A number of Fire Department members paid dues to that organization which was engaged in collective bargaining activity. Further, the City checked off dues for union membership.

During 1959, the North Carolina Legislature enacted General Statutes 95-97 through 95-99. Following the enactment of these statutes, Local 660 terminated its affiliation with the International Association of Fire Fighters and became, or took the name, Charlotte Fire Fighters Association. This organization continued the activities and representations very much as had been the practice with Local 660. The Fire Fighters Association continued to negotiate with the City and to represent the Charlotte firemen with respect to wages, grievances, and other conditions of employment, and the City continued its recognition of the association and permitted dues checkoff. This practice continued from 1959 until 1962. On January 29, 1962, the City Council received and approved a report compiled by the City Manager. One of the recommendations of this report as it was approved established as a condition of continued employment in the Fire Department non-membership in the Fire Fighters Association or in any successor thereto. The City Council approved this report after having been advised by the City Attorney that the Fire Fighters Association was not illegal per se under the statutes complained of, but that the association and its recognition by the City was in violation of public policies of the State. Sometime after this action on the part of the City Council, the Fire Fighters Association terminated its activities and the City discontinued its recognition and dues check-off. A grievance procedure was established to allow individual employees to process grievances, but no provisions were made for group grievance procedure or for collective bargaining with respect to grievances, wages, and conditions of employment.

During March of 1967, members of the Charlotte Fire Department, the plaintiffs herein, organized the Charlotte Firemen's Assembly. This organization has as its purpose collective bargaining with the City of Charlotte with respect to wages, grievances, hours of employment and other conditions of employment. It would like to become a local affiliate of intervenor but is prevented by the statutes. The Firemen's Assembly has not been recognized by the City as a representative of firemen.

PROCEDURAL QUESTIONS AND PLEAS IN BAR

We resolve all procedural questions and pleas in bar against the defendants:

(1) As will appear more fully below, it is clear that the complaint states a claim for relief.

(2) We reject the argument that the statutes involved are within the sovereign power of the State of North Carolina under the Tenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and thus beyond the reach of other amendments to the Constitution. The attempted interposition of sovereignty is utterly lacking in merit, and is especially so on behalf of a municipal corporation.

(3) Contrary to Charlotte's contention, the Eleventh Amendment does not provide immunity for counties, cities or other governmental units smaller than the states themselves. Wright, Federal Courts §46 at 151 (Hornbook ed. 1963). Although notice of the pendency of this action was served upon the Attorney General of the State of North Carolina, he did not seek to intervene and is not a party, nor is the State.

(4) There is nothing to the contention that there is a misjoinder of parties defendant and parties plaintiff. Even if there were it would be of no moment, for the basis of jurisdiction is the presence of a federal question and not the alignment of parties under diversity jurisdiction.

(5) This case is properly before a three-judge court. The injunction is sought against the City of Charlotte, the Chief of the Charlotte Fire Department, the Chief of the Charlotte Police Department, and the Solicitor of the solicitorial district within which the City of Charlotte is located. It is true that none of these is an officer of the State of North Carolina, unless it be the solicitor of the 14-A solicitorial district, but in reaction to Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 124, 52 L. Ed. 714 (1908), the statute, 28 U.S.C. §2281, has been broadly interpreted so as to require three judges where the statutes attacked are general statutes of statewide application and are reflections of state rather than local policy. City of Cleveland v. United States, 323 U.S. 329, 89 L. Ed. 274 (1945).

(6) The remedy of declaratory judgment is, of course, within the power of a three-judge federal court as it is within the power of a single district judge. 28 U.S.C. §2201.

(7) Although we think it not of controlling importance, for reasons set out below, we note the urgent contention of the City of Charlotte that the court lacks jurisdiction over it under 42 U.S.C. §1983 and 28 U.S.C. §1343. As for Section 1983, it is said that a municipality is not a "person" within the intention of the Congress in the enactment of the statute. We agree that a municipality is not within the ambit of the statute if the action brought is one to recover monetary damages.

Monroe v. Pape, 365 U.S. 167, 5 L.Ed. 2d 492 (1961). But here nothing is sought of the City except a declaratory judgment binding it as to the validity of the statutes and an injunction against their enforcement. For the reasons stated by the Seventh Circuit in Adams v. City of Park Ridge, 293 F.2d 585 (7th Cir. 1961), we hold, as did that circuit, that there is federal jurisdiction over the city for the limited purposes of the complaint and excluding the recovery of monetary damages. We are of the same opinion with respect to 28 U.S.C. §1343 (3). It is not necessary with respect to the latter statute to find a congressional intent to include municipalities within the word "person" for no such word appears in Section 1343 (3). It is the prior section, 1343 (2), referring to monetary damages, that allows recovery only from a "person". We do not believe it was the congressional purpose in the enactment of 28 U.S.C. §1343 to omit municipalities from subjection to suits to prevent deprivation of rights secured by the Constitution of the United States. But cf. Fisher v. City of New York, 312 F.2d 890 (2d Cir. 1963). Certainly such an intention does not plainly appear.

(8) But aside from these statutes, the plaintiffs rest their case upon a broader base: an alleged freedom of association protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. This is a federal question of constitutional dimension. Since 1875 the federal courts have been the primary forum for vindicating every right given by the Constitution, the laws and treaties of the United States. Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 247, 19 L.Ed. 2d. 444, 449, (1967). This case, then, presents a federal question under 28 U.S.C. §1331 and we judicially notice, if the monetary limitation be deemed important[1] that the economic impact upon so many plaintiffs of the grant or denial of the right to form and join a labor union may be far greater than $10,000.

ABSTENTION

It is urged upon us that in any event this court ought to abstain from decision as to the constitutionality of these statutes and either dismiss the complaint or retain jurisdiction (the better practice) to await state court determination and decision. We reject the contention. Abstention is a judge-made doctrine of comparatively recent vintage – most notably expressed in Railroad Commission of Texas v. Pullman Co., 312 U.S. 496, 85 L.Ed. 971 (1941). Except as it may serve federalism, there is little justification for abstention from decision by a federal court. See Wright, Federal Courts §52 (Hornbook ed. 1963). Although abstention remains appropriate in some situations, the proper emphasis is that of Chief Justice Marshall, who said in 1821 in Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat, 264, 404, 5 L.Ed. 257, 291:

> "We have no more right to decline the exercise of jurisdiction which is given, than to usurp that which is not given. The one or the other would be treason to the Constitution."

It is now established beyond question that the Pullman doctrine sanctions escape from the duty of decision only in narrowly limited "special circumstances." Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 248, 19 L.Ed. 2d 444, 450 (1967). No such special circumstances are urged upon us here. We are not asked, for example, to stop the prosecution of a criminal action already begun in a state court – an area where federalism requires that a federal district court be slow, indeed, to act. Douglas v. City of Jeannette, 319 U.S. 157, 162-64, 87 L.Ed. 1324, 1329 (1943). It is not seriously suggested that we have here a question of construction of these statutes and that a state court might so construe them as to avoid or modify the constitutional question. Cf. Connally v. General Construction Co., 269 U.S. 385, 394-95, 70 L.Ed. 322, 330 (1926). Since there are no special circumstances that invoke a proper deference to state court adjudication, we have the constitutional duty to decide the federal questions presented. This is especially so here because the Supreme Court has squarely held that "the abstention doctrine is inappropriate for cases such as the present one where . . . statutes are justifiably attacked on their face as abridging free expression. . . ." Dombrowski v. Pfister, 380 U.S. 479, 480-90, 14 L.Ed. 2d 22, 30 (1965). There is danger in tolerating "in the area of First Amendment freedoms, the existence of a penal statute susceptible of sweeping and improper application." NAACP v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 433, 9 L.Ed. 2d 405, 418 (1963). The danger is that the inhibiting effect of such a statute could be tested only by those hardy enough to risk criminal prosecution and a possible penalty of up to two years' imprisonment. Cf. Ex parte Young, 209 U.S. 123, 147, 52 L.Ed. 723, 724 (1908).

The "questions of abstention and injunctive relief are not the same." Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 254, 19 L.Ed. 2d 444, 453 (1967). That we entertain doubt as to the propriety of an injunction, or even decline to issue the same, is entirely irrelevant to the question of abstention.

> "We hold that a federal district court has the duty to decide the appropriateness and the merits of the declaratory request irrespective of its conclusion as to the propriety of the issuance of the injunction." Zwickler v. Koota, 389 U.S. 241, 254, 19 L.Ed. 2d 444, 454 (1967).

THE CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION AND THE REMEDY

We think N.C.G.S. 95-97 is void on its face as an abridgment of freedom of association protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States. The flaw in it is an intolerable "overbreadth" unnecessary to the protection of valid state interests. Cf. U.S. v. Robel, ___ U.S. ___, 19 L.Ed. 2d 508 (1967). The Supreme Court of the United States has accorded "freedom of association" full status as an aspect of liberty protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment and by the rights of free speech and peaceful assembly explicitly set out in the First Amendment. In NAACP v. Alabama, ex rel. Patterson, the Court said:

> "It is beyond debate that freedom to engage in association for the advancement of beliefs and ideas is an inseparable aspect of the 'liberty' assured by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, which embraces freedom of speech. [Citations omitted.] Of course, it is immaterial whether the beliefs sought to be advanced by association pertain to political, economic, religious or cultural matters, and state action which may have the effect of curtailing the freedom to associate is subject to the closest scrutiny." 357 U.S. 449, 460-61, 2 L.Ed. 2d 1488, 1498-99 (1958). (Emphasis ours.)

The Court had previously noted the close connection between the freedoms of speech and assembly. In De Jonge v. Oregon, 299 U.S. 353, 364, 81 L.Ed. 278, 283-84 (1937), the Court held that the right of peaceable assembly is a right cognate to those of free speech and free press and equally fundamental. It was said that the right is one that cannot be denied without violating fundamental principles of liberty and justice which lie at the base of all civil and political institutions. The Court made a careful distinction between the proper exercise of legislative power to protect against abuse of the right of assembly and legislative infringement per se of that right, holding that the latter is not permissible. Especially pertinent to the problem confronting us is the following:

[1] 28 U.S.C. §1331 incongruously still purports to put a $10,000.00 minimum price on federal questions. Professor Wright suggests the limitation is seldom of importance. Wright, Federal Courts §32 (Hornbook ed. 1963). "It would be unwise, as a matter of policy, to insist that all such cases in which less than $10,000 is in controversy be tried in state court." ALI Study of the Division of Jurisdiction Between State and Federal Courts, Commentary §1311 (Tent. Draft No. 6, 1968).

> "[C]onsistently with the Federal Constitution, peaceable assembly for lawful discussion cannot be made a crime. The holding of meetings for peaceable political action cannot be proscribed. Those who assist in the conduct of such meetings cannot be branded as criminals on that score. The question, if the rights of free speech and peaceable assembly are to be preserved, is not as to the auspices under which the meeting is held but as to its purpose. . . ." De Jonge v. Oregon, 299 U.S. 353, 365, 81 L.Ed. 278, 284 (1937). (Emphasis ours.)

We would make the same distinction here. It matters not, we think, whether the firemen of the City of Charlotte meet under the auspices of the intervenor, a national labor union, but whether their proposed concerted action, if any, endangers valid state interests. We think there is no valid state interest in denying firemen the right to organize a labor union – whether local or national in scope. It is beyond argument that a single individual cannot negotiate on an equal basis with an employer who hires hundreds of people. Recognition of this fact of life is the basis of labor-management relations in this country. Charlotte concedes in its brief that the right of public employees to join labor unions is becoming increasingly recognized[2] (with the exception of firemen and policemen) and even admits that collective bargaining might be beneficial in many situations in the case of municipal firemen.

But Charlotte insists that the State has a valid interest in forbidding membership in a labor union to firemen. It is said that fire departments are quasi-military in structure, and that such a structure is necessary because individual firemen must be ready to respond instantly and without question to orders of a superior, and that such military discipline may well mean the difference between saving human life and property, and failure. The extension of this argument is, of course, that affiliation with a national labor union might eventuate in a strike against the public interest which could not be tolerated and the very existence of which would imperil lives and property in the City of Charlotte. This is the only state interest that can be validly asserted for N.C.G.S. 95-97. The thought of fires raging out of control in Charlotte while firemen, out on strike, [Sic] Neroicly watch the flames, is frightening.

We do not question the power of the State to deal with such a contingency.[3] We do question the overbreadth of G.S. 95-97, which quite unnecessarily, in our opinion, goes far beyond the valid state interest that is suggested to us, and strikes down indiscriminately the right of association in a labor union – even one whose policy is opposed to strikes.[4]

Since the only valid state interest suggested by defendants in support of the constitutionality of G.S. 95-97 is the quite legitimate fear that fire protection for the people of Charlotte might be disrupted by violence or by strike, it seems quite clear that the statute must be invalidated for "overbreadth."

The Supreme Court "has repeatedly held that a governmental purpose to control or prevent activities constitutionally subject to state regulation may not be achieved by means which sweep unnecessarily broadly and thereby invade the area of protected freedoms." NAACP v. Alabama, 377 U.S. 288, 307, 12 L.Ed. 2d 325 at 338 (1964).

[2]The Charlotte Observer currently reports that city employees, including sanitation workers, have joined a national labor union.

[3]Although the question is not before us, we note the position of plaintiffs, including intervenor, on the power of the State to prevent strikes and/or violent conduct on the part of a labor union engaged in vital public employment. The following Article 22 was recommended as of January 10, 1968, for incorporation in the intervenor's constitution:

> "The International Association of Fire Fighters is a law abiding organization. Because of the public character of the work of its members and the protection of the lives and property of citizens and communities in case of fire and other hazard, no subordinate union or its members shall withhold fire protection services where collective bargaining, conciliation, mediation, fact finding with recommendations or voluntary binding conciliation or arbitration is available for resolution of of disputes involving grievances, wages, hours or conditions of work. Where such procedures for resolving disputes are not available the subordinate union shall not withhold fire protection service but shall refer the matter to the International President and the International Executive Board for such further handling as may be available or necessary to secure an acceptable settlement of the dispute."

From the plaintiffs' brief:

> The State "may quite properly prohibit employees from striking or using violence in the settlement of disputes." Milkwagon Drivers Union v. Metamore Dairies, 312 U.S. 278, 85 L.Ed. 836 (1941).

From the intervenor's brief:

> It is admitted that fire fighters' "official conduct and activities are subject to reasonable restriction by the General Assembly of North Carolina."

Our helpful and valued amicus curiae suggests that North Carolina may validly impose sanctions – even criminal ones – against strikes or other refusals to act imperiling the public safety, e.g., a statute making it a criminal offense for a fireman to refuse the call of duty; a statute providing for terminal discharge of any fireman who refuses to perform his duty.

[4]See footnote 3, supra.

Again, "even though the governmental purpose be legitimate and substantial, that purpose cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can be more narrowly achieved." Shelton v. Tucker, 364 U.S. 479, 488, 5 L.Ed. 2d 231, 237 (1960). As previously indicated,[5] the plaintiffs and intervenor do not question the power of the State to prohibit strikes against the public interest.

What we have said thus far supports our ultimate conclusion: that the firemen of the City of Charlotte are granted the right of free association by the First and Fourteenth amendments of the United States Constitution; that that right of association includes the right to form and join a labor union – whether local or national; that membership in such a labor organization will confer upon the firemen no immunity from proper state regulation to protect valid state interests which are, in this case, the protection of property and life from destruction by fire. We think such a conclusion flows inevitably from the enunciations of the United States Supreme Court set out above. Our decision is consistent with that of the Seventh Circuit according the same right to teachers. McLaughlin v. Tilendis, 398 F. 2d 287 (7th Cir. 1968). We do not think the McLaughlin decision is distinguishable on the asserted ground that the State in that case had not undertaken to prohibit membership in a teachers' labor union. The court's recitation that there was no such state legislation went to the question of whether there was a valid state interest. It held that there was no such state interest, and that the right of a teacher to join a labor union rested upon the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. In our case, we hold that the valid state interest may be served by more narrowly drawn legislation so as not to infringe the First Amendment.

We find nothing unconstitutional in G.S. 95-98. It simply voids contracts between units of government within North Carolina and labor unions and expresses the public policy of North Carolina to be against such collective bargaining contracts. There is nothing in the United States Constitution which entitles one to have a contract with another who does not want it. It is but a step further to hold that the state may lawfully forbid such contracts with its instrumentalities. The solution, if there be one, from the viewpoint of the firemen, is that labor unions may someday persuade state government of the asserted value of collective bargaining agreements, but this is a political matter and does not yield to judicial solution. The right to a collective bargaining agreement, so firmly entrenched in American labor-management relations, rests upon national legislation and not upon the federal Constitution. The State is within the powers reserved to it to refuse to enter into such agreements and so to declare by statute.

G.S. 95-99 provides that any violation of the provisions of "this article" is a misdemeanor punishable in the discretion of the court. We do not think the Legislature contemplated the criminal sanction of G.S. 95-99 as an assurance of compliance with G.S. 95-98. There is no way to punish a labor union or a city, town or county or other municipal corporation, (the only possible violators of G.S. 95-98) except by fine. G.S. 95-99 authorizes up to two years' imprisonment.[6] We doubt it was the legislative intent to authorize even a fine against North Carolina municipal corporations. Rather obviously, we think, the penalty portion of the article was an in terrorem provision intended to make certain that no employee of the State or its subordinate municipal corporations should so much as lift a finger to form or join a labor union. Since G.S. 95-97 has been held void, to uphold G.S. 95-99 would be to sustain it without surviving purpose, and thus to distort the legislative intent.

Finally, we are asked to enjoin the defendants from enforcing these statutes now adjudged to be unconstitutional, viz., N.C. G.S. 95-97 and 95-99. We decline to do so. There has not been the slightest intimation that our decision adjudging these statutes invalid will be ignored by the City of Charlotte or by any of the other defendants. If our decision should be thought wrong, we may properly assume it will be appealed – not ignored. There is no evidence that the solicitor of the district has sought indictments against any firemen or that he intends doing so. We adhere to the philosophy of federalism and think it unseemly that a federal court should issue its injunctive process against state or local officers except in situations of the most compelling necessity. Entry of a declaratory judgment decreeing G.S. 95-97 and 95-99 invalid because in violation of the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution seems to us, on the facts of this case, a fully sufficient remedy.

Declaratory Judgment Granted Injunction Denied.

Addendum:

The Eighth Circuit has decided that public employees have a right, grounded in the Constitution, to join a labor union, in the absence of a "paramount public interest of the State of Nebraska or the City of North Platte [which] warranted limiting the plaintiffs' right to freedom of association." See American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees v. Woodward, ___ F. 2d ___ (8th Cir. Jan. 17, 1969), 37 U.S.L.W. 2421 (Jan. 28, 1969).

[6]A misdemeanor punishable in the discretion of the court means a maximum of two years. State v. Adams, 266 N.C. 406, N.C. G.S. 14-3a.

Agreement between the Board of Education of the Louisville Independent School District and the Louisville Education Association, Louisville, Kentucky

PREAMBLE

The Louisville Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as the Board) and the Louisville Education Association (hereinafter referred to as the Association) share a common concern for the development and operation of educational programs of the highest quality for the pupils, patrons, and community of the Louisville Independent School District.

The Board and the Association believe, further, that the primary purpose of education in the United States is the development of competence in individuals for maximum participation in the American democracy.

We recognize the unique role of the teaching profession in the planning, development, operation, and improvement of educational programs of a quality consistent with shared objectives. Moreover, we view the participation of teachers in the formulation of policy to be highly productive of increased efficiency, inasmuch as such shared decision-making promotes identification and release of valuable talent, creativity and energy.

The Association enjoys an unusually fine rapport with the Board. In establishing and maintaining this rapport, the Board and the Association have benefited from the invaluable role of the Superintendent of Schools who is both a leader of the profession and agent of the Board. The Association seeks to insure continuance of this excellent relationship as the Board and the Association pursue attainment of our mutual goals.

The Association believes that a formal commitment to professional agreement is of mutual benefit to the Board and to the Association. A fundamental principle of effective school personnel administration is that policies should be in writing, be widely disseminated, and be officially adopted by boards of education.

A written professional agreement clarifies the roles and the relationships of all those involved in the process of shared decision-making, outlines procedures to be followed, and tends to avoid likelihood of future misunderstanding on the part of individuals who may not have had a part in the original development of the procedure. Thus, a formal professional agreement will facilitate increased efficiency and productivity in a program of quality education.

The purpose of this agreement is to give certificated professional employees a formal voice in the development of educational policies which affect them and to improve the channels of communication between the Board and the Association.

In return, the Association pledges that it will exercise reasonableness and restraint in its requests and will follow professional channels and methods in seeking agreement.

The Association is fully aware of, and readily accepts, the responsibilities embodied in this agreement. The Association intends to continue to work in unity with the Superintendent and the Board for the betterment of the Louisville Public Schools. Paramount to all agreements are the education and well-being of the children in the district.

The Board and the Association do hereby agree as follows:

SECTION I. RECOGNITION

A. The Board will grant exclusive professional agreement rights to the organization that can substantiate the fact that it represents a majority of the certificated employees of the Louisville Independent School District. Such substantiation will be in the form of a letter of verification from a local certified public accountant or attorney by the last day of February each year.

B. The recognized organization will not discriminate in its membership requirements on the basis of race, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, or professional assignment.

C. Certificated personnel shall have the right to join, or not to join, any organization for their professional or economic improvement.

D. The Board or any administrative officers thereof shall not discriminate against certificated employees because of their exercise of rights under this agreement.

E. Nothing in this agreement shall prohibit any certificated employee or group from appearing before the Board in their own behalf, after going through established administrative procedures.

SECTION II. PRINCIPLES

A. Attaining Objectives

Attaining objectives of the educational program requires mutual understanding and cooperation among the Board, the Superintendent and his staff, and the professional teaching personnel. Free and open exchange of views is desirable and necessary, with representatives of all parties participating in deliberations leading to the solution of problems of mutual concern.

B. Professional Teaching Personnel

Teaching is a profession requiring specialized qualifications, knowledge and skills. The success of the educational program depends to a large extent upon the maximum use of the abilities of teachers involved in improving the educational program and their conditions of employment.

C. Representation

The Board or the Superintendent (as the Board's chief administrative officer) or their authorized representatives shall meet and confer with authorized representatives of the Association and attempt to reach agreement on proposals and policies affecting the educational program.

Individuals and minority organizations may present their views and recommendations to the Board at regularly scheduled or called meetings of the Board after following established administrative procedures.

SECTION III. PROCEDURES

A. Professional Agreement Committees

Authorized representatives of the Association may confer with authorized representatives of any other organization prior to initiating procedures for reaching professional agreements. The purpose of these conferences will be to seek areas of common concern.

B. Directing Requests

Requests for meetings from the Association normally will be made directly to the Superintendent by the Association president. Requests from the Board or the Superintendent will be made to the president of the Association.

C. Meetings

Meetings composed of members of the Association's Professional Agreement Committee and the Board shall be called upon the written request of the Board or the Association. The initial request for a meeting shall contain the reason(s), the suggested date, and will be made in writing at least ten days prior to the suggested date for such meeting; and shall be held within thirty days following receipt of the request. Meetings shall be scheduled to interfere as little as possible with school schedules and during school hours only if no other time is available.

D. Study Committees

The Board and the Association may jointly appoint special sub-committees for research, study, development of projects, programs, and reports and making recommendations on matters under consideration. The committees shall report findings to representatives of the Board and the Association.

SECTION IV. AGREEMENT

A. The Association shall have the right, after using established administrative channels, to meet and confer, in good faith, to reach agreement with the Board, concerning policies relating to such matters as curriculum, in-service training, personnel policies, salaries and salary schedules, employee benefits, working conditions, professional stress, and other matters which affect the quality of the educational program.

B. When agreement on a proposal or policy is reached, it shall be reduced to writing and, when approved by the Association and the Board, shall be signified by the signing of both parties, and become a part of the official minutes of the Board. Every attempt should be made by both parties to expedite approval. The agreement shall constitute a modification of, or an addendum to, the Articles of this agreement.

SECTION V. MEDIATION AND APPEAL

A. Advisory Panel

In case of a disagreement about the meaning or application of this agreement, or if an impasse is reached in arriving at a satisfactory solution to the proposal under study, the matter will be submitted to an Advisory Panel within thirty days after the request of either the Board or the Professional Agreement Committee. The Board will name one adviser, and the Association will name another. A third member, who shall be the chairman, shall be named by the first two named members within fourteen calendar days.

The Advisory Panel shall have authority to confer separately or jointly with the Superintendent, the Board and the Association, and to use any other source of information.

B. Final Authority of the Board of Education

The Association recognizes that under Kentucky law, the Board shall have and exercise the exclusive control of the public schools within the Louisville School District. This agreement in no way attempts to alter or diminish such statutory authority. The final decision will be made by the Board, subject only to the provisions of KRS 156.220, which gives the Superintendent of Public Instruction authority to decide all controversies and disputes involving the proper administration of the public schools.

SECTION VI. COSTS

Costs and expenses incurred by either party in striving for settlement of differences will be borne by that party.

In the event an Advisory Panel is used, the Association will bear the expenses of the adviser named by the Association, the Board will bear the expenses of the adviser named by the Board, and the expenses of the chairman will be shared equally by both parties.

SECTION VII. ARTICLES

Agreements reached as hereinabove provided will be attached as Articles.

SECTION VIII. DURATION

The provisions of this agreement shall be effective upon the date of signing by the two parties and shall continue in full force under the provisions of Section I in this agreement.

The provisions of each Article attached thereto shall be effective as of the date affixed to each Article, and shall continue in full force until revised. Either party desiring changes in this agreement shall notify the other party in writing within thirty days prior to April 1 of any year. Changes shall be made upon mutual consent of both parties.

This agreement is made and entered into on this 7th day of March, 1967, by and between the Louisville Board of Education and the Louisville Education Association.

The parties hereto do hereby agree as follows:

I

RECOGNITION

The School Board of Bismarck Public School District, hereinafter referred to as the Board, recognizes that teaching is a profession. The Board recognizes the Bismarck Education Association, hereinafter referred to as BEA, as the collective voice of all certificated personnel who notify both the Board and BEA in writing.

The BEA recognizes the Board as the elected representatives of the people of the Bismarck Public School District as the employer of the certificated personnel of the Bismarck School District and as such makes final determination on all matters. However, nothing in this agreement shall be interpreted to deny the right of an individual teacher to discuss or negotiate directly with the Board or superintendent on any matter whatsoever.

The purpose of the recognition is the mutual agreement that the parties hereto will negotiate in good faith in all matters of common concern.

II

PRINCIPLES

A. Attaining Objectives

Attainment of objectives of the educational program of the District requires mutual understandings cooperation among the Board, the Superintendent, his staff, and the professional teaching personnel. The said ballot for such a vote shall be prepared jointly by the teacher negotiating team and the superintendent, his representative and or the board of education. If the ballot shows a lack of support relative to the teacher negotiating team, the Executive Board of the BEA shall appoint a new team to carry on negotiations. PROFESSIONAL RELATIONS AGREEMENT
CHEYENNE PUBLIC SCHOOLS, SCHOOL DISTRICT #1, CHEYENNE, WYOMING

The Board of Trustees of Laramie County School District Number 1, Cheyenne, Wyoming, and the Cheyenne Education Association believe that providing a high quality education for the children of the district is the paramount aim of both parties. They further believe that this objective can best be fulfilled when both work together in harmony and cooperation. The parties do therefore agree as follows:

I. RECOGNITION

The Board of Trustees of School District Number 1, hereinafter referred to as the Board, recognizes the Cheyenne Education Association, hereinafter referred to as the Association, as a professional association and as sole representative of the certified personnel employed by the district on all matters of general concern.

The Association recognizes the Board as the legal authority for School District Number 1 under the laws of Wyoming, as the elected representatives of the people, and as the employer of the certified personnel of the district.

Both parties recognize the Superintendent of Schools as the executive of the Board and as a member and leader of the professional staff, and that as such he has a central role in all efforts to promote agreement, harmony, and mutual respect between the Board and the Staff.

II. PRINCIPLES

A. Participation and Agreement

The best interests of public education in Cheyenne require mutual understanding and cooperation among the Board, the superintendent, the administrative staff, classroom teachers, and other professional personnel. To this end, free and open exchange of views is desirable and necessary, with all affected parties represented, leading to agreement on mutually satisfactory decisions and policies.

B. Professional and Administrative Channels

The professional channels of communication defined in this agreement cannot replace and should not be confused with normal administrative channels linking the individual teacher, his principal or supervisor, the superintendent, and the Board. Action within administrative channels, however, may at times become of concern to the profession as a whole and thus suitable for discussion through professional channels as outlined herein.

C. Professional Membership

Associations of the teaching profession at local, state, and national levels are established to advance the best interests of the profession and of public education. The Board encourages every teacher to join the organizations of his choice. It is recognized that teachers have the right to join, or not to join any organization compatible with the laws of Wyoming for their profession or economic improvement; and that membership in any organization shall not be required as a condition of employment.

D. Professional Service

Teaching is a profession requiring specialized qualifications, and the success of the educational program in the district depends upon the maximum utilization of the abilities of teachers who are reasonably well satisfied with the conditions under which their services are rendered.

III. PROCEDURES

A. Requests for Action

Requests by the Association for administrative action shall be directed to the superintendent; requests for Board action shall be directed to the Board through the superintendent. Requests from the superintendent in his own behalf or as the executive officer of the Board shall be directed to the president of the Association. All requests shall be in writing and shall specify the nature of the action requested.

If the superintendent and the Association shall fail to agree on a request, both parties may present separate reports to the Board stating their points of agreement and disagreement and requesting a meeting with the Board.

B. Requests for Meetings

The Board, the Association, or the superintendent may request a meeting of all three parties or between the Association and the superintendent alone. Within fifteen days of the request of any party for a meeting, a mutually acceptable date and place of the meeting shall be set. When a meeting is to include members of the Board, arrangement of the meeting shall be the responsibility of the superintendent or, if the superintendent should fail to arrange the meeting, of the president of the Association. All requests for meetings shall be in writing and shall specify the nature of the subjects to be discussed.

C. Conduct of Meetings

All meetings under this agreement the school administration shall be represented by the superintendent or his representative. The Association shall be represented by members named by the president in accordance with the by-laws of the Association. The Board shall be represented by a committee of its members unless a meeting with the Board has been specifically requested. These designated persons shall then constitute a Joint Committee to discuss the matter named in the request for meeting.

At meetings of a Joint Committee, facts, opinions, proposals, and counter-proposals will be exchanged freely in an effort to reach mutual understanding and agreement. Any party may call upon competent professional or lay consultants to present information and to make suggestions. The Joint Committee shall be chaired by a member of the Board.

Proceedings, findings, and recommendations of any Joint Committee under this agreement shall be released only in a manner determined by that Committee.

D. Advisory Committee

In case of disagreement about the meaning or application of this agreement, or if an impasse is reached, the matter will be submitted to an Advisory Committee not more than fifteen days after the request of either party. The Board will name one member, and another will be named by the Association. A third member, who shall be chairman, shall be named by the first two named members.

The Advisory Committee will be expected to report recommendations for settlement within fifteen days. The recommendations will be submitted to both parties. In the event agreement cannot then be reached, the Board shall make the final decision.

IV. TERM OF AGREEMENT

This agreement shall be in effect upon approval by both the Board and the Association and shall remain in force until July 1, 1966. It will be renewed automatically for a period of one year from the expiration date each year unless one of the parties shall have notified the other at least ninety days before the expiration date that it will not accept renewal. (Approved April 1, 1965)

COLLECTIVE NEGOTIATION IN CURRICULUM AND INSTRUCTION*

Robert J. Alfonso, Assistant Dean for Instruction and Graduate Studies, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio

Introduction

One can look back just a few years and the topic of collective negotiations is missing from the conference programs of AASA. The term and the process have sprung into general use in an amazingly short span of time. Perhaps the times were right, but educational institutions, historically slow to change, have been affected rapidly and significantly by collective negotiations. Every administrator in this room, and every careful observer of the contemporary scene, knows that collective negotiations has become the dominant concern of today's superintendent. It is unfortunate, but it is true.

The National Education Association officially entered the negotiations world in 1962 by action of their Representative Assembly at the Denver, Colorado convention. In four years (and this should give encouragement to Spiro Agnew) this relative unknown called negotiations did, indeed, become a household word.

Much has been written, spoken, and lamented about collective negotiations—so much so that one despairs of finding any new light to shed. Our task today, however, is not to review and debate the whole spectrum of controversy and difficulty in negotiations but to look at just one facet of it. A number of people, although I fear too few, have been concerned about the effect of negotiations in curriculum and instruction, and it is this particular concern that we are dealing with in this session.

Curiously, this concern has not had the attention which I think it should. Perhaps we have been too caught up in battles over the headline makers such as salaries, fringe benefits, and working conditions to have noticed the way in which negotiations has reached into the area of decision making about curriculum and instruction. Of course, there have been many superintendents who have been concerned about this; to my knowledge, however, it was not until 1966 that an article specifically dealing with this concern appeared in a national journal. The one I refer to was by William C. Miller in the April, 1966 copy of Educational Leadership. There has been some follow up since then. The April 1967 edition of Impact a journal of N.Y.A.S.C.D. was devoted to this concern; it was a major topic at several recent ASCD national and regional conferences; last month's Educational Leadership has an excellent article by William Young; and an ASCD Task Force on this concern has completed a document which will soon be published. The most thorough statement to date is probably the one written by Leslee Bishop and published by ASCD entitled "Collective Negotiations in Curriculum and Instruction: Questions and Concerns."

How Did We Get Where We Are?

Many administrators (if not most) are still a little bewildered by the rapidity of the negotiations blitzkrieg. We are still stunned and are trying desperately to regroup our forces. I am reminded of the sorrowful but bitter opening line of Robinson Jeffers poem "Black Out," written just a day or two after Pearl Harbor: "The war that we have carefully for years provoked comes on us unprepared, amazed and indignant."

This is, I think, analogous to our present situation. Amazed? Yes. Indignant? Yes. Unprepared? Very much so. The mystery of it all is that it took teachers so long to assert themselves.

Teachers and teacher organizations are now demanding the right to be involved in decision making about curriculum and instruction. Such involvement is being written in contracts; in many cases demands are made that specific procedures for involvement or representation be spelled out; and in some cases the decisions about curriculum and instruction have themselves become subjected to negotiations. My first reaction to such demands was one of considerable consternation. How did teachers ever get the notion that administrators, and curriculum directors, and supervisors did not want to involve them in decision making about curriculum and instruction?

We have given support to the general principle that people should be involved in the making of decisions that will affect them, and in our schools we have long held to the belief that teachers should be involved in such decision making. What has gone wrong then? What brought about our Pearl Harbor? I think that if we could make a careful, objective analysis of the ways in which and the extent to which we have involved teachers in making decisions about curriculum and instruction that we would find that, in the main, they have systematically been excluded from involvement in the critical process of decision making, and that where they have been involved they have been so effectively managed that they have operated from a very weak power base.

There has been slippage, as there so often is, between our ideal behavior and our actual behavior. The discrepancy between what we said and what we did has surely contributed to the teacher's demand to be heard on these matters. What teacher, and what administrator for that matter, has not heard an explication of this decision making process in a curriculum course at his university? Involving teachers in decisions about curriculum and instruction is a basic tenet of every respectable text in curriculum that I have ever seen. The tragedy of this development is that we have to fight out in a negotiation contract an activity that we have advocated for 45 years.

There are some other factors also at work in the move by teachers to affect curriculum and instruction through negotiations. There is a convergence of forces composed of curriculum factors on one hand and of teacher or human factors on the other. These two developments have had a parallel development, and cover roughly the same period of growth. I am referring to the growth of teacher power as one force, and to the curriculum reform movement as the other.

On the one hand, then, we see the curriculum reform movement which has brought about some new dimensions in the process of curriculum change and in the traditional rules of the schools and of teachers in this process. For example, we have seen developing in the past ten years: (1) much more rapid curriculum change; (2) many new modes of organizing for teaching and learning; (3) an increasing amount of curriculum planning take place outside the school; (4) the curriculum package, complete with text and accompanying materials; (5) a new form of decision making about curriculum.

Now, keep in mind that these developments have occurred almost simultaneously with the development of the second force which consists of: (1) more sophisticated teachers (in a technical, educational sense); (2) teacher power, the desire to influence the school organization and the educational process, including curriculum and instruction; (3) a we-they dichotomy, in which teachers have placed themselves into an adversary relationship with administrators and curriculum workers.

This, then, represents a convergence of two forces: the desire of teachers to exercise their power and influence just at the time when curriculum decision making has become far more complex than ever before. At the same time that teachers feel a sense of power, they feel less able to influence. Teacher power appears to seek for simplistic decision making in curriculum, even though much of the decision making has already moved outside the arena of the public school and into the federally funded projects and into the great hardware-software combines.

The demands of the teacher-power force are not in keeping with the realities of the counter force. The nature of curriculum development today dictates not a labor model, not the traditional concept, but a completely new model of decision making about curriculum and instruction.

A third force, which I shall not discuss, but one which both the curriculum makers and the teacher-negotiator may yet have to reckon with is the force of student power in making decisions about curriculum. This force, already felt at the university level, will become increasingly influential in the public schools.

The Crux of the Issue

Of utmost concern in viewing negotiations in curriculum and instruction is whether this is an acceptable, viable process of decision making about such matters. My answer, obviously, is that it is not. The present model for negotiations, based on the labor model of collective bargaining is antithetical to all accepted principles of curriculum development.

In fact, when properly conceived of, curriculum issues defy negotiations. The nature of curriculum and instruction makes it axiomatic that they be treated openly, intellectually, experimentally, honestly, with all available wisdom and evidence brought to bear in the decisions. All of the elements affecting decision making in curriculum must be considered. I question whether such careful consideration can be made in a confrontation, in a situation in which sides are drawn and in which a desire to win a victory supplants rational decision making.

Although there is a substantial agreement that curriculum and instruction should not be negotiable items, one finds that in practice they are very much negotiated. The May 1968, NEA Research Bulletin lists numerous instructional and related concerns that are part of negotiation agreements. Perhaps we find ourselves negotiating in curriculum and instruction and not even knowing it, and this seems still more hazardous.

The struggle for power has created an understandable desire among teachers to affect if not control as many elements of the educational enterprise as possible, including the areas of curriculum and instruction. This power struggle has also divided people into two opposing camps; teachers in one camp, and administrators, in the other. One group, supervisors and curriculum workers have been left out in no-mans-land, not sure which group to align themselves with, not even sure if they have a choice, observing their leadership functions being restricted by contract provision, and quite alarmed to discover that many questions about which they are uniquely qualified to speak are now being determined without them, through a process of collective negotiation in which they do not share.

Curriculum workers must work effectively with both sides if they are to be successful in improving curriculum and instruction. It is ironical that a major tenet of negotiations—to be involved in decision making on matters that affect them—has been denied to supervisors and curriculum workers.

Curriculum negotiations is a self defeating process. Correctly perceived, curriculum decisions must be characterized by change, flexibility, experimentation, evaluation, open-mindedness. To argue that we have not always had this does not deny the need. Negotiation and contractual agreements are (or have been at least, in the traditional labor model) the antithesis of this need, for the outcomes of negotiation usually result in frozen practices, legalized practices, and restriction on change.

In the light of present developments in curriculum and instruction we can ill afford to be hamstrung by a process of confrontation and side-taking which prevents an objective, dispassionate analysis. Nor can we afford to make partisan questions out of curriculum and instruction issues. Such matters must not be decided on the basis of what one power group or another happens to prefer. I don't want decisions in curriculum to be made by any power group. In many school districts there has been justified criticism of an overcentralization of decision making, but we run the danger in negotiations in curriculum of exchanging one form of centralization for another. It is not progress to move from decision making dominated by a Board and an administration to decision making dominated by teachers. Power groups come into being because of strong, motivating, self-interest. We must guard against any serving of self-interest in the matter of curriculum and instruction, an area in which we must make decisions not based on pressure or personal whim but based on the best we know about, instruction, learning, the nature of knowledge, the nature of our world and the nature of our students. I am concerned that when we decide curriculum and instruction questions on the basis of negotiation, bargaining, and compromise that we end up with a decision which is defensible as a compromise but completely indefensible in the light of the best we know about teaching and learning. In collective negotiations, who negotiates for kids? For good learning?

Some Predictions

What I have described is the situation as it now exists. Unless some significant shifts in attitude and in process occur, the situation can only worsen. If we do the right things now, however, such changes can occur. I would like to make a few predictions about some of these developments, some of which will occur almost certainly, others which will occur only if the profession seeks actively to bring them about.

1. After teachers achieve certain material and organizational goals, after they feel their work to be sufficiently rewarding in terms of financial reward, prestige, and working conditions, they will shift from a preoccupation with what are largely labor concerns and strategies to a more truly professional orientation and negotiation model.

2. In the race between teacher power and educational change, the power of educational change will win. New forms of organization, new staffing concepts, rapid and continuing curriculum change will demand a flexibility that invalidates the labor model in negotiations.

3. Master teachers will become much more "middle management" personnel, and will become increasingly concerned about the goals of the school organization and their facilitation.

4. As a result of new interest, and the influence of collective negotiations, teachers will be involved in decision making about curriculum and instruction to an extent never seen before. Such involvement will surely add greater strength to education.

5. Eventually, we will have teachers in our schools who are more sensitive to teaching and learning, more astute, more alive intellectually, and more aware of the need for rational rather than emotional decision making.

6. With more extensive involvement of teachers in decision making will come greater responsibility and accountability. They will be held accountable in a way they are not now (and have never been) for the outcomes of their instruction. We will no longer assume automatically that if a child fails it is his fault and has nothing to do with the instruction or the selection of learning activities. I call this "teacher accountability."

7. There will be an eventual easing of adversary relationships, when salaries and working conditions become acceptable. When the concerns that divide us are resolved then we will work together in a new way.

What Must Be Done Now

Now, these things will not just happen. If we wish to move out of our present stalemates of controversy, rigidity, and name-calling, then we must do so deliberately and purposefully.

The following are some briefly stated suggestions which will at least begin to move us in the right direction:

1. We need a redefinition of who should make curriculum decisions, taking into account the many forces and power groups.

2. We need to redefine the curriculum decision making process.

3. We need to develop curriculum councils in our school, deliberative, planning, decision-making bodies. This is hardly a new idea.

4. We, with teachers, must make a distinction between the teacher and his "work" problems and the teacher and his "professional" problems.

5. We must, with teachers, understand and be able to make a clear distinction between negotiating the process by which curriculum decisions will be made and negotiation curriculum issues per se. Questions of who should be involved, time allocation, and financing of curriculum study are quite appropriate for negotiation. Negotiating for the selection of texts or class size is quite a different matter.

6. We must work toward the development of a professional model for negotiations and move away from a model, which while appropriate for labor, has serious limitations for a profession and its peculiar needs.

7. All staff members need to be involved in the development of negotiation agreements so that wise decisions can be made in the developmental stages of a move toward negotiations. Curriculum and instruction must be kept out of the negotiable item category at the outset. It is almost impossible to get them out later.

8. Universities in their teacher education programs must assume some responsibility for telling-it-like-it-is. They must assume some responsibility for educating students about negotiations and its legitimate, helpful role in the school. They must assist in making teachers wise negotiators.

9. University professors must cease contributing to the cleavage between teachers and administrators by planting an anti-administration bias in their undergraduates as a result of their own derogatory and unethical comments about school administrators.

10. As a profession which is at present suffering from some disunity, we need to sit down, take stock of where we are, seek out areas of mutual concern and agreement, and move into a new and necessary cooperative relationship. It needs to happen at all levels, but I doubt that it can happen locally if it does not also happen at the national level.

A final comment. There must be no adversary relationships in the area of curriculum and instruction. We may differ (even strenuously) on matters of salary and related issues, but curriculum and instruction is not a matter of taking sides, of strong will opposing strong will. This is another ballgame altogether. The chief concern is not teachers, board, administrators, nor even parents—it is kids and what's best for them.

If teachers and all educators are to be true to their high calling, then in matters of curriculum and instruction, the students and their needs must come first. I have great fear when decisions about curriculum and instruction are determined on the basis of the exercise of power—no matter on which side the power resides. I don't want any decisions about curriculum and instruction made that way, and I believe that we can find a better way.

Description and Analysis

NEBRASKA, NORTH DAKOTA, SOUTH DAKOTA, AND VERMONT ENACT NEW STATUTES

New laws affecting educational negotiations were received from Nebraska, North Dakota and Vermont just prior to press time. Full texts of these statutes will appear in the September 1969 Negotiation Research Digest. The new South Dakota statute appears in Section C of this issue.

Nebraska has enacted a public employee bargaining law (Legislative Bill 15) which extends the jurisdiction of the state's Court of Industrial Relations to cover labor disputes in public employment. The act specifies that "such court shall have no jurisdiction over any persons, organizations, or school districts subject to the provisions of the Nebraska Teachers' Professional Negotiations Act, sections 79-1287 to 79-1295, Revised Statutes Supplement, 1967, until all provisions of such act have been exhausted without resolution of the dispute involved."

The North Dakota statute (House Bill 175) grants negotiation rights to organizations representing teachers or administrators (an "administrator" must spend at least 50% of his time in administration), and establishes an "education fact finding commission" composed of three members, one appointed by the governor, one by the attorney general, and one by the superintendent of public instruction. The member appointed by the superintendent of public instruction shall be chairman. The commission is empowered to adopt rules and regulations, including those governing representation elections, and the commission may act as a fact-finding panel in impasse situations.

The South Dakota law (Senate Bill No. 150), grants public employees the right to be represented by "labor or employee organizations" in matters concerning grievances or conditions of employment. Agreements reached between employee organizations and the governing body of a governmental agency will be implemented "in the form of an ordinance, resolution, or memorandum of understanding as may be appropriate."

Strikes by public employees are prohibited. Any employee organization urging a strike may be fined an amount not to exceed $50,000. Any individual urging a strike may be fined an amount not to exceed $1,000, or imprisoned for a period not to exceed one year, or both, at the discretion of the court.

The Vermont statute (No. 127 of the Acts of 1969) grants negotiation rights to organizations representing teachers or administrators (excluding superintendent and assistant superintendent), and provides for mediation and fact-finding of impasses through the American Arbitration Association. The law, which does not prohibit strikes, specifies that "No restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction shall be granted in any case brought with respect to any action taken by a representative organization or an official thereof or by a school board or representative thereof in connection with or relating to pending or future negotiations, except on the basis of findings of fact made by a court of competent jurisdiction after due hearing prior to the issuance of the restraining order or injunction that the commencement or continuance of the action poses a clear and present danger to a sound program of school education which in the light of all relevant circumstances it is in the best public interest to prevent. Any restraining order or injunction issued by a court as herein provided shall prohibit only a specific act or acts expressly determined in the findings of fact to pose a clear and present danger."

FORMER SCHOOL BOARD MEMBER DISQUALIFIED AS IMPARTIAL ARBITRATOR

The Connecticut Superior Court, Hartford County, has interpreted the wording of the impasse resolution provision in the state teacher negotiation statute, "an impartial board of three arbitrators," to mean that each individual arbitrator must be impartial.

The case was brought by the West Hartford Education Association, requesting a temporary injunction restraining the Board of Education from continuing arbitration proceedings in which one member of the panel was a former school board member.

The court found for the Association, ruling that "with all due deference to his good faith and personal integrity," the former school board member could not be considered impartial, "and therefore he cannot serve as a member of the impartial board of arbitrators required by the statute."

MICHIGAN COURT FINDS ARBITRATION AWARD TO BE BINDING

The Michigan Circuit Court for the County of Wayne held that the award of the "advisory" arbitrator in the dispute between the City of Dearborn and the Teamsters Union is binding upon the parties.

The contract provides that the Civil Service Board will issue its decision within fifteen days following receipt of the advisory arbitration report. The court found that in the present case the parties had agreed to be bound by the decision of the arbitrator. Further, even if such stipulation had not been made, the Civil Service Board had only fifteen days in which to reject the decision. Since the Board did not act on the report within the fifteen day period, it had no choice but to accept the arbitrator's decision.

NEW YORK BOARD ORDERS REINSTATEMENT OF DISMISSED TEACHER ORGANIZATION PRESIDENT

The New York Public Employment Relations Board found that the president of the Ockawamick Faculty Organization was denied reappointment and tenure because of her organizational activities.

The Board upheld its jurisdiction to rule in the case, stating "The Legislature has mandated this Board to exercise such powers as may be appropriate to effectuate the purposes and provisions of this Act [Public Employees' Fair Employment Act]. Clearly . . . , the power to deal with acts of reprisals against public employees for exercising their rights is necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Act."

The Board ordered the Ockawamick school board to reinstate the teacher as of September 1, 1968 and to compensate her for wages lost as a result of the reprisal action.

"WAGES" INCLUDE ALL COMPENSATION ITEMS

The arbitrator in the Warren Consolidated Schools (Warren, Michigan), contract interpretation case found that the reopener clause for "wages only" provides for renegotiation of all items listed as compensation, and is not limited to the basic salary schedules. Other appropriate "wage" items include compensation for extra duty assignments, insurance coverage and automobile allowance.

The contract provides for reopening the wage package under three conditions, (1) if the average of the base rates of three neighboring districts exceeds the base of the Warren district on February 1, (2) if on February 1, the Bureau of Labor Statistics Cost of Living Index exceeds 4.5% for the preceeding 12 months, or (3) if the Improvement in the State Aid Formula exceeds the base established for 1967-68 by 15%. The Warren Education Association requested renegotiation in face of the increase in the Cost of Living Index. The arbitrator ruled that the request "is quite proper under the Contract between the parties and is hereby granted."

CUT IN ALLOCATION FOR IMPROVEMENTS RECOMMENDED

The fact-finder in the Elmsford, New York, negotiations impasse recommended the adoption of a $750 across-the-board teacher pay raise. He found that certain items in the district's capital improvement program could be eliminated from the budget and financed separately through bond issues. The reallocation of funds budgeted for improvements would make the pay raise possible without requiring an increase in taxes.

COMPARISON OF 1967-68 AND 1968-69 NEGOTIATION SURVEY DATA, PRELIMINARY

The eight pages of tables which follow provide comprehensive data for comparison of the two national surveys of teacher/school board written negotiation agreements conducted in 1967-68 and 1968-69. Both surveys were sent to all school systems with an enrollment of 1,000 or more; data for the two years are completely comparable.

In order to be counted as having a written negotiation agreement (or procedure), a copy of the agreement had to be sent to the NEA Research Division and meet established minimum criteria for an agreement. Further, each agreement from last year's survey had to receive positive validation for the current year by the school system as being unchanged, or be replaced by a copy of the new agreement. Thus, some school systems counted in last year's survey as having agreements are not counted in the 1968-69 survey for one of the following reasons: positive validation of last year's agreement was not received, a copy of the new agreement was not filed, no response was received from the school system to any communication sent to ascertain the status of a negotiation agreement in the system, or the agreement was rescinded. The NEA Research Division has made every effort to make the current study as nearly complete and as accurate as possible; however, data for 1968-69 are preliminary only. Final figures will be available in September 1969.

Systems with agreements in three out of four states (Nebraska, New York, and Texas) that enacted negotiation statutes during 1967 more than doubled during the 1967-68 school year. The fourth state, Minnesota, showed a 10 percent increase in systems with agreements. Maryland and New Jersey passed negotiation statutes late in 1968. A marked increase in systems with agreements is expected in these two states during the 1969-70 school year.

Some of the highlights of the comparison of data from the two surveys are:

- Number of school systems with agreements increased to 2,624 from 2,212 in 1967-68, up 18.6 percent.
- Instructional personnel employed in school systems with agreements increased to 1,043,565 from 909,976 last year, a gain of 14.7 percent.
- 43.4 percent of responding school systems in 1968-69 have negotiation agreements, as compared to 34.8 percent in 1967-68.
- While 52.2 percent of the instructional staff in 1967-68 were employed in school systems with agreements, the comparable 1968-69 figure is 58.7 percent.
- The response rate for the 1968-69 survey was 84.5 percent.
- In the realm of national affiliation of local teacher organizations, the teacher representation by the American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO) increased by 19,026, while the teacher representation of the National Education Association increased by 101,994; the NEA increase was sufficiently large to raise its share of the total national teacher representation from 79.3 percent to 79.9 percent.

When comparing percentages for the two years, one should be sure to take into account the fact that the base, e.g., personnel in systems with negotiation agreements, for 1968-69 is considerably larger than that for 1967-68; in each table the base for computation of percentages is indicated. Thus, a larger figure for 1968-69 may have a smaller percent than for 1967-68 because of the considerably larger base for the 1968-69 computations.

Data from the 1967-68 survey, reproduced here for comparison purposes, was originally published in the June 1968 Negotiation Research Digest.

a/ Exclusive representation for purposes of this table, is based upon national affiliation. If two or more local organizations with the same national affiliation represent the professional staff, the school system is credited to the national organization.

b/ Computation of percents is based upon the number of school systems with organizational representation for the given year.

c/ The Oregon statute precludes organizational representation.

Section 3.

No person exercising any authority, supervision or direction over any public employee shall have the power to authorize, approve, or consent to a strike by one or more employees, and such person shall not authorize, approve or consent to such strike, nor shall any such person discharge or cause any public employee to be discharged or separated from his or her employment because of participation in the submission of a grievance in accordance with the provision of section 2 of this act.

Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to limit, impair, or affect the right of any public employee or his or her representative to the expression or communication of a view, grievance, complaint or opinion on any matter related to the conditions or compensation of public employment or their betterment, so long as the same is not designed to and does not interfere with the full, faithful and proper performance of the duties of employment; nor shall it be construed to require any public employee to perform labor or services against his will.

Subd. 2. Public employees shall have the right to form and join labor or employee organizations, and shall have the right not to form and join such organizations. Public employees shall have the right to designate representatives for the purpose of meeting and conferring with the governmental agency or representatives designated by it with respect to grievances and conditions of employment. It shall be unlawful to discharge or otherwise discriminate against an employee for the exercise of such rights, and the governmental agency or its designated representatives shall be required to meet and confer with the representatives of the employees at reasonable times in connection with such grievances and conditions of employment. It shall be unlawful for any person or group of persons, either directly or indirectly, to intimidate or coerce any public employee to join, or to refrain from joining, a labor or employee organization.

Subd. 3. Organizations of public employees shall be granted recognition by a governmental agency according to the extent to which they represent employees of the governmental agency. Informal recognition shall be granted to any labor or employee organization regardless of the recognition granted to any other labor or employee organization. Informal recognition shall give an organization the right to meet with, confer, and otherwise communicate with the governmental agency or its designated representatives on matters of interest to its members. Formal recognition shall be granted to any labor or employee organization representing a majority of the employees in an appropriate unit. Formal recognition shall give an organization the right to meet with, confer and otherwise communicate with the governmental agency or its designated representatives with the object of reaching a settlement applicable to all employees of the unit.

Subd. 4. When a governmental agency declines to grant formal recognition or when a question concerning the designation of a representation unit is raised by the governmental agency, labor or employee organization, or employees, the labor commissioner or any person designated by him shall, at the request of any of the parties, investigate such question and, after a hearing if requested by any party, rule on the definition of the appropriate representation unit. He shall certify to the parties in writing the proper definition of the unit. In defining the unit, the labor commissioner shall take into consideration, along with other relevant factors, the principles of efficient administration of government, the principles and the coverage of uniform comprehensive position classification and compensation plans in the governmental agency, the history and extent of organization, occupational classification, administrative and supervisory levels of authority, geographical location, and the recommendations of the parties.

Subd. 5. When a question concerning the representative of employees is raised by the governmental agency, labor or employee organization, or employees, the labor commissioner or any person designated by him shall, at the request of any of the parties, investigage such question and certify to the parties in writing, the name or names of the representatives that have been designated or selected. The filing of a petition for the investigation or certification of a representative of employees by any of the parties shall constitute a question within the meaning of this section. In any such investigation, the labor commissioner may provide for an appropriate hearing, and shall take a secret ballot of employees to ascertain such representatives for the purposes of formal recognition. If the labor commissioner has certified a formally recognized representative in a unit of employees as provided in this section, he shall not be required to consider the matter again for a period of one year unless it appears to him that sufficient reason exists. The labor commissioner may promulgate such rules and regulations as may be appropriate to carry out the provisions of subdivisions 4 and 5 of this section.

Section 8.

If a tentative settlement is reached between a labor or employee organization or organizations and the designated representatives of the governmental agency, such representatives shall recommend such settlement to the governing body or officer having authority to take action. The governing body or officer shall as soon as practicable consider the recommendations and take such action, if any, upon them as it or he deems appropriate. If a settlement is reached with a labor or employee organization or organizations and the governing body, such governing body shall implement the settlement in the form of an ordinance, resolution, or memorandum of understanding as may be appropriate. If the settlement requires the adoption of a law or charter amendment to implement it fully, the governmental agency shall make every reasonable effort to propose and secure the enactment of the law or charter amendment.

EDUCATION ASSN. v. BOARD OF EDUCATION

Connecticut Superior Court,
Hartford County

WEST HARTFORD EDUCATION ASSOCIATION v. WEST HARTFORD BOARD OF EDUCATION et al.,
No. 153716, February 23, 1968

GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT

–Construction of statute–Connecticut Act ▶ 100.07 ▶ 94.56

Provision for an "impartial board of three arbitrators" in Connecticut Act granting certificated professional employees the right to organize (SLL 16:259) is construed to mean that each individual arbitrator must be impartial. – West Hartford Education Assn. v. West Hartford Board of Education (Conn SuperCt, 1968) 68:2371.

Former member and chairman of county board of education does not qualify as an "impartial" arbitrator, in dispute between professional employees association and board of education, under Connecticut Act requiring an "impartial board of three arbitrators" (SLL 16:259). –West Hartford Education Assn. v. West Hartford Board of Education (Conn SuperCt, 1968) 68:2371.

Prayer for temporary injunction restraining Board of Education from proceeding further with arbitration proceedings. Injunction granted.

Hoppin, Carey & Powell, Hartford, Conn., for plaintiff.

Shipman & Goodwin, Hartford, Conn., for defendants.

PALMER, Judge:–This is a proceeding held on the prayer in the plaintiff's complaint for a temporary injunction restraining the defendants from proceeding further with certain arbitration proceedings until the final determination of this cause. The plaintiff is a voluntary unincorporated association whose membership is composed of certificated professional employees of the defendant West Hartford board of education, hereinafter sometimes called the board. The defendant Charles O. Richter is the superintendent of schools in West Hartford.

The plaintiff has been designated as the exclusive representative of the certificated professional employees of the board for the purpose of negotiating with respect to salary schedules and personnel policies relative to the employment of certificated professional employees. On February 1, 1967 the board voted to designate Richter "as its authorized representative to meet with the teachers association [the plaintiff] for the purpose of bargaining as provided by § 10-153d of the General Statutes. The plaintiff and the board, acting through its representative Richter, have attempted to negotiate the terms and conditions of employment of the certificated professional employees of the board. They have twice disagreed as to the terms and conditions of employment, and have twice submitted the matters in disagreement to the secretary of the state board of education for mediation, pursuant to § 10-153f(a) of the General Statutes. These attempts at mediation failed to resolve their disagreement.

Section 10-153f(b) provides: "In the event mediation by the secretary of the state board of education . . . fails to resolve the disagreement, either party may submit the unresolved issue or issues to an impartial board of three arbitrators. Each party to the dispute shall designate one member of the board and the arbitrators so selected shall select the third. The decision of such board, after hearing all the issues, shall be advisory and shall not be binding upon the parties to the dispute" The plaintiff elected to submit the unresolved issues to such arbitration and has designated one arbitrator. The board has designated the defendant Willis G. Parsons, Jr., as an arbitrator. It is the plaintiff's claim that the board's designation of Parsons does not comply with the requirements of § 10-153f(b) because "Parsons is not impartial in respect to the matters at issue." At the hearing hereon, it was stipulated that the sole issue is the question of the impartiality of Parsons and that if the undersigned judge finds that Parsons is not impartial, then a temporary injunction should issue.

The defendant Parsons is an attorney who practices in Hartford and resides in West Hartford. He was a member of the defendant board of education for a period of eight years from 1957 to 1965, and he was chairman of that board for six years from 1959 to 1965. He served with three members of the board whose terms expired just prior to the hearing hereon. The defendant Richter, who is the board's authorized representative to meet with the plaintiff for the purpose of bargaining, was hired as superintendent of schools when Parsons was chairman of the board. After Richter was hired as superintendent, Parsons acted as his personal attorney in connection with several matters. In the spring of 1966, when Parsons was no longer a member of the board, he acted as Richter's attorney in respect to the negotiation of the renewal of Richter's contract of employment with the board. In this connection, he communicated with one of the present members of the board (a defendant herein) who acted for the board on that occasion.

While Parsons was a member of the board, Richter invited the members of the school board to social functions at his home from time to time, and Parsons has been at Richter's home on such occasions. Richter has been at Parson's home as a guest, and they have met at many school functions, retirement parties and graduation ceremonies. About four or five months before the hearing hereon and before Parsons' selection as arbitrator by the board, he was invited to Richter's home with a number of other persons, including former members of the board, where there was a general discussion of the history of the controversy that later resulted in the present action. At that time, Richter and members of his staff put forward the board's position in respect to the chronology of events and the impasse between the board and the teachers. Parsons testified that at that time there was no question in his mind that he was getting the board's version of what happened; that he did not think it was an attempt to be totally dispassionate; and that he accepted it as such. Much of the discussion at the meeting related to the public relations aspect of the situation in the sense of the public's understanding of the problem between the board and the teachers. Comments from those present were solicited, and several suggestions were made.

During the time that Parsons was a member and chairman of the board, he had occasion to consider and deal with some of the issues which are now the subject of disagreement between the board and the teachers and will be presented to the board of arbitrators, although the exact items as to which there is now disagreement were not before the board during his incumbency. None of the present members of the board served during Parsons' membership, but three former members who did serve while Parsons was chairman were members of the board until shortly before the hearing hereon and consequently did participate in regard to the negotiations and discussions with the plaintiff until just before the hearing. The board's present stance in the disagreement with the teachers was determined by a board of which they were members.

As previously noted, § 10-153f(b) provides that if mediation fails, either party may submit the unresolved issues "to an impartial board of three arbitrators," one to be designated by each party to the dispute and the two so selected to select the third. This statute became effective on June 18, 1965, and does not appear to have been the subject of prior judicial consideration. It must first be determined what is meant by the words "impartial board of three arbitrators."

The thrust of the defendants' argument, as set forth in their brief, is that the obligations of strict impartiality are to be taken as applying only to the third or neutral arbitrator, that is, the arbitrator selected by the two arbitrators designated by the parties to the dispute. The defendants cite law to the effect that an arbitrator selected by one of the contesting parties is effectually an advocate of that party; the third party mutually selected is expected to be the impartial and final judge; and, unlike ordinary arbitration where the arbitrators are expected to be neutral and disinterested, it is anticipated that the labor and management members of a tripartite arbitration board will be somewhat partisan.

The statute in question, § 10-153f(b), does not admit of the construction urged by the defendants. "In the construction of the statutes, words and phrases shall be construed according to the commonly approved usage of the language. . . ." General Statutes § 1-1; State v. Benson, 153 Conn. 209, 214. The statutory language, "impartial board of three arbitrators," can only mean a board consisting of three arbitrators, each of whom is impartial. If one arbitrator is not impartial, then the board is not impartial, and the statute would be violated. Accordingly, the mandate of the statute is that each individual arbitrator must be impartial.

This conclusion is bulwarked by the fact that the statute was enacted in 1965 to deal with the specific problem of disputes between boards of education and their professional employees. Such disputes are the subject of intense public interest, because public school business is public business. The statute provides that the decision of the impartial board of three arbitrators "shall be advisory and shall not be binding upon the parties to the dispute." The principal value of an advisory decision lies not only in its effect on the immediate parties to the dispute but also, and of equal importance, in its effect on the educational community affected by the dispute.

Clearly, an advisory decision arrived at by a board of three genuinely impartial arbitrators will be much more persuasive and influential in respect to the board of education, the professional employees, and the general public of the affected community than a decision by a board consisting of two sympathizers representing the respective parties and one neutral impartial person selected by the other two arbitrators. The purpose of an advisory decision is to influence and persuade the parties to accept that decision. Obviously, a decision by three impartial arbitrators will serve this purpose far better than a decision by a board with one impartial arbitrator. Just as obviously, a decision by a wholly impartial board will carry greater weight with the concerned public, and the attitude of the public is of crucial importance to both the board of education and the professional employees in the settlement of their disputes. The very fact that Richter held a meeting at his home where the public relations aspect of the situation and the public's understanding of the problems between the teachers and the board were discussed underlines and points up the extreme importance of public opinion in a situation of this kind. It may often be decisive. An advisory decision by three impartial arbitrators is more helpful and beneficial to the public than a decision by a board containing just one impartial arbitrator. The underlying legislative purpose of providing a means for the resolution of such disputes can best be served by a construction of the statute that requires a board of three impartial arbitrators.

The final question to be considered is whether Parsons qualifies as an impartial arbitrator within the meaning of the statute, and to make this determination it is necessary to ascertain the commonly approved usage of the word "impartial." General Statutes § 1-1. "Impartial" has been defined to mean not partial, not favoring one party more than another, unprejudiced, disinterested, indifferent, not biased in favor of one party more than another, not disposed to prefer one party more than another, and not subject to bias or influence. See Thompson v. Beacon Valley Rubber Co., 56 Conn. 493, 498; 42 C.J.S. 399; 20 Words & Phrases 289 (Perm. Bd.). "Impartiality" means "[f]reedom from bias, prejudice, passion or interest." 42 C.J.S. 399.

It should be emphasized that there is no question whatever about Parsons' honesty or his integrity. He is a highly respected practicing attorney, and no claim is made or can be made that he would be likely to be guilty of any conscious partiality or bias in performing his duties as arbitrator. But the issue is whether Parsons is impartial in the commonly approved usage and meaning of that word, and this determination must be made in the light of his relationship to the persons involved and the issues which are to be presented to the board of three arbitrators, of which he has been designated as one member by the defendant board of education. Parsons was a member of the defendant board for eight years, and its chairman for six years; he has been the personal attorney for Richter, the authorized representative of the board to bargain with the plaintiff, and is a friend of Richter of some years' standing. He attended a meeting at Richter's home at which Richter put forward the board's position with respect to the chronology of events which led to the present impasse between the board and the teachers. While a member of the board, he dealt with the teachers' association as an adverse party in respect to disputes with the board. Three former members of the board who served with Parsons participated in his selection by the board as an arbitrator. They participated in the board's determination of its position in regard to the issues in question.

In the face of these facts, Parsons would not be human if he could remain uninfluenced, unbiased and unprejudiced. It is almost inevitable that the effect of his relationship with the persons involved and with the issues in dispute is such that he would not act as arbitrator without an unconscious bias or interest in favor of the positions taken by the board in respect to the issues between the parties. He can hardly be said to be indifferent between the parties. In a word, and with all due deference to his good faith and personal integrity, he cannot under the facts of this case to be held to be impartial, and therefore he cannot serve as a member of the impartial board of arbitrators required by the statute.

As the parties stipulated that a temporary injunction should issue if the defendant Parsons is found not to be impartial, it is ordered that a temporary injunction may issue restraining the defendants from proceeding further with arbitration proceedings in accordance with § 10-153f(b) of the General Statutes until the final determination of this cause, or until further order of the court.

OPINION

THE COURT: I am prepared to rule on what is before me now, and then, as I indicated, I have to adjourn until three o'clock. At that time I will say something about the negative bank matter.

The question we have reached in this petition for an order to show cause is whether the City should be required to carry out the terms of the findings of M. David Keefe. Now, the order to show cause does not make that very clear. It is ambiguous. But, clearly, the complaint makes it clear, and we have conducted this hearing on the basis of whether the finding of Mr. Keefe is binding or not. That will not solve the issue of what the findings mean, and that is something that we will have to look at later.

I think, of the two issues before the Court, the first is whether there was an agreement, as set forth on Page 6 of Mr. Keefe's document, that the parties stipulated that the decision would reflect the advisory arbitrator's findings of fact and recommendations. In other words, the question here is whether the Civil Service Commission agreed to be bound by them.

The second issue relates to the effect of the Civil Service Commission's failure to hold a meeting within fifteen days after the advisory arbitrator's report, which is required in Step 6 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.

On the first issue, we have had the testimony of two people and several exhibits have been received. The testimony of M. David Keefe indicates it was the stipulation of all the parties to the agreement that his decision was to be issued by the Civil Service Commission, that the only thing the Civil Service Commission had to do was to formally adopt it.

He contends that all the parties agreed that they would be bound by his findings. He testified he was very upset with this when he got out there, because he felt he was being imposed upon, and the State was imposed upon in that he was called in as a fact finder and when he got out there he found himself in an arbitrator's position. He thought this was an anomalous position, but nonetheless, he went ahead. When he billed the City for his services, the bill was declined by the City, and he said that he did not press the bill.

Mr. Sherman, on the other hand, testified that there was no stipulation. He denied completely the remarks made by Mr. Keefe.

There is a clear issue framed here, a factual issue, as to what did happen.

The Court is going to accept the testimony of Mr. Keefe. I do so because the testimony that he has given is in complete accord with the language that he used and the observations he has made in his findings of February 1st, long before this matter was in litigation.

If you will note in the opinion explaining the award, Mr. Keefe takes the first five or six pages discussing the entire matter which is before us, pointing out its unusual nature in labor negotiations, and pointing out the stipulation of the parties. He testified to that under oath. He points out the unusual nature of the procedure and devotes a great deal of time in his discussion on this. He testified that he had this understanding.

I am not saying that Mr. Sherman is lying. I don't intend to say that. There may have been some ambiguity. But it seems to me, clearly, that what the parties intended was that the advisory arbitrator's recommendations and findings of fact would be the binding ones that would bind the Civil Service Board, and I will find, as a matter of fact, that this was the understanding.

But we must go further into this matter with reference to the legal questions, the effect of Step 6 of Article 6 of the Collective Bargaining Agreement. The Agreement provides, unequivocally, that after considering the report of the advisory arbitrator, the Civil Service Board shall issue a written decision with [sic] fifteen days. It has been testified that a meeting was attempted to be called on February 17th, fourteen days after the receipt of the arbitrator's report; that only one commissioner was there; that one commissioner was in Florida, on vacation, I presume, he having left on January 31st; that one commissioner was at home recuperating from serious surgery and unable to be there.

It appears to me that this language is mandatory, and the Civil Service Board has the duty to issue its decision within fifteen days. There is no out in the language of the contract at all. It says it shall issue a decision within fifteen days.

In addition, in this instance, I hold that, because of the stipulation, the Board had no authority to do anything except ratify the decision of Mr. Keefe.

Furthermore, even if they did have the authority, there was no adequate showing why a meeting could not have been held. The one commissioner who was on vacation, left January 31, 1969, and the testimony was that he would not be back until March the 7th. The fact remains, however, that he left knowing that this award was going to be in almost anytime, because the hearing had been held on the 17th. He left knowing his responsibility and knowing that the other commissioner was ill and would be unable to attend. It is perfectly possible to get back from Florida in a matter of less than a half a day by airplane.

I certainly don't think that the City of Dearborn can unilaterally avoid any responsibility under the fifteen day provision by having one of the commissioners out of town and not getting him back for the meeting so there can be a quorum.

I think the meeting has to be held in fifteen days, and I think it is the responsibility of the Civil Service Board to see that it is held in fifteen days. If it is not held within fifteen days, the Board waives any right to pass upon the determination of the arbitrator.

I also think it is very interesting to observe the comments of the arbitrator, Mr. Keefe, on the collective bargaining arrangement, where, after the award of the arbitrator, the Board, which represents one side of the dispute, is able to accept or reject it. It is true that this issue is not before me, but there is some question whether there is sufficient mutuality to make this provision of the contract valid.

For the reasons that I have given, I will find on this order to show cause that the award of the arbitrator is binding insofar as these proceedings are concerned, and that the City has a duty to carry out its terms.

I want to make one other comment. A question was raised yesterday as to the Court's jurisdiction in this matter. The claim was that an unfair labor practice had been filed with the Labor Board and, therefore, the administrative process has not been completed.

I feel that even though an unfair labor practice has been filed with the Labor Board, under Smith v. Evening News, 370 US 793, the Court retains jurisdiction on this matter insofar as the award of Mr. Keefe is concerned. The parties have gone as far as they can and there is no other forum where they can seek relief. They have gone through all of the steps of the Collective Bargaining Agreement, so I think, clearly, under Smith v. Evening News, I have jurisdiction.

I will hold on the order to show cause that the defendant will be ordered to comply with and fully carry out the terms of the award of Mr. Keefe.

This leaves other issues on this order to show cause undisposed of. Number one, which I will hear you on this afternoon, is the one raised by Mr. Guy at the end of his argument; namely, whether this means the negative bank is in or out. I don't know whether I have the right to interpret an award. This is a matter I will hear from you on this afternoon.

There are other matters raised by the counter-claim, and the motion for accelerated judgment. Obviously, the counter-claim cannot be disposed of in this type of hearing. The issue there will have to be framed and the matter will have to proceed in its normal way.

If there is anything more to be heard on the motion for summary judgment, I will hear that this afternoon at three o'clock. We will recess until three o'clock, at which time we will consider whether I have the power to interpret this agreement, and if I do, whether the agreement prohibits the so-called negative bank. I will also hear anything more that there is to say on the motion for accelerated judgment.

We will recess until three o'clock.

Afternoon Session

OPINION

THE COURT: All right, gentlemen, It is obvious that this Court does not have before it any interpretation of the contract as to whether there is a guarantee of forty hours work per week.

That is not before the Court, is not part of this lawsuit, and I want that to be absolutely clear. The determination of that is for another day. We are concerned solely in this lawsuit with the meaning of the arbitrator's award, with reference to compulsory time off furloughs. So, let me first look at that.

Now, I think the arbitrator's award is perfectly clear. It says that the City cannot compel an employee to accept compensatory time off furlough, unless the employee fails to elect a time of his own choosing in accordance with a formula which is spelled forth in some detail in the discussion of Mr. Keefe. Certainly, there is no question but what the City cannot compel compulsory time off furloughs of employees who elect a time of their own choosing in accordance with the formula set forth. That is absolutely clear, and I don't think it is in the slightest bit ambiguous. I think Mr. Keefe has put it in words of one syllable and his discussion supports it.

The other question is whether the award of Mr. Keefe is applicable to the dispute arising as of January 6th, where the 29 men were sent home when the shift was cancelled. It is the argument of the City of Dearborn that this arbitration award cannot be binding on that, that that happened prior to the time of the hearing and prior to the time of the award, that this was an administrative decision taken by the City and at that time entered into the payroll records.

It is the position of the Union that even though this is so, it was merely an administrative decision, that it is subject to change, and that until such time as it was communicated to the Union, the Union had no opportunity to do anything about it.

The Union further claims that if the City had done this, it had a clear obligation at the time of Mr. Keefe's hearing and prior to his determination to advise Mr. Keefe that this is what it was doing so that if there were any question of this being considered in the disposition of the matter, it could have been considered by Mr. Keefe. It was not brought to Mr. Keefe's attention by the City. It was not brought to his attention by the Union because the Union people at the time did not know about it.

Therefore, the basic question of whether the incident of January 16th is covered by this award boils down to the question of whether a decision to require compulsory time off furloughs is effective as of the time it is put on the payroll or until it is finally communicated to the employee. It is argued strongly by the Union that it could be changed at any time, that it was purely an internal matter and until it was known by the employee, the issue could not have been joined. They also claim the decision was not finally made until then because the City could always change its mind up until the time it actually communicated its decision to the employee.

I think the question is, on this phase of the dispute, a close one. I emphasize that my holding has nothing whatever to do with whether there was to be a mandatory payment for forty hours. That is not before me.

In view of the fact it was known to the City at the arbitration proceeding and not brought before the arbitrator, and in view of the further fact it was not communicated to the employees until after the arbitration award, the date of the communication to the employees would be the controlling date, and on this issue the arbitrator's award would apply.

I think the language of the award is absolutely clear and I couldn't put it any clearer. For the reasons given, I think it should apply to the January 6th situation because it was known to the City and not communicated to Mr. Keefe at the time of the hearing, and it was not communicated to the employees until after the award of Mr. Keefe. Further, until it was communicated to the employees, it could have been unilaterally changed by the City at any time.

You may present an order.

The only thing remaining is the counter-claim, which will have to be answered. It will work up the call in its usual time.

An order may be presented on the disposition I have made today.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Thank you.

STATE OF NEW YORK PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT RELATIONS BOARD

In the Matter of FAITH GAGNIER and THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF CENTRAL SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 2 OF THE TOWNS OF CLAVARACK, GHENT, HILLSDALE, AUSTERLITZ, LIVINGSTON AND TAGHKANIC, COMMONLY KNOWN AS THE OCKAWAMICK CENTRAL SCHOOL DISTRICT	DECISION AND ORDER CASE NO. R-015

DECISION AND ORDER

Upon a charge filed by Faith Gagnier, employed as a teacher by the Board of Education of the Ockawamick Central School District, Counsel to the Public Employment Relations Board issued a complaint alleging that she was denied reappointment and tenure by her employer because of her activities on behalf of an employee organization, the Ockawamick Teachers Association.

The answer interposed by Respondent Employer denied that Gagnier was denied tenure because of her activities on behalf of the employee organization. Further, Respondent asserted the following defenses: (a) that the Public Employment Relations Board (herein referred to as the Board) lacks jurisdiction to hear or determine this claim; (b) that the denial of tenure was made pursuant to the provisions of Section 3013 of the Education Law and is not subject to review by this Board; (c) that if Gagnier feels aggrieved by Respondent's action, her sole remedy is that provided by Subdivision 4 of Section 3013 of the Education Law.

A hearing was held on this complaint before a hearing officer appointed by this Board. At the hearing, attorneys for Respondent declined to participate on the ground that this Board lacked jurisdiction. The hearing officer proceeded with the hearing and found that Gagnier was denied tenure "to punish Complainant for her association activities." He recommended that the Respondent be directed to employ Gagnier as of September 1, 1968.

The report and recommendation of the hearing officer are now before this Board. The attorneys for Respondent have not seen fit to file briefs with this Board on the issues of law raised in Respondent's answer. However, as this is the first time that this Board has had to consider these issues, we shall proceed to rule on the merits of said defenses.

Respondent asserts in its answer that Article 14 of the Civil Service Law (Public Employees' Fair Employment Act, hereinafter referred to as the "Act") does not confer or grant jurisdiction to this Board to hear or determine claims that a public employer is guilty of reprisal against an employee.

Admittedly, the Act does not in haec verba grant power to this Board to hear and determine claims of reprisal against public employees. However, Section 205.5(k) provides that this Board shall have the power "To make . . . such rules and regulations . . . and to exercise such other powers as may be appropriate to effectuate the purposes and provisions of this article."

The purpose of this Act is in part "to promote harmonious and cooperative relationships between government and its employees."[1] This purpose and policy was in the judgment of the legislature to be best effectuated by granting to public employees the right of organization and representation.[2] Thus, the Legislature, in Section 202 of the Act, granted to public employees the right to form, join and participate in any employee organization of their own choosing.

If this grant of rights is to be meaningful and to effectuate the purpose of the Act, then these rights must be exercised in an atmosphere of free choice and not in an area of intimidation or fear of reprisal. If a public employer could with impunity threaten a public employee or transfer, suspend, lay off or discharge him for exercising these rights, then the legislative enactment would be so meaningless as to constitute an act of supreme futility. Clearly this was not the intent of the Legislature.

This Board is charged with the administration and implementation of all of the provisions of the Act, which includes the grant of rights in Section 202. The Legislature has mandated this Board to exercise such powers as may be appropriate to effectuate the purposes and provisions of this Act. Clearly for the reasons stated above, the power to deal with acts of reprisals against public employees for exercising their rights is necessary to effectuate the purposes of this Act.

Public employees are prohibited from engaging in a strike; the public expects such employees to obey the law. Certainly when the same employees are granted rights, the public expects the public employers to recognize these rights, to act in accord with them, and not to act in derogation of them.

Respondent further asserts in its answer that the granting or denial of tenure is within the absolute discretion of the Board of Education and is, therefore, not reviewable by this Board.[3] This Board does not dispute that Respondent has broad discretion in granting or denying tenure. However, in this proceeding the Board is simply determining whether the employee was penalized for exercising the rights granted to her by the Legislature. The agency mandated to effectuate this Act is this Board, and not the public employer, be it a Board of Education or otherwise.

Thus, we conclude that this Board does have jurisdiction to hear and determine this claim.

On the merits of the claim, we agree with and adopt the conclusion of the hearing officer.

Gagnier has been employed as a teacher for nine years. She was first employed by Respondent for the academic year 1965-66. Prior to this, she had been employed for three years by the school district in Dover Plains, New York. Her supervising principal at Dover Plains described her as an "excellent teacher" and she was recommended by him to Respondent "without reservation."

At the conclusion of each of her first two years with Respondent, she was commended for her work by her supervisors. During her third year she was recommended for reappointment and tenure by Grade Supervising Principal Calvin and Supervising Principal Benson. On March 8, 1968, the District Superintendent Mapes recommended Gagnier along with six other teachers for tenure, stating he found these seven teachers to be "competent, efficient and satisfactory".

Respondent Board of Education, at a meeting held on March 11, 1968, accepted the recommendation as to the other six and granted them tenure but voted against tenure as to Gagnier. Two members of Respondent Board testified that this was the first time in their experience where tenure was denied countermanding the recommendation of the professional administrators.

Gagnier was President of the Ockawamick Faculty Organization, which organization was recognized by Respondent as the negotiating representative of the teaching faculty employed by Respondent. In the summer of 1967 Gagnier called Mr. Giannattasio, president of Respondent, concerning the mechanics of recognition. During the conversation, Giannattasio asked her her year of employment and she replied that it was to be her third year. He cautioned her that it was her most important year, obviously alluding to tenure.

In January of 1968, Gagnier was invited to speak to a faculty group in New Lebanon concerning negotiations "under the Taylor Law". After this talk, she was called in by her supervisor who told her that with reference to her talk at New Lebanon she was getting "quite a reputation as a rabblerouser".

On March 5, 1968, a letter was delivered to members of Respondent Board complaining that the negotiator for Respondent, Giannattasio, did not have the power to reach an agreement. This letter was signed by Gagnier. Giannattasio was described as angry at receiving this letter.

Shortly thereafter, Respondent Board voted to deny Gagnier tenure.

Giannattasio testified at the hearing herein. When questioned as to reasons for denying tenure over the recommendation of the professional administrators, he stated he relied upon what he had heard from other Board members and people on the outside. It was to the effect that Gagnier did not relate well to parents. However, Giannattasio was unable to identify the Board member or the source of the complaint. Similarly, he mentioned a report that complainant spent too much time away from her classroom, but could not identify who made the complaint. Giannattasio did not observe Gagnier in the classroom, rather the only opportunity he had to observe her was at the negotiating table.

[3]Section 3013, Education Law.

On the record, we find the conclusion of the hearing officer to be well supported by the record. Considering all of the facts herein, particularly Giannattasio's vagueness as to the basis for denial of tenure, coupled with the fact that her immediate supervisors found Gagnier to be competent and efficient, and that it was the first time Respondent rejected the recommendations of the professional administrators warrants a finding that Gagnier was denied tenure because of her activities on behalf of an employee organization.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED THAT Respondent offer to reinstate Gagnier to her former employment as of September 1, 1968 and to compensate her for wages lost as a result of Respondent's act.

BACKGROUND AND POSITION OF THE PARTIES

The collective bargaining agreement between the Board of Education of Warren Consolidated Schools and the Warren Education Association was entered into on June 14, 1967, effective September 1, 1967, and continuing in effect until January 26, 1970. Article XXIII, Section 2 provides as follows:

> On or before November 1, 1969, either side may give the other notice, by certified mail, of its desire to terminate, amend or modify this Agreement. Upon receipt of this notice by the other side, arrangements shall promptly be made for negotiations to commence. In the event that neither side gives notice to the other of its intention to terminate, amend or modify the Agreements by November 1, 1969, then the Agreement shall automatically be extended on the same terms for another year and, similarly, from year to year thereafter, with the notification date of intent to terminate, amend or modify beginning November 1 of the successor year.
> It being agreed that in the event the average of the base rate of Pontiac School District, Utica Community School District, and Hazel Park School District exceeds the base rate of W.C.S. on any ensuing February 1, this agreement will be declared open for negotiations of wages only.
>
> Likewise negotiations will be reopened on any ensuing February 1 if during the preceeding 12 months prior to the particular February 1 the B.L.S. Cost of Living Index exceeds 4.5% or The Improvement in the State Aid Formula exceeds the base established for the 67-68 school year by 15%.

The WEA points out that the B.L.S. Cost of Living Index having risen in excess of 4.5%, it requested, prior to February 1, 1969, further negotiations of "wages only" in accordance with the above quoted section. A dispute has arisen between the parties as to the scope of such negotiations and the following questions are before the Arbitrator:

1. Are "wages" as used in Section 2 of Article XXIII synonymous with "compensation" dealt with in Article XII, including the exhibits thereto?

2. If not, does the term "wages" include:
   (a) Schedule A, and/or
   (b) Schedule B, and/or
   (c) Schedule C, and/or
   (d) Schedule D, and/or
   (e) Insurance under Section 3 of Article XII, and/or
   (f) Automobile Allowance under Section 4 of Article XII, and/or
   (g) Compensation for department chairmen under addenda of September 1967 and September 1968?

The position of the WEA is that the term "wages" as used in Article XXIII, Section 2, is synonymous with the term "compensation" as used in the title to Article XII and includes all economic matters referred to in such Article and exhibits thereto, and other elements of teacher compensation.

The WEA says as to wages, a term which is not defined in Article XII, means in public education in Michigan a part of a "wage package" to include such annual salaries and other economic benefits which are part of the total remuneration teachers receive for professional services. The WEA says in this sense "wages" mean the total "compensation given or to be given by . . . an employer to a hired person or employee. . . ." (Cookes v. Lymperis, 178 Mich. 299, 304 (1913).)

"The words 'salary' and 'compensation' are, in general usage, interchangeable and are synonymous in most definitions." Treu v. Kirkwood, 255 P. (2d) 412 (Cal., 1953)

The WEA contends that in collective bargaining agreements "pay" and "wages" are recognized as meaning the same thing, and cites Eagle Rubber Co. 17 LA 379. It gives another example where a contract provided that "there shall be no reduction in salaries during the life of this agreement, and held that the employer could not discontinue a Christmas bonus which had come to be expected as part of the rewards of Service." (Tonawanda Publishing Co., 43 LA 892) The WEA cites other results in other cases between various companies and unions where a bonus was discontinued in the face of a clause which preserved "wage rates," where "wages" includes a clothing allowance to the employee which is an integral part of compensation for services rendered; or a uniform allowance to public employees in the police department; and in Brampton Wollen Co. v. Local Union 112, 95 N.H. 255, 11 LAW 487, where the court noted that a collective agreement must be viewed as a whole, that the use of the word "pay" rather than "wages" was immaterial, and that vacation payments were properly included in the total compensation package.

The WEA says that the parties made it clear in Article XII what they intended to include in the teacher's wage package. It says the title "Compensation" was used to describe all types of benefits, both on an annual and hourly basis, including payments which were direct as well as indirect. Under "Compensation" in Article XII, the parties specifically dealt with "annual salaries" and referred to three Schedules, A-C, found in pages 23-27 of the Agreement. The WEA states that the schedules, explicitly incorporated by reference to the "Compensation" Article, cover a variety of economic matters including credit for outside teaching experience, vocational experience, and military service; differential for extra training, and compensation for non-curricular assignments and salary increment for work beyond the normal school day; plus in Section 2 of the "Compensation" Article, the parties dealt with certain hourly rates for teaching services and referred explicitly to Schedule D on page 28 of the Agreement. It points to Section 3 and its reference to insurance benefits furnished by the Board, while Section 4 of the same "Compensation" Article deals with an allowance for automobile expenses. The WEA maintains that all of these items are customarily embraced within the word "compensation" and describe various direct economic rewards for performing teaching services, and that all are properly open for renegotiation under Article XXIII.

As to Article XXIII, Section 2 confining the reopener to negotiation of "wages" only, the WEA says the purpose here was to prevent renegotiation during the contract term of any of the non-economic provisions of the Agreement and to confine discussions to economic matters.

The WEA says it agrees that non-economic provisions are not subject to reopening, but submits that the Board should be directed to bargain with the WEA on all "wage" items and that this includes every element of "compensation" in the teachers' pay check or the other fringes set forth in Article XII.

The WEA argues that decisions of the Michigan Labor Mediation Board, following decisions of the NLRB, make it clear that there is a continuing statutory duty of a public employer under the Public Employment Relations Act to bargain concerning all of the ingredients of teachers' compensation. It maintains that a determination that the Board is free to refuse to negotiate on any element of "wages" would only invite further litigation before the Michigan Labor Mediation Board. It concludes that the Board of Education has the burden of showing that the Contract has relieved it of its statutory responsibility to negotiate on all economic matters with its employees.

The Board states that under the provisions of Paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article XXIII of the Agreement, the only factor which would open the Agreement for negotiations is that covering the B.L.S. Cost of Living Index. It is the Board's contention that if any of the conditions set forth in the aforementioned Paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article XXIII of the Agreement prevailed, the Agreement would be declared open for negotiations of wages only as set forth in Schedule A-1, Schedule A-2, and Schedule A-3 of the Agreement between the parties. The Board cites the opening paragraph of Schedule A of the Agreement which reads as follows:

> Schedules A1, A2 and A3 reflect wages to be prorated over the effective period.

The Board contends that it is the employees' request that if the Agreement is opened for negotiations under any of the provisions set forth in Paragraphs 2 and 3 of Section 2 of Article XXIII of the Agreement between the parties that the negotiations would involve not only Schedules A-1, A-2 and A-3 which apply to wages, but that it opens negotiations for all economic items between the parties hereto; the Board uses as an illustration the compensation for co-curricular assignments set forth in Schedule B of the Agreement.

Both the Board and the WEA invite the Arbitrator's attention to Article V, Paragraph 3, Section 5 of the Agreement which states:

> The arbitrator shall have no power to alter, add to, or subtract from the terms of this Agreement.

DISCUSSION

The word "wages" as used in Article XII covers what the parties meant to be included in the teachers' wage package. In this connotation, the term "Compensation" was used to describe various benefits, both on an annual and an hourly basis. The Schedules A-1, A-2 and A-3 are then covered, as are Schedules B, C and D. All are properly open for renegotiation under Article XXIII as they are properly provided for under Article XII, Compensation, which includes the pay package, and in this instance compensation for performing teaching service.

It is not uncommon in collective bargaining agreements in private as well as public agreements to leave an opener on economic matters. This the parties did under their own Contract, and as they have both said, the Arbitrator "shall have no power to alter, add to, or subtract from the terms of this Agreement."

The Association's request for an opener on wages under Article XXIII is quite proper under the Contract between the parties and is hereby granted.

PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT RELATIONS BOARD OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

In the Matter of

ELMSFORD SCHOOL FACULTY ASSOCIATION,

and

ELMSFORD SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 9.

The fact-finder recommended that certain items be excised from the school district's capital improvement program in order to provide funds for an across-the-board wage increase for teachers without increasing taxes.

Background

There are at present 82 teachers employed in the school system, plus 6 administrators. In 1968-1969, there will be 85 teachers. ESFA is about thirty years old. It has been the sole teachers' association in the district. It was certified by PERB to represent the teachers, exclusive of administrators, in bargaining with the district, concerning wages, rates of pay, hours, and other conditions of employment. The parties have been bargaining since December, 1967 without success. Each of the principals herein takes a stand which to all purposes appears to be adamant, final, and conclusive. As a result, until the advent of Mr. Herold, there was a complete lack of understanding on the part of ESFA as to what it was entitled to. Likewise, the district had little or no understanding as to its rights.

There is an obvious resistance to the surrender of managerial prerogatives, which is understandable. However, this invasion will be understood by the district as negotiations are continued and reach a conclusion.

There are two other important factors that must be mentioned before we can undertake a discussion of the merits of the positions of the respective parties. One is the size of the community (and the assessed valuation, which is the source of taxes), and the other is on what the tax base is bottomed.

Taking the last first, we note that there is hardly any heavy or large industry in Elmsford which can establish a wide tax base. Consequently, the tax for the most part falls on the shoulders of the small householder. Unlike other communities, Elmsford is only one square mile in area. The assessed valuation in 1967-1968 was $34,717,125. The proposed assessed valuation for 1968-1969 is $35,603,525. As a general proposition, there is only light industry in Elmsford. It is not blessed with a platinum mile like its sister community Harrison, nor an area comparable to some of the other communities in Westchester County.

ESFA's Proposal

ESFA proposes that its teachers in all categories receive increases exclusive of increments of at least $1,500 for the period 1968-1969. They seek a one-year agreement. Budgetwise, this would mean a sum of at least $123,000 more for the period 1968-1969. Exhibit "A" shows the district's present salary structure and policy in detail. The variance between the figures submitted by ESFA and Exhibit "A" shows the chasm that separates both parties.

It is the district's contention that it cannot under any circumstances offer a major increase. Such a stand cannot be considered since in a market that seeks able and dedicated teachers, better paying districts will entice teachers away and leave this district without able leaders and instructors. Consequently, I am constrained to disregard the district's negative approach. I must seek a way in which the district can retain the teachers it has and bring to it more of the same kind.

ESFA offers in support of its proposal statistical matter to show what other school districts are paying their teachers in the county. For example, Irvington starts their B.A. at $6,700 compared to the district's $6,150; Hastings and Tuckahoe start the same classification at $6,800; and Briarcliff starts at $6,900; Scarsdale starts the B.A. at $6,800.

In my considered judgment, ESFA has made out its case for a wage increase. But it has not convinced me that it is entitled to the proposals it requests. The reason for rejecting the proposal is based to a large degree on budgetary problems and the ability to pay.

There is included as part of the budget a capital improvement of a track at the high school. The budget amount is $35,000. The district explained that the physical education department had requested the track over a long period of time. In 1967-1968, contract and repair projects grossed $30,125. Proposed for 1968-1969 contract repair projects are $78,000, an increase of $47,875 over 1967-1968.

There is a provision in the budget for three new teachers. $24,000 is budgeted for this item. There is also $72,000 set aside for increases to teachers now in the system.

Exhibit 3 which was offered by ESFA is a graphic view of median salaries paid in the county and the difference in the pay scales in the district. Exhibit 3 also presents the various school districts in summary. It indicates clearly that the district under consideration is on the low side.

While the capital improvements may be important to the department of physical education, and while the district is to be commended for trying to meet the department's request, it would seem to me that, first, the wage structure should be brought closer to other districts in the county, thereby giving faculty members a further incentive for remaining in the district's employ.

With this thought in mind, I conclude that I can safely recommend an increase to be paid to ESFA without disrupting the proposed budget. By excising certain items from the capital improvements program, which can be financed through a bond issue or note program, and with the money now in the budget to take care of increases, the district can safely, and without increasing the tax burden, grant an increase to its teachers.

It is my considered judgment, therefore, that an increase of $750 across-the-board for a one-year contract would bring all categories within reach of the schools described inExhibit 3 and Exhibit C. Exhibit 3 purports to show 1968-1969 "approved" salary changes, whereas Exhibit C, which was presented by the district, shows schedules through 1967-1968.

The district introduced Exhibit E to show the percent of budget instructional costs in prior years. The exhibit showed that for 1968-1969 instructional costs would be 70.4% of the budget, a .2% drop from 1967-1968.

The tax rate, according to the district, rises 2.8¢ per $1,000. But the figures submitted by the district do not convince me that by deleting certain capital items the budget cannot accommodate the recommended increase. While the increase is a modest one in "new" money, yet there are other demands of an economic nature to be disposed of. There should be a margin of safety in which the district can operate without straining the source of the tax dollar.

After the recommendations contained herein are acted upon, the parties can consider other demands and reach an agreement without being required to meet the pressure of budgetary requirements.

The gross figure to cover these increases, exclusive of increments which are now in the budget, would amount to $61,500. The sum of $61,500 is based on an increase this year to all categories of $750 per teacher, exclusive of increments.

In addition, I respectfully recommend that a gross figure of $45,000 be established in the budget to take care of items such as teachers' aides, cafeteria duty, bussing, etc.

Salary Schedule–See Below

In order to provide an incentive to further graduate study, the board will grant, effective September 1, 1965, to each teacher who thereafter successfully completes 15 credit hours of graduate study, such study to be approved in advance by the district principal, an increment of $150 upon presentation of transcripts to the district principal.

Teachers having served 25 years or more in the Elmsford Public Schools will be eligible for a special career teachers increment of $400. One increment will be granted at the beginning of the 26th year of service in the district and another at the beginning of the 31st year of service in the district.

Implementation of the Salary Schedule

1. Salary increases up to the maximum specified in this salary schedule may be given in reward for an employee's cooperation, satisfactory service, and loyalty to the school system. The board of education reserves the right to withhold increments in accordance with New York State Education Law whenever, in the opinion of the board and administrators, the withholding of such increment is justified and in the best interests of the school district.

2. Annual appraisal of the effectiveness and/or quality of the employee's service shall be made in accordance with the board's evaluation policy. A day's salary for teachers on a 10-month basis shall be defined as 1/200 of the annual salary, and 1/250 of the annual salary in the case of persons employed on a 12-month basis.

3. Adjustment of salaries from one schedule to another shall be made on presentation of college transcripts.

4. Following the satisfactory completion of graduate courses, teachers will be reimbursed up to $10 per course for the cost of books used in each course, provided that such books are turned over to the professional library located in the teachers room in the school of the respective teacher.

5. In addition to instructing students in a satisfactory manner, a teacher should be an active member of the school community, displaying his professional status at all times. He should attend and play an active role in school-sponsored activities.

Personal Illness

Sick leave with full pay during any school year shall be granted regular, full time employees of the board as follows, in accordance with the law of the State of New York.

1. Employees on a 10 or 12-month basis—10 days per year.

2. Any unused portion of the yearly allowance for a given employee shall be cumulative, up to a limit of 150 days.

3. Approved absence for sick leave in excess of that provided under 1 and 2 will be paid subject to the deduction of salary paid a substitute.

4. Application for payment for sick leave in excess of two consecutive days must be supported by certification from an attending physician.

Illness in Family

For absence due to illness of any member of the employee's immediate family, living in the employee's household, full pay for not more than five days in each school year shall be paid the employee.

Death

Absence for death in the immediate family is allowed for a total of three days per school year without salary deduction. This leave is not cumulative. In the event of the death of a relative outside of the immediate family or a close friend, allowance shall be made for absence at full pay for a period not to exceed one day. These absences shall not be deducted from sick leave.

Personal Business

Absence for personal business shall be allowed only by permission of the district principal. Such leave will not precede or follow vacation periods. It is the intent of the board of education that such leave be for purposes of conducting business which teachers cannot conduct at another time, such as after school hours, weekends, vacation periods, and holidays. Business such as the graduation of a relative, moving household effects, legal matters which cannot be handled during the above times, and various other personal matters are legitimate reasons. This leave shall not be taken for vocational or recreational purposes. Any leave under this section shall be applied for in writing and will be approved or disapproved by the district principal. A maximum of 3 days may be allowed per year. These absences are in no way to be interpreted as days due the employee.

Religious Holidays

Absence for religious holidays shall be granted at full pay.

Maternity Leave

tions attendant upon pregnancy and birth do not prevail, the employee may apply to the said board for permission to return to her position prior to the termination of the period for which leave was granted. A teacher has the privilege of extending leave to two years upon application. Application of expected return must be submitted at least three months before the end of the school year. A teacher granted leave of absence or maternity leave shall upon her return resume her teaching with a salary at the next step higher than the one assigned to her at the time the leave began if more than one-half of the school year has elapsed before said teacher is granted leave.

Court Leave

Employees who are summoned by the court to appear for the purpose of qualifying for jury service will be granted leave to serve. It is the policy of the board of education to request release from jury duty for eligible employees only in exceptional situations where the public interest would be better served by an employee staying on the job. Before court leave is granted, an employee must submit a true copy of the official summons for jury duty prior to the beginning of such service. An employee serving jury duty shall be reimbursed the difference between his salary and court pay for all school days of absence. If an employee is a party to a suit, absence from school shall be with pay less deductions for substitutes.

On the recommendation of the district principal, absence in excess of that referred to in the preceding regulations may be reviewed by the board for special consideration. Full time administrative employees on a 12-month basis will receive a one month vacation with salary.

Quarantine in Contagious Disease

When such quarantine is not because of personal illness, the employee shall be allowed full pay providing the certificate is filed with the district principal. When the quarantine is because of personal illness, section one will apply.

The employee and his principal must certify to the Office of the Superintendent of Schools or to the Superintendent's representative the cause of the employee's absence. Such certification shall also constitute a request by the employee for authorization of absence. The appropriate form among the following, must be completed:

CERTIFICATION OF ABSENCE FOR PERSONAL ILLNESS (Form S-2a)

In case of absence due to damage or serious and immediate threat of damage to the teacher's or counselor's residence resulting from flood, storm or other uncontrollable conditions, the Superintendent shall waive the salary deduction if, in his judgment, such absence was imperative to the protection of property and personal safety of the employee and his immediate family.

3.15 Absence and Salary Increments

Annual salary increments are earned on the basis of the number of work days for which the employee is paid and are granted in accordance with the following schedule:

Time Schedule	No. Annual Increment	One-Half Annual Increment	Full Annual Increment
Teacher	Less than 60 days	60 to 119 days	120 days or more

All teachers and counselors shall be paid regular compensation for time lost due to illness or other cause as authorized by these rules and regulations, for not less than 5 days annually. This minimum benefit of 5 days shall become effective and available for use annually on the first day of the contract year on which the teacher or counselor is assigned to duty.

This minimum benefit shall not be construed to be in addition to the maximum benefit which may be earned on the basis of completed services and accumulated annually, but rather shall be considered to be a portion there of. Further, after an employee has used the full amount of credit for illness, provided either by regulation of the Board or earned by such employee on the basis of service at the rate of one and one-fourth days for each completed month of service, such employee may not be lawfully paid for further absence because of illness.

3.17 Accumulation of Sick Leave

Unused sick leave may be accumulated to a limit of 150 days. Sick leave credit may be retained during a leave of absence for military service. Additional sick leave credit may not be earned during a leave of absence for military service except in the case of temporary military service, said service not to exceed thirty-one days in any one calendar year.

However, an employee on sick leave for these or other causes may be paid only for the number of days of sick leave credited to or earned by the employee. Before salary payment can be made for absence because of personal illness, the employee must submit a CERTIFICATION OF ABSENCE FOR PERSONAL ILLNESS (Form S-2a) to the principal or the immediate superior of the employee. Absence of more than five consecutive work days for personal illness requires the filing of a CERTIFICATE OF HEALTH (Form S-2e).

b. Serious illness in the employee's immediate family: limit of five consecutive work days. Before salary payment can be made for absence because of serious illness in the immediate family, the employee must submit a CERTIFICATE OF ABSENCE FOR ILLNESS IN THE FAMILY (Form S-2b) to the principal or the immediate superior of the employee. The employee must also submit a STATEMENT OF NECESSITY FOR ABSENCE (Form S-2f), that the illness required the employee's absence from duty, if such absence extends beyond five consecutive work days.

   It is the intent of this regulation that leave be used only for serious illness or emergency.

c. Death in the employee's immediate family: limit of five consecutive work days except that the Superintendent of Schools may increase the number of days, if the circumstances justify authorization of additional absence with pay. Before salary payment can be made for absence because of death in the employee's immediate family, the employee must submit a CERTIFICATION OF ABSENCE FOR DEATH IN THE IMMEDIATE FAMILY OR OF OTHER RELATIVE (Form S-2c) to the principal or the immediate superior of the employee.

Notification should be given by the employee to the principal or immediate superior before absence from duty, except in extreme emergency. In such cases the claim must be submitted no later than the second day after the employee returns to work.

d. Death of other relative: limit of two consecutive work days, except that the Superintendent of Schools may increase the number of days if the circumstances justify authorization of additional absence with pay. Before salary payment can be made for absence because of death of other relative, the employee must submit a CERTIFICATION OF ABSENCE FOR DEATH IN IMMEDIATE FAMILY OR OF OTHER RELATIVE (Form S-2c) to the principal or the immediate superior of the employee.

Notification should be given by the employee to the principal or immediate superior before absence from duty, except in extreme emergency. In such cases, the claim must be submitted no later than the second day after the employee returns to work.

3.20 Absence to Attend Meetings and Conferences

Absence of a least one day per school year may be authorized by the Superintendent of Schools to permit each employee to visit another school or to attend local, district, state, national and international meetings or conferences of a professional nature. Authorization for such absence shall be obtained prior to the absence by a written request to the Superintendent.

Employees sent to such meetings or conferences on business of the Board of Education shall be considered assigned to duty with full payment of salary.

Only upon recommendation of the Superintendent and approval of the Board of Education may employees be reimbursed for expenses incurred in attending such meetings, except where appropriations for such expenses have previously been made.

3.21 Absence for Temporary Military Service

An employee of the Board of Education who is a member of the organized militia, or who is a member of another reserve component of the armed forces of the United States, is entitled to be absent from duty without loss of pay for such time as he is in the military service on field training or active duty for periods not to exceed thirty-one days in any one calendar year.

A teacher or counselor who chooses to fulfill his civic obligation by serving on jury duty, shall file such a request with the Office of Pupil Personnel. The Office of Pupil Personnel shall attempt to arrange with the Clerk of Courts to postpone the jury duty until the summer term, so that the jury duty may be performed during the teacher's or counselor's summer vacation.

3.23 Absence for Other Causes

Absence caused by unusual and abnormal circumstances shall be authorized by the Superintendent of Schools if, in his judgment such absence is in the best interest of the schools.

Unauthorized absence from duty following the expiration of a leave of absence or a renewal thereof, or failure to comply with the provisions of the leave, may be considered by the Board of Education as termination of contract by the employee.

b. Application for Leave of Absence

The application for a leave of absence, or an extension or renewal thereof, must be made in writing to the Superintendent of Schools, stating the purpose of the leave and the period of the leave, and must be accompanied by certain specified supporting statements concerning the need for or desirability of said leave.

c. Use of Leave

A leave of absence shall be used essentially and primarily for the purpose stated by the employee in the application which was approved by the Superintendent of Schools and for which the leave was granted by the Board of Education. Any alteration of approved plans or purposes of the leave by the employee without the approval of the Superintendent may be considered as a termination of the employee's contract by that employee.

d. Application for Reinstatement

If the employee on leave of absence desires to be reinstated to duty with the Board of Education following the termination of a leave, application for reinstatement must be made in writing to the Superintendent before the expiration of the leave. h. Continuity of Service

For the purpose of the regulations on leaves of absence, employees on authorized leaves of absence shall be considered as maintaining the characteristic of continuity of service, provided such leaves do not total more than two years. However, time spent on unpaid leaves of absence may not be included in meeting service requirements for future leaves of absence, earned annual increments, or retirement except that the time spent on an unpaid

Application for reinstatement must be made at least thirty days before the expiration of a leave of absence for personal illness. Not less than ten days before the termination of the leave, the employee must submit a written statement from the attending physician, subject to approval by the school physician, certifying that the employee has been examined and that he is or will be able to resume his duties with the Board of Education when the leave of absence expires.

d. Early Termination of Leave

Termination of a leave of absence before its expiration date, provided the request for termination is made in writing by the employee and the request is accompanied by a statement from the attending physician, subject to approval by the school physician, recommending return to duty, shall be at the discretion of the Superintendent of Schools and in accordance with the needs and interests of the schools.

e. Unrequested Leave of Absence

If an employee of the Board of Education is unable to perform satisfactorily the duties of his position because of physical or other disability, or if the employee has been absent on account of personal illness for a continuous period of ninety days following the expiration of his sick leave, the Superintendent of Schools may recommend, without the request of the employee, a leave of absence for a part of the school year, for the remainder of the school year, or for a full school year, and renewals thereof, and the Board of Education may grant such leave in accordance with the provisions of the law.

f. Reinstatement

Any married woman employee of the Board of Education who becomes pregnant after three or more consecutive years of regular service in the Akron Public Schools, immediately prior to her request for leave, and who desires to return to the employ of the Board at a future date, shall be granted a maternity leave of absence without pay. The absence shall extend for one calendar year following the birth of the child, plus any remaining portion of the school semester which may then be in progress. Such leave may be renewed for one or two semesters.

b. Application for Maternity Leave

An "aggrieved" person is the teacher, teachers, counselor, counselors having a grievance.

The purpose of the grievance procedure is to secure at the lowest possible level, proper solutions to grievances. Both parties agree that the grievance proceedings shall be kept confidential at all levels of the procedure.

However, if the grievance is not initiated within 15 days after the aggrieved person knew, or should have known of the event or condition upon which it is based, the grievance shall be considered waived.

Level Two

The principal shall within five (5) days after receiving the grievance submit a written answer to the grievance to the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel with copies to the President of the AEA and the aggrieved person.

Should the PR & R Committee decline to refer the grievance to the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel, it shall notify the aggrieved person and the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel in writing of such decision. In such event, the aggrieved person may forward the grievance in writing to the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel independently. However, if the written grievance is not referred by the aggrieved person to the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel within 30 days after the PR & R Committee has declined, in writing, to refer such grievance, the grievance shall be considered waived.

The Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel will within five (5) days after receipt of the grievance hold a conference involving the aggrieved person, the building principal, the Assistant Superintendent for Prof. Pers. and a representative of the AEA and/or an attorney for the aggrieved person. Within 48 hours after the conclusion of the conference the Assistant Superintendent for Professional Personnel shall give a written response to all persons concerned.

The Superintendent of Schools shall request that the grievance be reviewed by a panel consisting of three (3) disinterested members of the administrative staff appointed by the Superintendent and three (3) disinterested members of the AEA appointed by the President of AEA.

Within ten (10) days after the grievance is submitted to the Superintendent the panel shall report its findings to the Superintendent and within 48 hours thereafter, the Superintendent shall give a written response to all parties concerned.

Within fifteen (15) days after such request, a committee of the Board shall meet with the aggrieved person for the purpose of resolving the grievance. The Board shall at its next meeting by official action make its answer to the grievance.

Level Six

Grievances not settled in level five shall, until a declaratory judgment action or the enactment of legislation will permit the Board to agree to binding arbitration, be processed as follows:

The AEA PR & R Committee may, if requested in writing by the aggrieved person, within fifteen days after the Board's answer, notify the Board of its intent to submit the grievance to an Advisory Panel.

An Advisory Panel shall be selected and shall function as stipulated in Article X of this agreement.

In the event a declaratory judgment action or the enactment of legislation defines the legal remedies available to the Board in cases of impasse, the AEA and the Board, or its representative, shall meet and draft a Level Six section of this Grievance Procedure within the guidelines set by the judgment or legislation.

Description and Analysis

NEW PUBLIC EMPLOYEE NEGOTIATION LAW IN MAINE PROVIDES BINDING ARBITRATION FOR CERTAIN MATTERS IN NEGOTIATION DISPUTES

The Governor of Maine singed into law on June 24, The Municipal Public Employees Labor Relations Law. Public employers covered are "any municipality or town or any subdivision thereof, or of any school, sewer or other district." All school employees are covered except the superintendent and assistant superintendent.

In the event of a dispute over the appropriate bargaining unit, the Commissioner of Labor and Industry shall make the determination. The appropriate unit shall insure employees the fullest freedom to exercise their rights guaranteed by the law and insure a community of interest among the employees. Nothing in this law "is intended to require the exclusion of principals, assistant principals, other supervisory employees from school system bargaining units which include teachers and nurses in supervisory positions." Unit determination decisions made by the Commissioner may be appealed to a three-member Public Employee Labor Relations Appeals Board created by the law.

School employers shall negotiate in good faith with respect to wages, hours, working conditions, and contract grievance arbitration which may provide for binding arbitration as the final step, and they shall meet and consult but not negotiate with respect to educational policies.

If the parties are unable to effect a settlement after mediation or fact-finding, they may jointly agree to an arbitration procedure. If the parties cannot agree on an arbitration procedure, either party may request the American Arbitration Association for assistance. A majority recommendation of the arbitrators on matters other than "salaries, pensions and insurance" shall be binding on both parties. Recommendations on salaries, pensions and insurance shall be "advisory only" and be made public at the discretion of the arbitrators.

The act prohibits public employees from engaging in work stoppages, slowdowns, strikes, or blacklisting of any public employer.

STRIKING PUBLIC EMPLOYEES MAY BE DISMISSED, FINED, OR IMPRISONED AS PROVIDED IN NEW NEGOTIATION LAW IN NEVADA

The Local Government Employee-Management Relations Act enacted in April by Nevada legislature covers any political subdivision or any public or quasi-public corporation in the state including school districts. Local government employees have the right to join or refrain from joining any employee organization. Local government employers shall negotiate concerning "wages, hours and conditions of employment" with recognized representatives of the employee organization. The act also specifies the rights to which local government employers are entitled without negotiation with public employees.

Each local government employer shall determine which group or groups constitute an appropriate unit or units for negotiation purposes. For an appropriate unit or units in a school district, the act provides: "A principal, assistant principal or other school administrator below the rank of superintendent, associate superintendent or assistant superintendent shall not be a member of the same negotiating unit with public school teachers unless the school district employs fewer than five principals but may join with other officials of the same specified ranks to negotiate as a separate negotiating unit."

The act provides as a condition for recognition, that an employee organization must pledge in writing not to strike against the local government employer, and that strikes are illegal. Any employee, employee organization, and officer of any employee organization found in violation of a court order to enjoin a strike may be dismissed, fined, or imprisoned by the court. The fines are to be not more than $50,000 a day against an organization and not more than $1,000 a day against individuals for each day of continued violation.

The act creates a three-member public board which is appointed by the governor. The local government employee-management relations board will hear appeals on unit determination disputes and provide mediation and fact-finding services when the parties cannot reach agreement in negotiation.

SECOND REVISION PASSED ON CONNECTICUT TEACHER NEGOTIATION LAW

The Connecticut negotiation statute for teachers originally enacted in 1965 (NRD, April 1967) has been revised again, effective July 1, 1969. The statute was previously amended in 1967 (NRD, September 1967). Major amendments of the act affect representation, duty to negotiate, strikes, and mediation and arbitration sections. In addition, a new section was enacted to provide that this act shall supercede the provisions of any local or municipal acts.

Prior to the recent amendment the act excluded the superintendent and temporary substitutes from organizational representation. In addition to these persons, the amendment excludes assistant superintendents, certified professional employees who act for the board of education for personnel relations or budget preparation, and all non-certified employees from coverage under the act. The statute retains the option for administrators to remain with the recognized teacher organization or to form a separate unit for bargaining purposes.

The section on duty to negotiate was amended to provide that the legislative body which is charged with making annual appropriations to be bound by the negotiated agreement between the board of education and the teacher organization unless such body rejects the signed agreement within 30 days.

The suplement to the section on strike prohibition provides that it may be enforced by a temporary injunction issued without a hearing by the Superior Court for any county. But if a motion is filed to dissolve the injunction, the court conducts a hearing within three days.

Amendments to the section on mediation and arbitration provide that if the parties are unable to reach agreement, the state board of education has the power to order mediation and/or arbitration. The act establishes an arbitration panel with which the state board of education may contract for services in resolving disputes. Additional powers and duties covered in Section 31-108 of the Labor Statutes are provided the state board of education and arbitrators for purposes of arbitration hearings. This section provides them with the power to administer oaths and to issue subpoenas for witnesses and documents. However, the decisions of the arbitrators remained "advisory."

OREGON AMENDS "MEET AND CONFER" LAW TO ALLOW ORGANIZATION REPRESENTATION FOR TEACHERS

The Oregon teacher negotiation statute (NRD, May 1967) has been amended, effective June 16, 1969. The amendment provides for recognition of an employee organization to represent certificated school employees. Not later than 30 days after the first day of the school year, the district school board shall establish election procedures to determine whether the certificated personnel shall be represented individually, by a committee of such personnel, or by a particular employee organization.

Organizations may be placed on the ballot by (a) certified membership of at least 40 percent of the certificated employees, or (b) signed petition by 15 percent of the certificated employees. Administrators or teachers may elect to be represented in separate units.

MONTANA LAW ALLOWS NURSES TO STRIKE

Montana passed a negotiation statute which gives nurses a limited right to strike. The Act, effective July 1, 1969, provides registered professional and licensed practical nurses employed in public or private health care facilities the right to self-organization, representation, bargaining, and striking. The strike section provides that nurses or their duly elected representative "must give the health care facility thirty (30) days written notice of any strike by them and must specify in the notice the day the strike is to begin." The section also provides that it shall be unlawful for any nurse "to participate in a strike if there is another strike in effect at another health care facility within a radius of 150 miles." (Chapter No. 320. Montana Session Laws 1969, House Bill No. 508. March 11, 1969.)

CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES PROTECTS RIGHTS OF BARGAINING UNIT MEMBERS ACCORDING TO DISTRICT COURT

The Indianapolis Education Association (IEA) was granted a preliminary injunction by the U.S. District Court of Southern Indiana, to prevent the Board of School Commissioners, City of Indianapolis, Indiana, from "bargaining individually" on teachers' salaries and other conditions of employment for the 1969-70 school year with any member of the bargaining unit for which the IEA has been elected exclusive bargaining representative. The court found the school board had interfered with "federally-protected rights and privileges" of the fundamental rights of the represented teachers secured by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

A complaint was filed by the IEA after the school board had agreed to recognize the winning organization as the exclusive bargaining agent for nonsupervisory teachers in an election to be held on May 21, 1969, and to bargain in good faith. On May 20, 1969, the school board unilaterally adopted a higher salary and benefit schedule for the 1969-70 school year, and thereafter, distributed individual contracts to the teachers reflecting the increase. The election results showed that approximately 95 percent of the ballots cast chose IEA as the exclusive bargaining agent. However, the school board continued its former customary procedures in the matter of unilaterally determining salaries and other benefits for the 1969-70 school year.

The court found the acts of the school board prior to negotiations with the IEA unjustifiably interfered with the "normal processes of good faith collective bargaining," and with the exercise by the teachers as members of a bargaining unit of the following rights and privileges:

"(a) The right to associate together through a chosen representative for the purpose of negotiating on an equal basis with their employer with respect to their economic and professional interests,

(b) The rights to be heard through a chosen representative in a meaningful and effective way with respect to their economic and professional interests,

(c) The right collectively to advance and further their ideas and beliefs on what they consider to be their economic and professional well-being,

(d) The right to petition the government in a meaningful and effective way for redress of economic and professional grievances,

(e) The liberty to contract for personal services by a bargaining process through a representative of their own choosing,

(f) The right of equality of opportunity enjoyed by citizens in private employment to bargain collectively with respect to terms and conditions of public employment."

The court further ordered the parties to report to it concerning the progress of good-faith negotiations.

HIGH COURT IN CALIFORNIA UPHOLDS WINTON ACT

The Supreme Court of California denied a hearing on the lower court's decision that upheld the constitutionality of California's employer-employee relations law (Winton Act NRD, April 1967) for public-school teachers and other employees. The Second District Court of Appeals had declared that the Winton Act does not impair rights guaranteed by the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The original lower court suit challenging the constitutionality of the law was filed against the Oxnard Elementary School District in 1966 by the California Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO). Later the Oxnard Educators Association, an affiliate of the California Teachers Association (CTA), intervened on behalf of its members in support of the Act.

The Union claimed that the school district, its board members and administration were discriminating against Union members by insisting they "meet and confer" with school officials on employment and educational policy matters through the negotiating council procedure required by the Winton Act.

The Court ruled:

- The Winton Act does not impair rights of freedom of association, assembly and speech as protected by the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.
- The Act validly required that teachers "meet and confer" with the board of education on major employment and educational policy issues through the medium of the negotiation council.
- The Winton Act validly required that representation on the negotiating council shall be proportionate to the membership of organizations representing teachers in a school district.
- In spite of requirements that major issues of employment and educational policy affecting teachers be presented to the school board through the negotiating council, the Winton Act does not prevent teachers as individuals or through their organizations from discussing personal grievances or other issues with the board.

SCHOOL EMPLOYEES HAVE BARGAINING RIGHTS IN FLORIDA

The Florida State Supreme Court overruled a Dade County Circuit Court ruling which had invalidated a negotiation agreement between the Dade County Classroom Teachers and the Dade County Board of Public Instruction. The Supreme Court held that "with the exception of the right to strike, public employees have the same rights of collective bargaining as are granted private employees" under the present statutes. But the court found certain limitations on public employee-employer negotiation: (a) public employee organizations may bargain only for their members, (b) dues check-off can be made only with the authorization of the teacher and only during the term of the current agreement, (c) a school board may allow an employee organization to use school facilities so long as all employee organizations are granted such privileges, and (d) a grievance procedure contained in the agreement does not apply to nonconsenting teachers.

The Court declared "in the sensitive area of labor relations between public employee and public employer, it is requisite that the Legislature enact appropriate legislation setting out standards and guidelines" within these statutory limits. Or the present statute "may be modified by succeeding Legislatures in the light of experience and the needs of the times." (Dade County Classroom Teachers' Association, Inc., v Michael Ryan et al., Case No. 38,407. July 9, 1969.)

PERB ORDER CONFLICTS WITH EDUCATION LAW

The New York Supreme Court for the County of Columbia "finds no language in the statute [Taylor Act]which indicates an intention on the part of the Legislature to give PERB the power to exercise any control over the tenure provisions of the Education Law."

The PERB had found that the Ockawamick School Board had denied reappointment and tenure to a nontenure teacher because of her organizational activities. The PERB had ordered the School Board to reinstate the teacher as of September 1, 1968, and to compensate her for wages lost. (NRD, June 1969)

Since the Taylor Act did not expressly empower the PERB to order such action, the Court found that the Education Law prevailed because "it is well settled law that a teacher has no vested rights to tenure during the probationary period and that the services of a probationary teacher may be discontinued without a hearing and without giving the reasons therefor." The Court dismissed PERB's petition to enforce its order.

RECENT SETTLEMENT IN NEW YORK CITY

For the past two years, the New York City Schools have been closed down by teacher strikes during the first months of school—approximately 15 days in 1967 and 50 days in 1968. According to the New York Times, the political climate in New York City was right for an early settlement between the Board of Education and the United Federation of Teachers, Local 2. The New York City classroom teacher contract was reached by the parties over two months before the expiration date of their previous contract.

Except for the salary and fringe benefit increases previously briefed, there has been little change in the previous year's agreement. In addition to substantial increases in salary and fringe benefits to attract new teachers, the agreement contains the following new provision:

Improved Staff Recruitment

The Board of Education and the Union will join in an effort to attract new teachers and to achieve a better ethnic balance in the staff of the New York City Schools through improved recruitment procedures. A fund of $500,000 will be set aside for this purpose. A joint committee of the Union and the Board, consisting of the President of the Union and the Superintendent of Schools and an additional high-level staff person selected by each of them, will develop the procedures and supervise their application.

The new agreement provides for the continuation of the experimental education programs previously established, increases the number of the More Effective Schools, and establishes early childhood preschool centers. "Beginning in the 1970-71 school year, the Board will establish and maintain ten additional More Effective Schools. Starting February 1, 1970, the Board will establish early childhood pre-school centers in fifty (50) special service schools, affording an opportunity for mothers in the community to place their children in an early educational environment. These centers will also provide an opportunity for teachers in the community on leave to return to active teaching by enrolling their children in such centers."

Separate provisions on the working conditions and on the transfer policies for the high schools, junior high schools, elementary schools, K-8 schools, and special education schools for the socially maladjusted and emotionally disturbed, homebound teachers, children with retarded mental development, health conservation, schools for the deaf, speech improvement, special reading service clinics, visually handicapped, and shelter and child care center schools, covered in the previous agreement, remain almost the same for the next three years.

Four of the new provisions covering recruitment, accountability, textbooks, and teacher harassment attempt to deal with certain problems directly related to the conflict that began erupting in the spring of 1968 in an experimental community control district, erupted city-wide in the fall of 1968, and has not been fully resolved to the present. Though the New York Legislature paved the way for the elimination of the controversial experimental districts by passing a bill that places strict limits on the community control aspect of decentralization, social conflict still exists and threatens to expand in disadvantaged neighborhoods. As already reported, the new recruitment procedures are to be developed to achieve a better ethnic balance in the staff, the other new provisions are:

Accountability

The Board of Education and the Union recognize that the major problem of our school system is the failure to educate all of our students and the massive academic retardation which exists especially among minority group students. The Board and the Union therefore agree to join in an effort, in cooperation with universities, community school boards and parent organizations, to seek solutions to this major problem and to develop objective criteria of professional accountability.

Improvement of Textbook

More textbooks reflecting the history of minority groups and relating to the experiences of urban children will be introduced into the schools.

Article XIX—Special Complaints

It is the declared objective of the parties to encourage the prompt and informal resolution of special complaints not covered by the Grievance Procedure and to dispose of such complaints as they arise and to provide resource to orderly procedures for their adjustment.

A. Definition

A "Special complaint" is a complaint by an employee in the bargaining unit that persons or groups are engaging in a course of harassing conduct, or in acts of intimidation, which are being directed against him in the course of his employment, and that the school principal or District Superintendent has not afforded the employee adequate relief against such course of conduct or acts of intimidation.

B. Filing and Priority Handling

A special complaint shall be promptly filed with the City Superintendent by the affected employee or, upon his request, by the Union. Such complaint shall receive expedited handling pursuant to this article.

C. Joint Investigation and Informal Resolution

Within twenty-four (24) hours after the special complaint is filed with the City Superintendent, a Joint Investigating Committee consisting of one representative designated by the City Superintendent and one representative designated by the Union shall investigate the complaint at the school level to ascertain the facts and bring about a prompt resolution of the problem without resort to formal procedures. In the course of its investigation, the Joint Committee shall confer with the principal of the school, the Community Superintendent and other persons involved in the controversy.

D. Administrative Hearing and Continued Attempt at Informal Resolution.

If the complaint is not resolved by the Joint Investigating Committee to the satisfaction of the affected employee, he may request a hearing before the City Superintendent. Within forty-eight (48) hours after receipt of the request for hearing, the City Superintendent, or a representative designated by him, shall hold a hearing at which the Joint Investigating Committee shall report its findings and all persons involved, including the affected employee, shall have an opportunity to be heard. The complaining employee may represent himself at the hearing or, upon request, may be represented by the Union or by a person of his own choosing other than an attorney.

At the hearing the City Superintendent or his representative shall make every effort to resolve the complaint informally and all persons involved shall cooperate toward this end.

E. Decision of the City Superintendent

Within seventy-two (72) hours following the close of the hearing, the City Superintendent shall notify all parties of his decision and the manner in which it shall be effectuated.

F. Fact Finding and Recommendations

If the complaint is not resolved by the City Superintendent, the affected employee, or the Union upon his request, may submit it for hearing and fact finding before an arbitrator selected in accordance with Article VII C of this Agreement. The submission shall be made within ten (10) school days after the issuance of the City Superintendent's decision.

The voluntary labor rules of the American Arbitration Association shall apply to the proceeding insofar as they relate to the hearing, fees and expenses.

The fact finder shall render findings not later than seventy-two (72) hours from the date of the close of the hearings or, if oral hearings have been waived, then from the date of transmitting the final statements and proofs to the fact finder. The finding of fact shall be in writing. The fact finder shall limit his findings strictly to the question whether the employee's complaint has been substantiated by the evidence. If the fact finder finds the complaint to be substantiated and unremedied, he shall recommend an appropriate remedy.

The fact finder shall not interpret or apply the provisions of this Agreement or exercise any of the other functions specified in Article VII of this contract, nor shall he exercise any of the powers conferred upon trial examiners pursuant to Section 2590-j 7 (f) of the Education Law.

G. Board Consideration

Within ten (10) days after receipt of the fact finder's report, the Board shall make a determination.

Article XX—Trial Examiner Panel

Before designating the panel of trial examiners to be maintained by the Chancellor pursuant to Section 2590-j 7 (f) of the Education Law, the Chancellor will afford the Union an opportunity to challenge any proposed designee and the persons challenged shall not be designated. Members of the panel will serve in rotation unless the community board selects a particular person on the panel.

Because most of the content of the new agreement negotiated in New York City contains the same provisions relative to the working conditions and personnel policies covering the various school organizational patterns, professional staff classifications, and special education programs that were in effect last year, the DIGEST reports only the major revisions. As a service to our subscribers, the full text of the new classroom teacher agreement will be sent upon request.

(6) Labor organization shall mean any organization of any kind, or any agency or employee representation committee or plan, in which employees participate and which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of dealing with employers concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or conditions of work;

The court shall have power and authority upon its own initiative to make such temporary findings and orders as may be necessary to preserve and protect the status of the parties, property and public interest involved, pending final determination of the issues. In the event of an industrial dispute between employer and employees of a privately-owned public utility or any public utility which is owned, managed, or operated by any political or governmental subdivision of the State of Nebraska, any public corporation, or any public power and irrigation district, where such employer and employees have failed or refused to bargain in good faith concerning the matters in dispute, the court may order such bargaining to be begun or resumed, as the case may be, and may make any such order or orders as may be appropriate to govern the situation pending such bargaining.

Before an industrial dispute with respect to representation is recognized as such, the parties may mutually agree to a secret ballot procedure to determine questions of representation for purposes of collective bargaining, for and on behalf of employees. The Court of Industrial Relations shall be immediately informed of the results, and the court shall inform the parties that the employees have designated a bargaining agent, and so shall certify the proper bargaining agent.

Public employers are hereby authorized to recognize employee organizations for the purpose of negotiating collectively in the determination of, and administration of grievances arising under, the terms and conditions of employment of their public employees as provided in this act, and to negotiate and enter into written agreements with such employee organizations in determining such terms and conditions of employment.

Where an employee organization has been certified or recognized pursuant to the provisions of this act, the appropriate public employer shall be and is hereby authorized to negotiate collectively with such employee organization in the settlement of grievances arising under the terms and conditions of employment of the public employees as provided in this act, and to negotiate and enter into written agreements with such employee organizations in determining such terms and conditions of employment.

The court shall have the authority (1) to make studies and analyses of, and act as a clearing house of information relating to, conditions of employment of public employees throughout the state; (2) to request from any government, and such governments are authorized to provide, such assistance, services and data as will enable the board properly to carry out its functions and powers; (3) to conduct studies of problems involved in representation and negotiations, including, but not limited to (a) whether employee organizations are to be recognized as representatives of their members only or are to have exclusive representation rights for all employees in the negotiating unit, (b) the problems of unit determination, (c) those subjects which are open to negotiation in whole or in part, (d) those subjects which require administrative or legislative approval of modifications agreed upon by the parties, and (e) those subjects which are for determination solely by the appropriate legislative body, and make recommendations from time to time for legislation based upon the results of such studies; (4) to make available to employee organizations, governments, mediators, fact-finding boards and joint study committees established by governments and employee organizations statistical data relating to wages, benefits and employment practices in public and private employment applicable to various localities and occupations to assist them to resolve complex issues in negotiations; and (5) to establish, after consulting representatives of employee organizations and administrators of public services, panels of qualified persons broadly representative of the public to be available to serve as mediators or members of fact-finding boards.

That Section 48-818, Reissue Revised Statutes of Nebraska, 1943, be amended to read as follows:

48.818. The findings and order or orders may establish or alter the scale of wages, hours of labor, or conditions of employment, or any one or more of the same. In making such findings and order or orders, the Court of Industrial Relations shall establish rates of pay and conditions of employment which are comparable to the prevalent wage rates paid and conditions of employment maintained for the same or similar work of workers exhibiting like or similar skills under the same or similar working conditions. In establishing wage rates the court shall take into consideration the overall compensation presently received by the employees, having regard not only to wages for time actually worked but also to wages for time not worked, including vacations, holidays, and other excused time, and all benefits received, including insurance and pensions, and the continuity and stability of employment enjoyed by the employees. Any order or orders entered may be modified on the court's own motion or on application by any of the parties affected, but only upon a showing of a change in the conditions from those prevailing at the time the original order was entered.

Section 7.

Public employees shall have the right to form, join, and participate in, or to refrain from forming, joining, or participating in, any employee organization of their own choosing. Public employees shall have the right to be represented by employee organizations to negotiate collectively with their public employers in the determination of their terms and conditions of employment, and the administration of grievances arising thereunder; Provided, that any such agreement with the State of Nebraska or any agency thereof shall cover a biennial period coinciding with the biennial budgeting period of the state and shall be subject to approval by the Legislature.

Section 8.

That original sections 48-801, 48-804, 48-810, 48-811, 48-816, and 48-818, Reissue Revised Statutes of Nebraska, 1943, and also sections 48-810.02, 48-820, and 48-824 to 48-836, Reissue Revised Statutes of Nebraska, 1943, are repealed.

At all times, two members of the commission shall constitute a quorum.

Section 4. Compensation of Commission and Fact Finders.

Members of the commission shall receive twenty-five dollars per day for their attendance at regular or special meetings of the commission or in the performance of such special duties as the commission may direct. In addition to such compensation, they shall receive an allowance for actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses while performing commission functions away from their places of residence. Fact finders, appointed by the commission, including commission members when so serving, shall be reimbursed for expense on the same basis as members of the commission and shall receive such compensation as the commission shall from time to time establish.

Section 5. Powers of the Commission.

The commission shall have the power to adopt its own rules and regulations. In addition to other powers authorized by law and under this Act, the members of the commission and any fact finder appointed by it, shall, in the performance of their duties, have the powers contained in sections 28-32-09, 28-32-10, 28-32-11, and 28-32-12 of the North Dakota Century Code.

Section 6. Cost of Fact Finding.

The cost of fact finding proceedings, including per diem, compensation, and other costs, shall be borne as follows:

1. In those cases where the proceedings to resolve an impasse arises under subdivisions a, b, c, or d of subsection 1 of section 13 of this Act, the cost shall be borne equally among the contending parties.

Section 7. Right to Organize or Not Organize.

1. Teachers, or administrators, shall have the right to form, join, and participate in the activities of representative organizations of their choosing for the purpose of representation on matters of employer-employee relations.

2. Teachers, or administrators, shall also have the right to refuse to join or participate in the activities of representative organizations.

Section 8. Right to Negotiate.

Representative organizations shall have the right to represent the appropriate negotiating unit in matters of employee relations with the school board. Any teacher, or administrator, shall have the right to present his views directly to the school board.

Section 9. Subject of Negotiations.

The scope of representation shall include matters relating to terms and conditions of employment and employer-employee relations, including, but not limited to salary, hours, and other terms and conditions of employment.

Section 10. Determination of Appropriate Negotiating Unit.

Representative organizations may be designated or selected by the majority of teachers, or administrators, employed in the public school district.

1. Any group of teachers, or administrators, employed in a public school district may determine an appropriate negotiating unit by filing with the school board a description of the grouping of jobs or positions which constitute the unit claimed to be appropriate. Upon receipt of such determination, the school board shall accept or reject the proposed appropriate negotiating unit. After the school board has accepted the appropriate negotiating unit, the teachers, or administrators, within such unit may designate or select a representative organization in the manner described in section 11 of this Act.

Section 11. Selection of Representative Organization.

1. Uncontested selection. Any organization having an interest in representing teachers, or administrators, may file with the school board a petition alleging that it represents a majority of teachers, or administrators, included within an appropriate negotiating unit. Such petition shall be accompanied by evidence substantiating the allegation contained in it. Within ten days after receipt of such petition, the school board shall publish a notice of intent to consider the petition, by posting such notice in each school building in which members of the appropriate negotiating unit are employed. Not less than ten nor more than twenty days after publication of the notice of intent to consider, the school board shall investigate the petition, determine the question of representation, and publish its determination in the same manner as it published its notice of intent to consider. If the petition has not been contested, the school board shall recognize the petitioner as the representative organization of the appropriate negotiating unit unless it finds in good faith that a reasonable doubt of such representation exists.

2. Contested selection. Any organization having an interest in repersenting teachers, or administrators, and contesting the claim of representation made in the petition must file with the school board its written statement of contest with its evidence substantiating the allegation within ten days after the publication of the notice of intent to consider.

3. The school board shall call an election to determine the question of representation not less than twenty, nor more than thirty days after the posting of the notice of intent to consider, if:

(a) The school board has failed to make and publish its determination; or

(b) The school board has published its determination, and that determination has been contested by a petitioner or contestant.

4. The school board shall call an election to determine the question of representation not less than ten nor more than thirty days after twenty-five percent of the members of an appropriate negotiating unit petition for such election.

5. The conduct of the election shall be in the manner agreed to among the interested parties. If the interested parties cannot agree, the election shall be conducted in the manner determined by the commission under its rules and regulations.

6. When a representative organization has been selected, its authority to represent the negotiating unit shall continue for at least one year from the date of such selection.

Section 12. Good Faith Negotiations.

1. The school board, or its representatives, and the representative organization, selected by the appropriate negotiating unit, or its representatives, shall have the duty to meet at reasonable times at the request of either party and to negotiate in good faith with respect to:

(a) Terms and conditions of employment and employer-employee relations.

(b) The formulation of an agreement, which may contain provision for binding arbitration.

(c) Any question arising out of interpretation of an existent agreement.

2. The parties must execute a written contract incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party.

3. Either party to a contract negotiated under this section may modify or terminate the contract on its annual anniversary date by giving notice of its desire to modify or terminate to the other party not less than sixty days prior to the annual anniversary date.

4. The obligations imposed in this section shall not compel either party to agree to a proposal or to make a concession.

Section 13. Impasse Procedures.

1. An impasse shall be deemed to exist under any of the following conditions:

(a) Where an agreement as set forth in subdivision b of subsection 1 of section 12 of this Act has not been formulated and after a reasonable period of negotiation regarding terms and conditions of employment or employer-employee relations, a dispute exists between a school board and any representative organization, an impasse may be deemed to exist.

(b) When both parties agree that an impasse exists.

(c) In the event that the written agreement reached under section 12 of this Act does not include procedures for resolving a dispute which arises, an impasse may be deemed to exist.

(d) Written agreements negotiated under section 12 of this Act may include procedures to be invoked in the event of disputes under the contract.

Where such procedures are inadequate to resolve the dispute an impasse may be deemed to exist.

2. An impasse may be resolved in the following manner:

(a) The parties may agree upon mediation of the controversy by mutually selecting a mediator or mediators, and agreeing to a distribution of the cost of the mediation.

(b) If mediation fails or is not attempted, the aggrieved school board or representative organization may request the commission to render assistance as provided in this section.

(1) Upon request of either contending party, and in the event that the commission determines that an impasse exists between a school board and a representative organization, the commission shall itself act as a fact finding commission or appoint a fact finder from a list of qualified persons maintained by the commission. If a fact finder is appointed, he shall have such powers as are designated to him by the commission and he shall make his recommendation to the commission. The commission shall consider the facts and make its findings and recommendation, or it shall consider the report and recommendation of its fact finder, and after such further investigation as it may elect to perform it shall make its findings and recommendation. Within twenty days after the request to render assistance is received, the findings and recommendation of the commission shall be transmitted to the contending parties and if the issue is not then resolved, shall ten days thereafter be made public.

(2) In the event that facts are found or recommendations made under fact finding procedures agreed upon between the contending parties and the impasse continues, the commission may consider such findings and recommendation without instituting its own fact finding procedures and from them issue its own findings and recommendations to the contending parties, and if the issue is not then resolved the commission shall within ten days thereafter make its findings and recommendations public.

Section 14. General Provision.

1. No teacher, administrator or representative organization shall engage in a strike.

2. Nothing contained herein is intended to or shall conflict with, contravene, abrogate, or diminish the powers, authority, duties, and responsibilities vested in boards of education by the statutes and laws of the state of North Dakota.

3. School boards or administrative officers thereof shall not discriminate against teachers because of their exercise of rights under this Act.

4. A contract between the representative organization and the school board shall bar any other representative group from petitioning for recognition, or for the withdrawal of existing recognition, for the term of the contract or three years whichever is less.

5. Any teacher engaging in a strike or any other activity prohibited in subsection 1 hereof may be denied the full amount of his wages during the period of such violation.

Section 15. Savings Clause.

If any section, subsection, subdivision, sentence, or clause of this Act is for any reason held to be unconstitutional, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this Act.

VERMONT

NO. 127 OF THE ACTS OF 1969

IT IS HEREBY ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF VERMONT:

Section 1. PURPOSE

In order to forward the orderly growth and development of education in Vermont it is hereby declared to be the policy of the state to promote the improvement of communications and agreements between certificated employees of the schools within the state and the school boards of those schools by providing a procedure where certificated school employees may join associations of their choice and be represented by such associations in arriving at agreements with school boards on the terms and conditions of their professional service and other matters mutually agreed upon.

Section 2.

Chapter 57 of 16 V.S.A. is added to read:

CHAPTER 57. LABOR RELATIONS FOR TEACHERS

Subchapter 1. General Provisions

§ 1981. DEFINITIONS

As used in this chapter unless the context requires otherwise:

1. "Administrator" means any person so certified by the state board of education the majority of whose employed time in a school or a school district is devoted to serving as superintendent, assistant superintendent, assistant to the superintendent, supervisor, principal, assistant principal.

2. "Professional negotiations" means the meeting, conferring, consulting, discussing, and negotiating in good faith between a school board and a teachers' organization or an administrators' organization to reach agreement.

3. "School board" means the board of school directors of a school district or its equivalent in any quasi-public or private elementary or secondary school.

4. "School district" means any public school district or any quasi-public or private elementary or secondary school within the state which directly or indirectly receives support from public funds.

5. "Teacher" means any person certified employable as a teacher by the state board of education who is not an administrator as herein defined.

6. A "teachers' organization" or an "administrators' organization" means an organization, committee, council, group or separate unit thereof in which teachers or administrators participate and which exists, in whole or in part, for the purpose of professional negotiation.

§ 1982. RIGHTS

(a) Teachers shall have the right to or not to join, assist, or participate in any teachers' organization of their choosing.

(b) Principals, assistant principals, and administrators other than superintendent and assistant superintendent shall have the right to or not to join, assist, or participate in any administrators' organization or as a separate unit of any teachers' organization of their choosing.

(c) Neither the school board nor any employee of the school board serving in any capacity, nor any other person or organization shall interfere with, restrain, coerce, or discriminate in any way against or for any teacher or administrator engaged in activities protected by this legislation.

§ 1983. RIGHT TO BE HEARD

Nothing contained herein shall prohibit any individual or organization representative, subject to reasonable rules of procedure which may be adopted by the school board, from appearing before the school board to be heard, but not to negotiate, on any matters of school district operation.

Subchapter 2. Bargaining Agent

§ 1991. SELECTION OF REPRESENTATION

(a) Teachers and administrators may select organizations to represent them in collective negotiations with the school board. The school board shall recognize an organization as the exclusive representative of the teachers or of the administrators in the school district when that organization has proved its claim to sole and exclusive representative status of the respective group as hereinafter provided. The superintendent, the assistant superintendent and the principal shall not serve as negotiating agents for the teachers' organization.

(b) When close or disputed questions of eligibility to vote and inclusion in the unit to be represented by the teachers' organization arise, the general principle to be adhered to shall be that eligibility to vote and inclusion in that negotiating unit will be limited to all teachers in the school district under contract and actually engaged in full-time or part-time positions which are not that of administrator.

(c) The organizations selected to represent teachers or administrators shall represent without discrimination or prejudice all of those eligible for inclusion in the negotiating unit without regard to organizational affiliation or membership.

§ 1992. REFERENDUM PROCEDURE FOR REPRESENTATION

(a) An organization purporting to represent a majority of all of the teachers or administrators employed by the school board may be recognized by the school board without the necessity of a referendum upon the submission of a petition bearing the valid signatures of a majority of the teachers or administrators employed by that school board. Within fifteen days after receiving the petition the school board shall notify the teachers or administrators of the school district in writing of its intention to either require or waive a secret ballot referendum. If the school board gives notice of its intention to waive a referendum and recognize an organization, ten per cent of the teachers or administrators employed by the school board may submit a petition within fifteen days thereafter, objecting to the granting or recognition without a referendum, in which event a secret ballot referendum shall be held in the district for the purpose of choosing an exclusive representative according to the guidelines for referendum contained in this legislation.

(b) Recognition granted to a negotiating unit as exclusive representative shall be valid and not subject to challenge by referendum petition or otherwise for the remainder of the fiscal year in which recognition is granted and for an additional period of twelve months after final adoption of the budget for the succeeding fiscal year and shall continue thereafter until a new referendum is called for.

(c) A secret ballot referendum shall be held any time that twenty per cent of the teachers or administrators employed by the school board present a petition requesting a referendum on the matter of representation, except during a period of prior recognition, as hereinbefore provided. Any organization interested in representing teachers or administrators in the school district shall have the right to appear on the ballot by submitting a petition supported by ten per cent or more of the teachers or administrators in the school district.

(d) In the interest of expediting the referendum and minimizing the costs thereof, the petitioning party or parties and the school board may agree together to conduct cooperatively the referendum themselves. Alternatively, the parties may select an impartial person or agency to conduct or aid in the conducting of the referendum. Failing agreement among all interested parties on the conduct of the referendum, any of the petitioning parties or the school board may request that the referendum be conducted with the aid and assistance of the American Arbitration Association or its designee. The American Arbitration Association or its designee shall have the responsibility for making decisions on any and all matters in dispute regarding the mechanics of the referendum, eligibility and other necessary decisions relating to the conduct of the referendum.

(e) All costs incurred in conducting the referendum shall be borne jointly by the school board and the petitioners.

(f) The ballot used in any referendum shall include "no representation" among the choices. The organization designated by the majority of the votes cast shall be the negotiating representative. If the majority is "no representation," then the school board may not recognize any representative for at least twelve months thereafter. If no choice receives a majority vote, then a run-off referendum shall be conducted among the two choices receiving the greatest number of votes.

Subchapter 3. Negotiations

§ 2001. GOOD FAITH

The school board and the recognized teacher or administrator organization shall meet together at reasonable times, upon request of either party, and shall negotiate in good faith on all matters properly before them under the provisions of this chapter.

§ 2002. ACCESS TO MATERIALS AND FACILITIES

The school board shall permit teachers, administrators, and their respective organizations access at reasonable times to areas in which teachers and administrators work, and to use institutional bulletin boards, mail boxes, or other communication media subject to reasonable regulation by the school board, and to use school facilities at reasonable times for the purpose of meetings concerned with the exercise of rights guaranteed by this chapter.

§ 2003. TIME TO BEGIN

The teacher or administrator organizations holding exclusive negotiating rights shall make a request for commencement of negotiations no later than one hundred and twenty days prior to the school district's annual meeting.

§ 2004. AGENDA

The school board, either directly or through authorized representatives shall, upon request, negotiate with representatives of the recognized organizations on matters of salary, related economic conditions of employment, procedures for processing complaints and grievances relating to employment, and any mutually agreed upon matters not in conflict with the statutes and laws of the state of Vermont.

§ 2005. WRITTEN AGREEMENT

The school board and the recognized organization shall enter into a written agreement incorporating therein matters agreed to in negotiation.

§ 2006. MEDIATOR

If, after negotiation has taken place on all matters properly before them, the school board and a negotiating organization are unable to reach agreement on specific negotiable items, they may jointly agree upon the services and person of a mediator for the purpose of assisting them in reconciling their differences and resolving the controversy on terms which are mutually acceptable. If agreement cannot be reached upon the person of a mediator, then either party may request mediation upon any and all unresolved issues to be conducted by the American Arbitration Association or its designee. The parties shall meet with the mediator and make such information available as required.

§ 2007. FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE

(a) If mediation fails to resolve outstanding differences or is not requested and a continuing disagreement persists, either party may, after negotiation on all matters properly before them, request that any or all unresolved issues be submitted to a fact-finding committee by notifying the other party of their intention and setting forth in writing the issues to be submitted to fact-finding.

(b) The fact-finding committee, which shall be activated as soon as practicable upon request, shall be composed of one member selected by the school board, one member selected by the negotiating organization, and one member who shall serve as chairman, to be chosen by the other two members. In the event that agreement cannot be reached on a third member for the fact-finding committee, the American Arbitration Association shall be asked to appoint the third member.

(c) The fact-finding committee shall convene as soon as practicable after its appointment, hold informal hearings as necessary, and provide adequate opportunity to all parties to testify fully on, and present evidence regarding, their respective positions. All parties to the dispute shall furnish the fact-finding committee upon its request all records, papers and information in their possession pertaining to any matter properly in issue before the fact-finding committee. The fact-finding committee shall make a written report and shall deliver it to both parties recommending a reasonable basis for the settlement of the disagreement within thirty days after the appointment of all members of the committee.

(d) The report of the fact-finding committee shall be advisory only and shall not be binding on either party. The report shall be made public by the fact-finding committee if the issues in dispute have not been resolved within ten days of the delivery of the report.

(e) All expenses of fact-finding and mediation shall be borne jointly by the parties to the dispute.

§ 2008. FINALITY OF DECISIONS

All decisions of the school board regarding matters in dispute in negotiations shall, after full compliance with this chapter, be final.

§ 2009. DELEGATION OF AUTHORITY

School boards and negotiating organizations are empowered to delegate in whole or in part the responsibility for negotiation of the collective agreement to any persons they may choose. However, final ratification of any agreement on behalf of the school board shall remain the sole responsibility of the school board.

§ 2010. INJUNCTIONS

No restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction shall be granted in any case brought with respect to any action taken by a representative organization or an official thereof or by a school board or representative thereof in connection with or relating to pending or future negotiations, except on the basis of findings of fact made by a court of competent jurisdiction after due hearing prior to the issuance of the restraining order or injunction that the commencement or continuance of the action poses a clear and present danger to a sound program of school education which in the light of all relevant circumstances it is in the best public interest to prevent. Any restraining order or injunction issued by a court as herein provided shall prohibit only a specific act or acts expressly determined in the findings of fact to pose a clear and present danger.

Section 3.

This act shall become effective on September 1, 1969.

C. Of such a character that the output produced or the result accomplished cannot be standardized in relation to a given period; and

D. §964. Prohibited acts of public employers, public employees and public employee organizations

1. Public employer prohibitions. Public employers, their representatives and their agents are prohibited from:
A. Interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 963;
B. Encouraging or discouraging membership in any employee organization by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any other term or condition of employment;
C. Dominating or interfering with the formation, existence or administration of any employee organization;
D. Discharging or otherwise discriminating against an employee because he has signed or filed any affidavit, petition or complaint or given any information or testimony under this chapter;
E. Refusing to bargain collectively with the bargaining agent of its employees as required by section 965;
F. Blacklisting of any employee organization or its members for the purpose of denying them employment.

2. Public employee prohibitions. Public employees, public employee organizations, their agents, members and bargaining agents are prohibited from:
A. Interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 963, or a public employer in the selection of his representative for purposes of collective bargaining or the adjustment of grievances;
B. Refusing to bargain collectively with a public employer as required by section 965;
C. Engaging in
(1) A work stoppage;
(2) A slowdown;
(3) A strike; or
(4) The blacklisting of any public employer for the purpose of preventing it from filling employee vacancies.

3. Violations. Violations of this section may be enjoined upon complaint of any party affected by such violation. Section 5 and 6 shall apply to any such injunction proceedings except that neither an allegation nor proof of unavoidable substantial and irreparable injury to the complainant's property shall be required to obtain a temporary restraining order or injunction. In connection therewith, actions may be brought by or against any unincorporated employee organization in the name by which it is known.

§965. Obligation to bargain

1. Negotiations. It shall be the obligation of the public employer and the bargaining agent to bargain collectively. "Collective bargaining" means, for the purposes of this chapter, their mutual obligation:
A. To meet at reasonable times;
B. To meet within 10 days after receipt of written notice from the other party requesting a meeting for collective bargaining purposes, provided the parties have not otherwise agreed in a prior written contract;
C. To confer and negotiate in good faith with respect to wages, hours, working conditions and contract grievance arbitration except that by such obligation neither party shall be compelled to agree to a proposal or be required to make a concession and except that public employers of teachers shall meet and consult but not negotiate with respect to educational policies for the purpose of this paragraph, educational policies shall not include wages, hours, working conditions or contract grievance arbitration;
D. To execute in writing any agreements arrived at, the term of any such agreement to be subject to negotiation but shall not exceed 3 years; and

E. To participate in good faith in the fact-finding and arbitration procedures required by this section.

Whenever wages, rates of pay or any other matter requiring appropriation of money by any municipality are included as a matter of collective bargaining conducted pursuant to this chapter, it is the obligation of the bargaining agent to serve written notice of request for collective bargaining on the public employer at least 120 days before the conclusion of the current fiscal operating budget.

2. Mediation. Mediation procedures shall be followed whenever the parties jointly agree to use such services.

3. Fact-finding. If the parties, either with or without the services of a mediator, are unable to effect a settlement of their controversy, they may jointly agree either to call upon the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation for fact-finding services with recommendations or to pursue some other mutually acceptable fact-finding procedure.

If the parties do not jointly agree to call upon the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation or to pursue some other procedure, either party to the controversy may request the commissioner to assign a fact-finding board. If so requested, the commissioner shall appoint a fact-finding board, ordinarily of 3 members, in accordance with rules and procedures prescribed by the commissioner for making such appointment. The fact-finding board shall be appointed from a list maintained by the commissioner and drawn up after consultation with representatives of state and local government administrators, agencies with industrial relations and personnel functions and representatives of employee organizations and of employers. Any person who has actively participated as the mediator in the immediate proceedings for which fact-finding has been called shall not sit on that fact-finding board. The board shall hear the contending parties to the controversy. It may request statistical data and reports on its own initiative in addition to the data regularly maintained by the commissioner. The members of the fact-finding board shall submit their findings and recommendations to the parties only.

The parties shall have a period of 30 days, after the receipt of findings and recommendations from the fact finders, in which to make a good faith effort to resolve their controversy. If the parties have not resolved their controversy by the end of said period, either party may, but not until the end of said period unless the parties otherwise jointly agree, make the fact-finding and recommendations public.

4. Arbitration. In addition to the 30-day period referred to in subsection 3, the parties shall have 15 more days, making a total period of 45 days from the receipt of findings and recommendations, in which to make a good faith effort to resolve their controversy.

If the parties have not resolved their controversy by the end of said 45-day period, they may jointly agree to an arbitration procedure which will result in a binding determination of their controversy. Such determinations will be subject to review by a Justice of the Superior Court in the manner specified by section 7.

If they do not jointly agree to such an arbitration procedure within 10 days after the end of said 45-day period, then either party may, by written notice to the other, request that their differences be submitted to a board of 3 arbitrators. The bargaining agent and the public employer shall within 5 days of such request each select and name one arbitrator and shall immediately thereafter notify each other in writing of the name and address of the person so selected. The 2 arbitrators so selected and named shall, within 10 days from such request, agree upon and select and name a neutral arbitrator. If either party shall not select its arbitrator or if the 2 arbitrators shall fail to agree upon, select and name a neutral arbitrator within said 10 days, either party may request the American Arbitration Association to utilize its procedures for the selection of the neutral arbitrator. As soon as possible after receipt of such request, the neutral arbitrator will be selected in accordance with rules and procedures prescribed by the American Arbitration Association for making such selection. The neutral arbitrator so selected will not, without the consent of both parties, be the same person who was selected as mediator pursuant to subsection 2 nor any member of the fact-finding board selected pursuant to subsection 3. As soon as possible after the selection of the neutral arbitrator, the 3 arbitrators or if either party shall not have selected its arbitrator, the 2 arbitrators, as the case may be, shall meet with the parties or their representatives, or both, forthwith, either jointly or separately, make inquiries and investigations, hold hearings, or take such other steps as they deem appropriate. If the neutral arbitrator is selected by utilizing the procedures of the American Arbitration Association, the arbitration proceedings will be conducted in accordance with the rules and procedures of the American Arbitration Association. The hearing shall be informal, and the rules of evidence prevailing in judicial proceedings shall not be binding. Any and all documentary evidence and other data deemed relevant by the arbitrators may be received in evidence. The arbitrators shall have the power to administer oaths and to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of books, records and other evidence relative or pertinent to the issues represented to them for determination.

If the controversy is not resolved by the parties themselves, the arbitrators shall proceed as follows: With respect to a controversy over salaries, pensions and insurance, the arbitrators will recommend terms of settlement and may make findings of fact; such recommendations and findings will be advisory only and will be made, if reasonably possible, within 30 days after the selection of the neutral arbitrator; the arbitrators may in their discretion, make such recommendations and findings public, and either party may make such recommendations and findings public if agreement is not reached with respect to such findings and recommendations within 10 days after their receipt from the arbitrators; with respect to a controversy over subjects other than salaries, pensions and insurance, the arbitrators shall make determinations with respect thereto if reasonably possible within 30 days after the selection of the neutral arbitrator; such determinations may be made public by the arbitrators or either party; and if made by a majority of the arbitrators, such determinations will be binding on both parties and the parties will enter an agreement or take whatever other action that may be appropriate to carry out and effectuate such binding determinations; and such determinations will be subject to review by a Justice of the Superior Court in the manner specified by section 7.

5. Costs. The costs for the services of the mediator, the members of the fact-finding board and of the neutral arbitrator including, if any, per diem expenses, and actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses and the costs of hiring the premises where any mediation, fact-finding or arbitration proceedings are conducted, will be shared equally by the parties to the arbitration. All other costs will be assumed by the party incurring them. The services of the members of the State of Maine's Panel of Mediators and of the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation are available to the parties without cost.

§ 966. Bargaining unit; how determined

In the event of a dispute between the public employer and an employee or employees as to whether a supervisory or other position is included in the bargaining unit, the commissioner shall make the determination, except that anyone excepted from the definition of public employee under section 962 may not be included in a bargaining unit. In determining whether a supervisory position should be excluded from coverage under this chapter, the commissioner shall consider, among other criteria, if the principal functions of the position are characterized by performing such management control duties as scheduling, assigning, overseeing and reviewing the work of subordinate employees, or performing such duties as are distinct and dissimilar from those performed by the employees supervised, or exercising judgment in adjusting grievances, applying other established personnel policies and procedures and in enforcing the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement or establishing or participating in the establishment of performance standards for subordinate employees and taking corrective measures to implement those standards. Nothing in this chapter is intended to require the exclusion of principals, assistant principals, other supervisory employees from school system bargaining units which include teachers and nurses in supervisory positions.

The commissioner shall decide in each case whether, in order to insure to employees the fullest freedom in exercising the rights guaranteed by this chapter, and in order to insure a clear and identifiable community of interest among employees concerned, the unit appropriate for purposes of collective bargaining shall be the public employer unit or any subdivision thereof and no unit shall include both professional and nonprofessional employees unless a majority of such professional employees vote for inclusion in such unit, except that teachers may be included in a unit consisting of other certificated employees.

§ 967. Determination of bargaining agent

1. Voluntary recognition. Any public employee organization may file a request with a public employer alleging that a majority of the public employees in an appropriate bargaining unit wish to be represented for the purpose of collective bargaining between the public employer and the employees' organization. Such request shall describe the grouping of jobs or positions which constitute the unit claimed to be appropriate and shall include a demonstration of majority support. Such request for recognition shall be granted by the public employer unless the public employer desires that an election determine whether the organization represents a majority of the members in the bargaining unit.

2. Elections. The commissioner upon signed request of a public employer alleging that one or more public employees or public employee organizations have presented to it a claim to be recognized as the representative of a bargaining unit of public employees, or upon signed petition of at least 30% of a bargaining unit of public employees that they desire to be represented by an organization, shall conduct a secret election to determine whether the organization represents a majority of the members in the bargaining unit.

The ballot shall contain the name of such organization showing written proof of at least 10% representation of the public employees within the unit, together with a choice for any public employee to designate that he does not desire to be represented by any bargaining agent. Where more than one organization is on the ballot and no one of the 3 or more choices receives a majority vote of the public employees voting, a run-off election shall be held. The run-off ballot shall contain the 2 choices which received the largest and second-largest number of votes. When an organization receives the majority of votes of the unit, the commissioner shall certify it as the bargaining agent. The bargaining agent certified as representing a bargaining unit shall be recognized by the public employer as the sole and exclusive bargaining agent for all of the employees in the bargaining unit unless and until a decertification election by secret ballot shall be held and the bargaining agent declared by the commissioner as not representing a majority of the unit.

Whenever 30% of the employees in a certified bargaining unit petition for a bargaining agent to be decertified, the procedures for conducting an election on the question shall be the same as for representation as bargaining agent hereinbefore set forth.

No question concerning representation may be raised within one year of a certification or attempted certification. Where there is a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect, no question of representation may be raised except during the period not more than 90 or less than 60 days prior to the expiration date of the agreement.

The bargaining agent certified by the commissioner as the exclusive bargaining agent shall be required to represent all the public employees within the unit without regard to membership in the organization certified as bargaining agent, provided that any public employee at any time may present his grievance to the public employer and have such grievance adjusted without the intervention of the bargaining agent, if the adjustment is not inconsistent with the terms of a collective bargaining agreement then in effect and if the bargaining agent's representative has been given reasonable opportunity to be present at any meeting of the parties called for the resolution of such grievance.

All bargaining units officially recognized by public employers prior to the effective date of this Act shall be recognized as certified units and each collective bargaining agreement covering employees in any such bargaining unit shall be effective for its duration or not later than January 1, 1972.

§968. Right of appeal

Whenever any party is aggrieved by any ruling or determination of the commissioner under section 966 and 967, such party may appeal, within 15 days after the announcement of the ruling or determination, to the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board hereinafter established. This appeal will be the sole means of review of such determinations, section 7 to the contrary notwithstanding.

1. Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board. The Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board shall consist of 3 members to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council. The Governor, in making his appointments, shall name one to represent public employees, one to represent public employers and school systems and the 3rd to represent the public, who shall be its chairman. The term of each member shall be for a period of 4 years. The members of the appeals board shall receive necessary expenses on the approval of the Commissioner of Labor and Industry. The commissioner shall designate a member of the Department of Labor and Industry to be the permanent secretary to the appeals board, who shall maintain a record of all proceedings of the appeals board.

The appeals board shall from time to time adopt such rules of procedure as it deems necessary for the orderly conduct of its business, and shall annually, on or before the first day of July, make a report to the Governor and Council which shall be incorporated in and printed with the biennial report of the department. The appropriation for the appeals board shall be included in the department's budget and authorization for expenditures shall be the responsibility of the commissioner.

The appeals board shall sit at the call of the chairman to hear and decide appeals arising from determinations of the commissioner. Decisions of the appeals board shall be subject to review by a Justice of the Superior Court in the manner specified in section 7.

The appeals board shall have the authority to recommend to the Legislature changes or additions to this chapter or of related enactments of law.

2. Summoning witnesses; production of books and records. The appeals board may summon as witnesses any employee or any person in the department who keeps records of wages earned in the business in which the controversy exists and may require the production of books which contain the record of wages paid. Summonses may be signed and oaths administered by any member of the appeals board. Witnesses summoned by the appeals board shall be allowed the same fees as are paid to witnesses in the Superior Court. These fees together with all necessary expenses of the appeals board shall be paid by the Treasurer of State on warrants drawn by the State Controller.

3. Hearings. The appeals board shall, upon receipt of an appeal by the chairman and at the call of the chairman, hold, within 10 days, a hearing on the appeal. The chairman shall give at least 7 days' notice in writing of the time and place of hearing to each of the other 2 members, the aggrieved parties, the labor organizations or bargaining agent and the public employer.

The hearings shall be informal, and the rules of evidence prevailing in judicial proceedings shall not be binding. Any and all documentary evidence and other data deemed relevant by the appeals board may be received in evidence. The chairman shall have the power to administer oaths and to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the presentation of books, records and other evidence relative or pertinent to the issues presented to them for determination.

§969. Municipal personnel board or civil service authority

Nothing in this chapter shall diminish the authority and power of any municipal civil service commission or personnel board or its agents established by statute, charter or special act to conduct and grade merit examinations and to rate candidates in the order of their relative excellence from which appointments or promotions may be made to positions in the competitive division of the classified service of the municipal employer served by such a civil service commission or personnel board. The conduct and the grading of merit examinations, the rating of candidates and the establishment of lists from such examinations and the appointments from such lists shall not be subject to collective bargaining. If a collective bargaining agreement between a public employer and a bargaining agent contains provisions for binding arbitration of grievances involving the following matters: The demotion, lay-off, reinstatement, suspension, removal, discharge or discipline of any public employee, such provisions shall be controlling in the event they are in conflict with any authority and power, involving such matters, of any such municipal civil service commission or personnel board or its agents.

§970. Scope of binding contract arbitration

A collective bargaining agreement between a public employer and a bargaining agent may provide for binding arbitration as the final step of a grievance procedure but the only grievances which may be taken to such binding arbitration shall be disputes between the parties as to the meaning or application of the specific terms of the collective bargaining agreement. An arbitrator with the power to make binding decisions pursuant to any such provision shall have no authority to add to, subtract from or modify the collective bargaining agreement.

§971. Rules and regulations

The commissioner may issue such rules and regulations as the commissioner may consider necessary or appropriate for carrying out the purposes of sections 966 and 967.

STATUTES OF NEVADA 1969

CHAPTER 650

AN ACT relating to public employees; providing for recognition of and negotiation with employee organizations in certain instances; prohibiting strikes; providing penalties; making an appropriation; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEVADA, REPRESENTED IN SENATE AND ASSEMBLY, DO ENACT AS FOLLOWS:

Section 1.

Title 23 of NRS is hereby amended by adding thereto a new chapter to consist of the provisions set forth as sections 2 to 27, inclusive, of this act.

Section 2.

This chapter may be cited as the Local Government Employee-Management Relations Act.

Section 3.

As used in this chapter, unless the context otherwise requires, the words and terms defined in sections 4 to 8, inclusive, of this act have the meanings ascribed to them in such sections.

Section 4.

"Board" means the local government employee-management relations board.

Section 5.

"Employee organization" means any:

1. Association, brotherhood, council or federation composed of employees of the State of Nevada or local government employees or both; or
2. Craft, industrial or trade union whose membership includes employees of the State of Nevada or local government employees or both.

Section 6.

"Local government employee" means any person employed by a local government employer.

Section 7.

"Local government employer" means any political subdivision of this state or any public or quasi-public corporation organized under the laws of this state and includes, without limitation, counties, cities, unincorporated towns, school districts, irrigation districts and other special districts.

Section 8.

"Strike" means any concerted:

1. Stoppage of work, slowdown or interruption of operations by employees of the State of Nevada or local government employees;
2. Absence from work by employees of the State of Nevada or local government employees upon any pretext or excuse, such as illness, which is not founded in fact; or
3. Interruption of the operations of the State of Nevada or any local government employer by any employee organization.

Section 9.

1. It is the right of every local government employee, subject to the limitation provided in subsection 3, to join any employee organization of his choice or to refrain from joining any employee organization. A local government employer shall not discriminate in any way among its employees on account of membership or nonmembership in an employee organization.
2. The recognition of an employee organization for negotiation, pursuant to this chapter, does not preclude any local government employee who is not a member of that employee organization from acting for himself with respect to any condition of his employment, but any action taken on a request or in adjustment of a grievance shall be consistent with the terms of an applicable negotiated agreement, if any.

3. A police officer, sheriff, deputy sheriff or other law enforcement officer may be a member of an employee organization only if such employee organization is composed exclusively of law enforcement officers.

Section 10.

1. It is the duty of every local government employer, except as limited in subsection 2, to negotiate through a representative or representatives of its own choosing concerning wages, hours and conditions of employment with the recognized employee organization, if any, for each appropriate unit among its employees. Where any officer of a local government employer, other than a member of the governing body, is elected by the people and directs the work of any local government employee, such officer is the proper person to negotiate, directly or through a representative or representatives of his own choosing, in the first instance concerning any employee whose work is directed by him, but may refer to the governing body or its chosen representative or representatives any matter beyond the scope of his authority.

2. Each local government employer is entitled, without negotiation or reference to any agreement resulting from negotiation:
   (a) To direct its employees;
   (b) To hire, promote, classify, transfer, assign, retain, suspend, demote, discharge or take disciplinary action against any employee;
   (c) To relieve any employee from duty because of lack of work or for any other legitimate reason;
   (d) To maintain the efficiency of its governmental operations;
   (e) To determine the methods, means and personnel by which its operations are to be conducted; and
   (f) To take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out its responsibilities in situations of emergency.

Section 11.

1. An employee organization may apply to a local government employer for recognition by presenting:
   (a) A copy of its constitution and by laws, if any;
   (b) A roster of its officers, if any, and representatives; and
   (c) A pledge in writing not to strike against the local government employer under any circumstances.

A local government employer shall not recognize as representative of its employees any employee organization which has not adopted, in a manner valid under its own rules, the pledge required by paragraph (c).

2. If an employee organization, at or after the time of its application for recognition, presents a verified membership list showing that it represents a majority of the employees in a negotiating unit, and if such employee organization is recognized by the local government employer, it shall be the exclusive negotiating representative of the local government employees in that negotiating unit.

3. A local government employer may withdraw recognition from an employee organization which:
   (a) Fails to present a copy of each change in its constitution or bylaws, if any, or to give notice of any change in the roster of its officers, if any, and representatives;
   (b) Disavows its pledge not to strike against the local government employer under any circumstances; or
   (c) Ceases to be supported by a majority of the local government employees in the negotiating unit for which it is recognized.

4. If an employee organization is aggrieved by the refusal or withdrawal of recognition, or by the recognition or refusal to withdraw recognition of another employee organization, the aggrieved employee organization may appeal to the board. If the board in good faith doubts whether any employee organization is supported by a majority of the local government employees in a particular negotiating unit, it may conduct an election by secret ballot upon the question. Subject to judicial review, the decision of the board is binding upon the local government employer and all employee organizations involved.

Section 12.

1. Each local government employer which has recognized one or more employee organizations shall determine, after consultation with such recognized organization or organizations, which group or groups of its employees constitute an appropriate unit or units for negotiating purposes. The primary criterion for such determination shall be community of interest among the employees concerned. A local government department head shall not be a member of the same negotiating unit as the employees who serve under his direction. A principal, assistant principal or other school administrator below the rank of superintendent, associate superintendent or assistant superintendent shall not be a member of the same negotiating unit with public school teachers unless the school district employs fewer than five principals but may join with other officials of the same specified ranks to negotiate as a separate negotiating unit.

2. If any employee organization is aggrieved by determination of a negotiating unit, it may appeal to the board. Subject to judicial review, the decision of the board is binding upon the local government employer and all employee organizations involved.

Section 13.

1. Whenever an employee organization desires to negotiate concerning any matter which is subject to negotiation pursuant to this chapter, it shall give written notice of such desire to the local government employer. If the subject of negotiation requires the budgeting of money by the local government employer, the employee organization shall give such notice at least 120 days before the date fixed by law for the completion of the tenative budget of the local government employer for the first period for which the required budget is to be effective.

2. This section does not preclude, but this chapter does not require, informal discussion between an employee organization and a local government employer of any matter which is not subject to negotiation or contract under this chapter. Any such informal discussion is exempt from all requirements of notice or time schedule.

Section 14.

The parties shall promptly commence negotiation and if at the expiration of 45 days from the date of service of the notice required by section 13 of this act the parties have not reached agreement, the parties or either of them may so notify the board, requesting mediation and explaining briefly the subject of negotiation. The board shall, within 5 days, appoint a competent, impartial and disinterested person to act as mediator in the negotiation. It is the function of such mediator to promote agreement between the parties, but his recommendations, if any, are not binding upon an employee organization or the local government employer.

2. If a mediator is appointed, the board shall fix his compensation. The local government employer shall pay one-half of the costs of mediation, and the employee organization or organizations shall pay one-half.

Section 15.

1. If at the expiration of 75 days from the date of service of the notice required by section 13 of this act, the parties have not reached agreement, the mediator is discharged of his responsibility, and the parties shall submit their dispute to a factfinding panel. Within 5 days, the local government employer shall select one member of the panel, and the employee organization or organizations shall select one member. The members so selected shall select the third member, or if within 5 days they fail to do so, the board shall select him within 5 days thereafter. The third member shall act as chairman.

2. The local government employer shall pay one-half of the costs of factfinding, and the employee organization or organizations shall pay one-half.

3. The factfinding panel shall report its findings and recommendations to the parties to the dispute within 25 days after its selection is complete. These findings are not binding upon the parties, but if within 5 days after the panel has so reported the parties have not reached an agreement, the panel shall make its findings public.

Section 16.

1. For the purpose of investigating disputes, any factfinding panel may issue subpenas requiring the attendance of witnesses before it, together with all books, memoranda, papers and other documents relative to the matters under investigation, administer oaths and take testimony thereunder.

2. The district court in and for the county in which any investigation is being conducted by a factfinding panel may compel the attendance of witnesses, the giving of testimony and the production of books and papers as required by any subpena issued by the factfinding panel.

3. In case of the refusal of any witness to attend or testify or produce any papers required by such subpena, the factfinding panel may report to the district court in and for the county in which the investigation is pending by petition, setting forth:
   (a) That due notice has been given of the time and place of attendance of the witness or the production of the books and papers;
   (b) That the witness has been subpenaed in the manner prescribed in this chapter;
   (c) That the witness has failed and refused to attend or produce the papers required by subpena before the factfinding panel in the investigation named in the subpena, or has refused to answer questions propounded to him in the course of such investigation, and asking an order of the court compelling the witness to attend and testify or produce the books or papers before the factfinding panel.

4. The court, upon petition of the factfinding panel, shall enter an order directing the witness to appear before the court at a time and place to be fixed by the court in such order, the time to be not more than 10 days from the date of the order, and then and there show cause why he has not attended or testified or produced the books or papers before the factfinding panel. A certified copy of the order shall be served upon the witness. If it appears to the court that the subpena was regularly issued by the factfinding panel, the court shall thereupon enter an order that the witness appear before the factfinding panel at the time and place fixed in the order and testify or produce the required books or papers, and upon failure to obey the order the witness shall be dealt with as for contempt of court.

Section 17.

The following proceedings, required by or pursuant to this chapter, are not subject to any provision of chapter 241 of NRS:

1. Any negotiation or informal discussion between a local government employer and an employee organization or employees as individuals whether conducted by the governing body or through a representative or representatives.

2. Any meeting of a mediator with either party or both parties to a negotiation.

3. Any meeting or investigation conducted by a factfinding panel.

Section 18.

1. The local government employee-management relations board is hereby created, to consist of three members, broadly representative of the public and not closely allied with any employee organization or local government employer, not more than two of whom shall be members of the same political party. Except as provided in subsection 2, the term of office of each member shall be 4 years.

2. The governor shall appoint the members of the board. Of the first three members appointed, the governor shall designate one whose term shall expire at the end of 2 years. Whenever a vacancy occurs on the board other than through the expiration of a term of office, the governor shall fill such vacancy by appointment for the unexpired term.

Section 19.

1. The members of the board shall annually elect one of their number as chairman and one as vice chairman. Any two members of the board constitute a quorum.

2. The board may, within the limits of legislative appropriations:
   (a) Appoint a secretary, who shall be in the unclassified service of the state; and
   (b) Employ such additional clerical personnel as may be necessary, who shall be in the classified service of the state.

Section 20.

The members of the board shall serve without compensation, but are entitled to the expenses and allowances prescribed in NRS 281.160.

Section 21.

1. The board may make rules governing proceedings before it and procedures for factfinding and may issue advisory guidelines for the use of local government employers in the recognition of employee organizations and determination of negotiating units.

2. The board may hear and determine any complaint arising out of the interpretation of, or performance under, the provisions of this chapter by any local government employer or employee organization. The board, after a hearing, if it finds that the complaint is well taken, may order any person to refrain from the action complained of or to restore to the party aggrieved any benefit of which he has been deprived by such action.

3. Any party aggrieved by the failure of any person to obey an order of the board issued pursuant to subsection 2 may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction for a prohibitory or mandatory injunction to enforce such order.

Section 22.

1. For the purpose of hearing and deciding appeals or complaints, the board may issue subpenas requiring the attendance of witnesses before it, together with all books, memoranda, papers and other documents relative to the matters under investigation, administer oaths and take testimony thereunder.

2. The district court in and for the county in which any hearing is being conducted by the board may compel the attendance of witnesses, the giving of testimony and the production of books and papers as required by any subpena issued by the board.

3. In case of the refusal by any witness to attend or testify or produce any papers required by such subpena the board may report to the district court in and for the county in which the hearing is pending by petition, setting forth:
   (a) That due notice has been given of the time and place of attendance of the witness or the production of the books and papers;
   (b) That the witness has been subpenaed in the manner prescribed in this chapter;
   (c) That the witness has failed and refused to attend or produce the papers required by subpena before the board in the hearing named in the subpena, or has refused to answer questions propounded to him in the course of such hearing, and asking an order of the court compelling the witness to attend and testify or produce the books or papers before the board.

4. The court, upon petition of the board, shall enter an order directing the witness to appear before the court at a time and place to be fixed by the court in such order, the time to be not more than 10 days from the date of the order, and then and there show cause why he has not attended or testified or produced the books or papers before the board. A certified copy of the order shall be served upon the witness. If it appears to the court that the subpena was regularly issued by the board, the court shall thereupon enter an order that the witness appear before the board at the time and place fixed in the order and testify or produce the required books or papers, and upon failure to obey the order the witness shall be dealt with as for contempt of court.

Section 23.

Every hearing and determination of an appeal or complaint by the board is a contested case within the meaning of chapter 233B of NRS. Every such determination is subject to judicial review as provided in chapter 233B of NRS.

Section 24.

1. The legislature finds as facts:
   (a) That the services provided by the state and local government employers are of such nature that they are not and cannot be duplicated from other sources and are essential to the health, safety and welfare of the people of the State of Nevada;
   (b) That the continuity of such services is likewise essential, and their disruption incompatible with the responsibility of the state to its people; and
   (c) That every person who enters or remains in the employment of the state or a local government employer accepts the facts stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) as an essential condition of his employment.

2. The legislature therefore declares it to be the public policy of the State of Nevada that strikes against the state or any local government employer are illegal.

Section 25.

1. If a strike occurs against the state or a local government employer, the state or local government employer shall, and if a strike is threatened against the state or a local government employer, the state or local government employer may, apply to a court of competent jurisdiction to enjoin such strike. The application shall set forth the facts constituting the strike or threat to strike.

2. If the court finds that an illegal strike has occurred or unless enjoined will occur, it shall enjoin the continuance or commencement of such strike. The provisions of N.R.C.P. 65 and of the other Nevada Rules of Civil Procedure apply generally to proceedings under this section, but the court shall not require security of the state or of any local government employer.

Section 26.

1. If a strike is commenced or continued in violation of an order issued pursuant to section 25 of this act, the court may:
   (a) Punish the employee organization or organizations guilty of such violation by a fine of not more than $50,000 against each organization for each day of continued violation.

(b) Punish any officer of an employee organization who is wholly or partly responsible for such violation by a fine of not more than $1,000 for each day of continued violation, or by imprisonment as provided in NRS 22.110.

(c) Punish any employee of the state or of a local government employer who participates in such strike by ordering the dismissal or suspension of such employee.

2. Any of the penalties enumerated in subsection 1 may be applied alternatively or cumulatively, in the discretion of the court.

Section 27.

1. If a strike is commenced or continued in violation of an order issued pursuant to section 25 of this act, the state or the local government employer may:

(a) Dismiss, suspend or demote all or any of the employees who participate in such strike.

(b) Cancel the contracts of employment of all or any of the employees who participate in such strike.

(c) Withhold all or any part of the salaries or wages which would otherwise accrue to all or any of the employees who participate in such strike.

2. Any of the powers conferred by subsection 1 may be exercised alternatively or cumulatively.

Section 28.

There are hereby appropriated from the general fund in the state treasury for the support of the local government employee-management relations board the following sums:

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1969	$ 5,000
For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1970	15,000
For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971	15,000

Section 29.

This act shall become effective upon passage and approval, but no employee organization, local government employer or other person may submit to the local government employee-management relations board before October 1, 1969, any appeal, complaint or other request for action by the board.

AN ACT CONCERNING THE RIGHT OF CERTIFIED PROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEES TO NEGOTIATE WITH BOARDS OF EDUCATION

Public Act 298 of 1965, as amended by Public Act 811 of 1969.

Section 10-153a. RIGHT TO JOIN PROFESSIONAL ORGANIZATIONS. Members of the teaching profession shall have the right to join or refuse to join any organization for professional or economic improvement free from interference, restraint, coercion or discriminatory practices by any employing board of education or administrative agents or representatives thereof.

Section 10-153b. SELECTION OF TEACHERS' REPRESENTATIVES. (a) Whenever used in sections 10-153b to 10-153f, inclusive, of the general statutes: (1) The "administrators' unit" means those certified professional employees in a school district who are employed in positions requiring an intermediate administrator or supervisor certificate, or the equivalent thereof, and are not excluded from the purview of this act. (b) The superintendent of schools, assistant superintendents, certified professional employees who act for the board of education in negotiations with certified professional personnel or are directly responsible to the board of education for personnel relations or budget preparation, temporary substitutes and all non-certified employees of the board of education are excluded from the purview of this act. (c) The employees in either unit defined in this section may designate any organization of certified professional employees to represent them in negotiations concerning salaries and all other conditions of employment with the town or regional board of education which employs them by filing, during the period between October first and April fifteenth of any school year, with the board of education a petition which requests recognition of such organization for purposes of negotiation under this section and sections 10-153c and 10-153d and is signed by a majority of the employees in such unit. Within three school days next following the receipt of such petition, such board shall post a notice of such request for recognition and mail a copy thereof to the secretary. Such notice shall state the name of the organization designated by the petitioners, the unit to be represented and the date of receipt of such petition by the board. If no petition which requests a representation election and is signed by twenty per cent of the employees in such unit is filed in accordance with the provisions of subsection (d) with the secretary within the thirty days next following the date on which the board of education posts notice of the designation petition, such board shall recognize the designated organization as the exclusive representative of the employees in such unit for a period of one year or until a representation election has been held for such unit pursuant to this section and section 10-153c, whichever occurs later. The* secretary shall file notice of such petition with the town or regional board of education on or before the third school day following receipt of the petition. The secretary shall not divulge the names on such petition or any petition filed with him pursuant to this section to anyone except upon court order. Such notice shall state the name of the petitioning group, the unit for which an election is sought and the date the petition was filed. Within three school days after receipt of such notice, the town or regional board of education shall post a copy of the notice. Any organization interested in representing personnel in such unit may intervene within ten school days after the board posts notice of such petition by filing with the secretary a petition signed by ten per cent of the employees in such unit. The secretary shall notify the town or regional board on or before the third day following receipt of the intervening petition, and such board shall post notice of the intervening petition within three days following receipt thereof. No intervening petition shall be required from any incumbent organization previously designated by the board or elected and such incumbent organization shall be listed on the ballot if a petition for a representation election is filed. The town or regional board, the petitioning organization, the incumbent organization, if any, and any intervening organization may agree on an impartial person or agency to conduct such an election consistent with the other provisions of this section, provided not more than one such election shall be held to elect an organization to represent the employees in such unit in any one school year. In the event of a disagreement on the agency to conduct the election, the method shall be determined by the board of arbitration selected in accordance with section 10-153c. The person or agency so selected shall conduct between twenty and forty-five days after the first petition requesting an election is filed with the secretary, an election by secret ballot to determine which organization, if any, shall represent such unit. The town or regional board of education shall pay the cost incurred by the impartial person or agency selected to conduct the election. Such person or agency shall immediately report the results of the election to the secretary. If satisfied that the election has been conducted properly, the secretary shall certify that the organization receiving a majority of votes is the exclusive representative of the employees in such unit. The representative designated or elected in accordance with this section shall be the exclusive representative of all the employees in such unit for the purposes of negotiating with respect to salary schedules and personnel policies relative to employment of certified professional employees, provided any certified professional employee or group of such employees shall have the right at any time to present any grievance to such persons as the town or regional board of education shall designate for that purpose. (e) Any organization which has been designated or elected the exclusive representative of a unit which includes teachers and administrators shall continue to be the exclusive representative of such personnel upon expiration of the salary agreement in effect between such organization and the board of education employing such personnel on the effective date of this act, until or unless employees of such board of education in either of the units defined in this section initiate a petition for designation or election of an organization to represent them in accordance with the procedures set forth in this act.

Section 10-153c. DISPUTES AS TO ELECTION. Any dispute as to the eligibility of personnel to vote in an election, or the agency to conduct the election required by section 10-153b, shall be submitted to a board of arbitration for a binding decision with respect thereto. If there are two or more organizations seeking to represent employees, each may name an arbitrator within five days after receipt of a request for arbitration made in writing by any party to the dispute. Such arbitrators, together with an equal number named by the board of education, shall select an additional impartial member thereof within five days after the arbitrators have been named by the parties. The impartial agency selected to conduct the election shall decide all procedural matters relating to such election and shall conduct such election fairly. Each organization shall have, during the election process, equal access to school mail boxes and facilities.

Section 10-153d. DUTY TO NEGOTIATE. The town or regional board of education and the organization designated or elected as the exclusive representative for the appropriate unit, through designated officials or their representatives, shall have the duty to negotiate with respect to salaries and other conditions of employment about which either party wishes to negotiate and such duty shall include the obligation of such board of education to meet at reasonable times, including meetings appropriately related to the budget-making process, and confer in good faith with respect to salaries and other conditions of employment, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder and the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached, if requested by either party, but such obligation shall not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession. The board of education of any town school district shall file forthwith a signed copy of any such contract with the town clerk. Any regional board of education shall file a signed copy of any such contract with the town clerk in each member town. The terms of such contract shall be binding on the legislative body of the town or regional school district, unless such body rejects such contract at a regular or special meeting called for such purpose within thirty days of the signing of the contract. Any regional board of education shall call a district meeting to consider such contract within such thirty-day period if the chief executive officer of any member town so requests in writing within fifteen days of the receipt of the signed copy of the contract by the town clerk in such town. The body charged with making annual appropriations in any school district shall appropriate to the board of education whatever funds are required to implement the terms of any contract not rejected pursuant to this section. If the legislative body rejects such contract within such period, the parties shall renegotiate the terms of the contract in accordance with the procedure in this section. The town or regional board of education, and its representatives, agents and superintendents shall not interfere, restrain or coerce employees in derogation of the rights guaranteed by sections 2 through 5 of this act and section 10-153c of the 1967 supplement to the general statutes, and, in the absence of any recognition or certification as the exclusive representative as provided by section 2 of this act, all organizations seeking to represent members of the teaching profession shall be accorded equal treatment with respect to access to teachers, principals, members of the board of education, records, mail boxes and school facilities and participation in discussions with respect to salaries and other conditions of employment.

Section 10-153e. STRIKE PROHIBITED. No certified professional employee shall, in an effort to effect a settlement of any disagreement with his employing board of education, engage in any strike or concerted refusal to render services. This provision may be enforced in the Superior Court for any county in which said board of education is located by an ex parte temporary injunction issued by said court or a judge thereof; provided, however, that if such injunction is issued, such employee may file a motion to dissolve said injunction and a hearing upon said motion shall be held by the superior court not later than three days after service of said motion upon said board of education pursuant to an order of court or a judge thereof.

Section 10-153f. MEDIATION AND ARBITRATION OF DISAGREEMENTS. (a) The governor shall appoint not less than ten or more than twenty-five persons to serve on an arbitration panel as provided in subsection (c) of this section from the effective date of this act through December 31, 1970. Except as provided above, the governor shall appoint before the first day of December in the year of his election ten persons to serve on such panel, and he may appoint additional persons to the panel at any time provided the total number of persons serving on the panel shall not exceed twenty-five. Each appointee shall serve until the last day of December following the first gubernatorial election after his appointment. Persons appointed to the arbitration panel shall serve without compensation but each shall receive the per diem fee in lieu of expenses provided for arbitrators in section 31-94 for each day during which he is engaged in the arbitration of a dispute pursuant to this act. The parties to the dispute so arbitrated shall pay the fee in accordance with subsection (c) of this section. (b) If any town or regional board of education can not agree with the exclusive representatives of a teachers' or administrators' unit after negotiation concerning the terms and conditions of employment applicable to the employees in such unit, either party may submit the issues to the secretary for mediation. If the parties fail to initiate mediation and such failure is, in the opinion of the secretary, jeopardizing the education of the children in such school district, the secretary may order the parties to appear before him for mediation of the dispute. In either case, the parties shall meet with him or his agents or a mediator designated by him from a panel of mediators selected by the state board of education to assist him. For such purposes, the secretary may enter contracts for services with members of such panel, the terms of which shall be subject to approval by the state board of education. The parties shall provide such information as the secretary may require. The secretary may recommend a basis for settlement but such recommendations shall not be binding upon the parties. (c) If after mediation the parties have not reached agreement, the secretary may order the parties to appear before him on the fourth day next following the end of the mediation session. At such time the parties shall report their settlement of the dispute or each select and bring an arbitrator to such meeting. Such arbitrators may be members of the arbitration panel. Unless the parties have agreed to submit their dispute to one arbitrator, their designated arbitrators shall select a third arbitrator. If either party fails to bring an arbitrator, the secretary shall designate a member of the arbitration panel to serve and the two arbitrators shall select a third. If in either case the two arbitrators fail to agree on the selection of a third during such meeting, the secretary shall select the third from the arbitration panel. If both parties fail to bring an arbitrator and have not settled their dispute, the secretary shall designate one member of the arbitration panel to arbitrate the dispute. The arbitrators shall set the time and place for the hearing one week from the day on which the parties reported to the secretary except that if such day is Saturday, Sunday or a holiday, the hearing shall be held on the next Monday or the day following the holiday. After hearing all the issues, the arbitrators shall, within fifteen days, render a decision in writing, signed by a majority of the arbitrators, which states in detail the nature of the decision and the disposition of the issues by the arbitrators. The arbitrators shall file one copy of the decision with the secretary, each town clerk in the school district involved and the board of education and organization which are parties to the dispute. The decision of the arbitrators shall be advisory and shall not be binding upon the parties to the dispute. The parties shall each pay the fee of the arbitrator selected by or for them and share equally the fee of the third arbitrator and all other costs incidental to the hearing. (d) The secretary and the arbitrators shall have the same powers and duties as the board under section 31-108 for the purposes of mediation or arbitration pursuant to this act, and all provisions in said section with respect to procedure, jurisdiction of the superior court, witnesses and penalties shall apply.

Section 10-153g. PRECEDENCE OVER SPECIAL ACTS. Notwithstanding the provisions of any special act, municipal charter or local ordinance, the provisions of sections 10-153a to 10-153f of the general statutes, as amended, shall apply to negotiations concerning salaries and conditions of employment conducted by boards of education and certified personnel.

OREGON

AN ACT RELATING TO WORKING RELATIONS BETWEEN BOARDS OF EDUCATION AND THE TEACHING PROFESSION

Chapter 390 of 1965, as amended by Chapter 647 of 1969.

Section 1.

The Legislative Assembly, recognizing that teaching is a profession, declares that in matters arising between district school boards and certificated school personnel, it is in the best interest of public education in this state to establish a procedure for the orderly, equitable and expeditious resolution of such matters. [Sec. 1 as amended by Ch. 647, L. 1969, approved and effective June 16, 1969.]

Section 2.

Certificated school personnel below the rank of superintendent in a school district shall have the right to confer, consult and discuss in good faith with the district school board by which they are employed on matters of salaries and related economic policies affecting professional services. The board may be represented by a committee of its members or may designate a representative. The certificated personnel may be represented individually, by a committee of such personnel elected by a majority of the certificated personnel below the rank of superintendent, or by an employee organization elected either by a majority of the certificated personnel below the rank of superintendent or by a majority of a category of certificated personnel as defined in subsection (4) of this section. In the event an employee organization is elected, the individuals representing the certificated employees in consultations with the district board must also be certificated employees of the district. However, nothing in this section is intended to affect the powers and duties of the district school board over matters of salaries and economic policies affecting professional services. [Sec. 2 as amended by Ch. 647, L. 1969, approved and effective June 16, 1969.]

Section 3.

Except as provided in this section, the district school board shall establish election procedures to ensure that certificated school personnel shall have the opportunity, not later than 30 days after the first day of the school year, to determine by one or more elections whether the certificated personnel shall be represented under this 1969 Act individually, by a committee of such personnel, or by a particular employee organization.

Organizations may be placed on the ballot either by certifying to the district board that an organization has a membership enrollment of at least 40 percent of the total number of certificated school employes below the rank of superintendent in the district, or by petition containing the signatures of 15 percent of the certificated employes of the district. At any election where organizations are placed on the ballot, the choice of representation by a committee of the employes shall be included.

Administrators, which include those individuals the majority of whose employed time is devoted to service as a supervisor, principal, vice principal, or director in a school district, or teachers, which include all other certificated employes, may separate for the purposes of representation under this 1969 Act by a majority vote of either category. Such an election may be called by submitting such a request containing the signatures of 10 percent of the certificated employes of the district.

The committee or organization elected by the certificated employes of the district shall be the exclusive representative of the certificated employes or category of certificated employes for the purposes of this 1969 Act. [Sec. 3 as amended by Ch. 647, L. 1969, approved and effective June 16, 1969.]

Section 4.

Whenever it appears to the district school board or the certificated school employees meeting with the board under this Act that a persistent disagreement over a matter of salaries or economic policies affecting professional services exists between the board and the employes, the board or the employes may request the appointment of consultants. The consultants shall consist of one member appointed by the board, one member appointed by the employes and one member chosen by the other two members.

The board and the employes shall each select their representative consultant within five days, and the third consultant shall be selected within 10 days after selection of the other consultants.

Within 10 days of the time of the final appointment, the consultants shall submit in writing to the board and to the employes representatives their recommendation of a reasonable basis for the settlement of the disagreement. [Sec. 4 as amended by Ch. 647, L. 1969, approved and effective June 16, 1969.]

Section 5.

ORS 243.710 to 243.750 shall not apply to certificated public school personnel. [This section removes certificated school personnel from collective bargaining law.]

Defendants

Civil Action
No. IP 69-C-252

PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

This cause came on for hearing before the Court on June 12, 1969, on motion of the plaintiffs for a preliminary injunction pursuant to their verified complaint alleging that the defendants have interfered with rights of plaintiffs secured by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States and praying that the defendants be enjoined from continuing to interfere with such rights pending final determination of the action, as set forth in said complaint and motion;

And having heard the testimony in support of said motion and having considered the pleadings, stipulations of the parties, exhibits introduced into evidence, and affidavits submitted by defendants in opposition to said motion, and having heard arguments of Counsel and being fully advised in the premises, the Court now makes the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Plaintiff Indianapolis Education Association (hereinafter called "IEA") is an Indiana corporation with a membership of approximately 3,200 teachers employed in the Indianapolis public schools. It is a professional teachers' organization affiliated with the Indiana State Teachers' Association and the National Education Association.

2. The defendants are the duly elected members of the Board of School Commissioners of the City of Indianapolis, Indiana (hereinafter called "School Board"), which is a public school corporation authorized by Indiana law to administer the affairs of the Indianapolis public schools.

3. Since November of 1968, discussions had been held between the IEA and the School Board concerning collective bargaining on teachers' salaries and other conditions of employment for the 1969-70 school year. Thereafter, on May 14, 1969, the parties agreed to a consent election under supervision of the Department of Labor of the State of Indiana, by a bargaining unit composed of non-supervisory teachers, such election to be held on May 21, 1969. The School Board further agreed to recognize the winning organization as the exclusive bargaining agent for such teachers in respect to salaries and other conditions of employment, to bargain in good faith immediately following the announcement determining the agent, and that the winning organization should have the responsibility to represent all such teachers, regardless of membership in any organization.

4. Thereafter, on May 20, 1969, the School Board unilaterally adopted a salary and benefit schedule for the 1969-70 school year which gave such teachers a salary increase, and on May 21, 22, and 23, 1969, individual contracts reflecting the increase were mailed to such teachers for their signature and return. Some of the contracts have been signed and returned by such teachers and some have not.

5. The representation election was duly held on May 21, 1969, and the IEA was chosen as the exclusive bargaining agent for such teachers by approximately 95% of the valid ballots cast. The election results were announced on the evening of May 21, 1969, immediately following the tabulation of votes.

6. Thereafter, on May 26 and 27, 1969, the complete salary schedule previously adopted by the School Board was distributed to such teachers, together with a memorandum stating, among other things, that "we hope this will aid you in understanding the amount you will receive as well as the pay schedule".

7. The School Board's adoption of a salary schedule and distribution of individual teachers' contracts for the 1969-70 school year followed a pattern that has been part of School Board routine for many years.

8. Since May 29, 1969, bargaining meetings have been held between the parties, and the School Board has proposed, among other things, that the bargaining representative for the IEA be a teacher in the Indianapolis public schools.

9. With knowledge of such impending election and of its agreement to bargain in good faith, the School Board owed such teachers more than mere adherence to former customary procedures in the matter of determining salaries and other benefits for the 1969-70 school year.

10. The acts of the School Board after May 14, 1969, in submitting individual contracts to such teachers prior to negotiations with the IEA constitute an interference with the normal processes of good faith collective bargaining, and such acts, together with other acts both before and after May 14, 1969, as shown by the evidence constitute an unjustifiable interference by the defendants under their authority as members of the School Board with the exercise by teachers employed in the Indianapolis public schools who are members of such bargaining unit of federally-protected rights and privileges, as follows:

(a) The right to associate together through a chosen representative for the purpose of negotiating on an equal basis with their employer with respect to their economic and professional interests,

(b) The right to be heard through a chosen representative in a meaningful and effective way with respect to their economic and professional interests,

(c) The right collectively to advance and further their ideas and beliefs on what they consider to be their economic and professional well-being,

(d) The right to petition the government in a meaningful and effective way for redress of economic and professional grievances,

(e) The liberty to contract for personal services by a bargaining process through a representative of their own choosing,

(f) The right of equality of opportunity enjoyed by citizens in private employment to bargain collectively with respect to terms and conditions of public employment.

11. The individual plaintiffs are teachers employed in the Indianapolis public schools and members of the bargaining unit. Plaintiff Hadley is not a member of the Indianapolis Education Association. Such bargaining unit consists of approximately 4,200 teachers and is so large that joinder of each teacher in this action is impractical. Questions of law and fact with respect to all of such teachers are identical and the plaintiffs will fairly and adequately represent and protect their interests in this action.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The Court has jurisdiction of this action pursuant to Title 18 of the United States Code Section 1343(3) and Title 42 of the United States Code, Section 1983, known as Section 1 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871.

2. This is a proper class action pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

3. The acts of the defendants constitute an unjustifiable interference under color of law with fundamental rights of teachers who are members of the bargaining unit of free speech, association, petition, equal protection, and due process of law guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

4. Such acts will, unless restrained, constitute continued interference with the rights of teachers, as aforesaid, and result in irreparable injury for which there is no speedy or adequate remedy at law, and a preliminary injunction is necessary to preserve the status quo of good faith negotiations with respect to teachers' salaries and other conditions of employment for the 1969-70 school year until the final determination of this action.

IT IS THEREFORE ORDERED AND DECREED that the defendants, and each of them, their agents, servants, employees, and all persons acting in concert and collaboration with them be enjoined from:

(a) Bargaining individually with any member of the bargaining unit for which the Indianapolis Education Association has been elected the exclusive bargaining representative;

(b) Validating any contract signed by any member of the bargaining unit for which the Indianapolis Education Association has been elected the exclusive bargaining representative until good faith negotiations on salary and other conditions of employment have been carried out;

(c) Recognizing as a valid legal document any contract signed by members of the bargaining unit for which the Indianapolis Education Association has been elected the exclusive bargaining representative for the 1969-70 school year until good faith negotiations on salary and other conditions of employment have been carried out;

(d) In any other manner, directly or indirectly, interfering or attempting to interfere with any member of the bargaining unit for which the Indianapolis Education Association has been elected the exclusive bargaining representative in the exercise of his right to bargain collectively through the Indianapolis Education Association with respect to salary and other conditions of employment;

pending final determination of this action and until further order of this Court, provided that plaintiff Indianapolis Education Association forthwith gives a bond in the sum of $25,000.00 dollars for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who shall be found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained, and such bond shall be approved by the Clerk of this Court.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the parties report to the Court on or before August 1, 1969, concerning the progress of good faith negotiations.

The foregoing is not to be construed as preventing the defendants from employing new non-supervisory teachers for the 1969-70 school year by individual contracts, provided that such new employees will become members of the said bargaining unit and be bound by the terms of any collective bargaining agreement which may result from negotiations between the defendants and the Indianapolis Education Association.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of this Order be served upon Stephen W. Terry, Jr. and E. C. Ulen, Jr., of the firm of Baker and Daniels, 810 Fletcher Trust Building, Indianapolis, Indiana, attorneys for the defendants, and that such service shall have the same force and effect as if served upon the defendants in person.

Dated June 19, 1969.

Note to Subscribers

With this issue, NEGOTIATION RESEARCH DIGEST begins publication in a new format. It is hoped the change will enable the DIGEST to better inform its subscribers of the rapid developments in educational negotiation.

Negotiation in public education is growing and changing. Comprehensive agreements have increased from 398 in 1966-67 to 1,200 or more in 1968-69, an increase of 200 percent. The number of states with negotiation statutes has grown to 22—almost half the nation.

To cover this field and the important judicial decisions, legislation, board decisions, and subject areas, the DIGEST now comprises five new sections:

Case Reviews summarizes judicial decisions and legislative acts.
Board Findings and Rulings summarizes arbitration results and decisions of employee relations boards.
Negotiation Notes chronicles brief items of more limited significance to the field. All material will be drawn from the extensive research and reportorial services of the NEA Research Division's Negotiation Data Bank.
Statistics provides tables and analyses from NEA Research Division surveys of teachers and administrators in school districts across the country.
Special Reports consists of two basic types of articles: briefs of recent agreements, and unique provisions, providing essential information on agreements on file: and in-depth surveys of current issues. These surveys examine and trace the development of major subject areas in negotiation. Future issues of the DIGEST will include examination of strike penalties, case studies, agency shop, representation, funding of agreements, and other major areas as they arise.
Texts confines itself to reports, legislation, statements, or agreement provisions of outstanding consequence, or those which may not be readily available elsewhere.

Subscribers who request full text reprints of major articles in the Case Reviews will be sent copies, where available, or exact citations for judicial decisions.

The Negotiation Research Digest is published ten times per year, September through June. Single copy, $3.00; 2-9 copies, 10% discount; 10 or more copies 20% discount.

Subscription Rate: One year subscription to the Negotiation Research Digest for NEA members and NEA affiliates, $15.00; others, $30.00. Send inquiries to the NEA Records Division.

CALIFORNIA

TEACHERS GRANTED RIGHT TO CIRCULATE PETITION IN OFF-DUTY HOURS

A school-board rule prohibiting teachers from circulating a petition during duty-free hours was struck down by the California Supreme Court, as a violation of First Amendment rights to free speech.

The Los Angeles Teachers Union Local asked the court to strike down a Los Angeles City Board of Education rule prohibiting teachers from circulating petitions during duty-free hours and teacher lunch periods. The petition contained a notation that it should be circulated only during "non-instructional" time.

The court said that the government has no right to infringe upon Constitutional rights, except in cases which rise "far above public inconvenience, annoyance or unrest." The court pointed out that the interruption for teachers who might be planning lessons, or be otherwise engaged, would be minimal in any case, and no greater than interruptions which teachers would encounter in duty-free hours anyway.

Citing other school free speech cases, the Court continued, "Harmony among public employees is undoubtedly a legitimate governmental objective as a general proposition; however, as we have seen, government has no interest in preventing the sort of disharmony which inevitably results from the mere expression of ideas."

CONNECTICUT

BOARD OF ALDERMEN CAN DENY FUNDS FOR IMPLEMENTING TEACHER AGREEMENT

A Connecticut court ruled that Waterbury City Charter provisions granting ultimate review and control of teacher's salaries to the Waterbury Board of Finance and Board of Aldermen, take precedence over a contract executed pursuant to the state's Teacher Negotiation Act. (see NRD, Sept. 1969, C-1).

Waterbury Teachers conducted a two-day strike in January 1968 when the Board of Aldermen refused to grant funds to carry out a negotiated salary agreement. The strike was ended when the school board agreed to join the teachers in taking the contract dispute to court.

The court's conclusion was that "until the legislature decrees otherwise, the final say as to teacher's salaries rests with the ultimate budgetary control of the Board of Finance and the Board of Aldermen." The court advised the teachers to seek a political solution, rather than a legal one, or "ask the legislature to change or better define the respective power of the boards involved."

The Court reasoned that because the act permitting teacher negotiations is silent as to repeal of local charter provisions, but the Connecticut Municipal Employee Relations Act is not, this "seems to indicate a definite legislative direction that agreements with municipal employees other than teachers, once ratified, must be funded and paid in accordance with the terms thereof; but that in the case of agreements with teachers, there is no such requirement of funding and no requirement that either party agree to any proposal or make a concession."

In considering the arguments and precedents cited by the school board and the Connecticut Education Association, the court found that although the school board may be considered an agency of the state, "by whatever road we detour, we seem to arrive at the same conclusion—that ultimate control of the amounts of teachers' salaries remains in the Board of Finance and Board of Aldermen" in Connecticut municipalities.

INDIANA

TEACHER COLLECTIVE BARGAINING NOT A CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT

The "federally protected rights and privileges" for teachers, enunciated by a U.S. District Court for Indiana (NRD, Sept. 1969), were overruled by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. The appeals court reversed the lower court opinion, finding that while teachers have a constitutional right to associate for collective bargaining, only a state statute can impose the duty to negotiate. According to the Indiana state attorney general, the absence of a state statute made the issue of whether the school board had to negotiate with teachers "confusing."

The case arose initially when the Indianapolis Teachers Association was granted an injunction prohibiting the Board of School Commissioners of Indianapolis from bargaining individually with teachers. The court granted the injunction after the school board had failed to bargain collectively with the elected representative of the teachers when it had promised to do so. The lower court said that the unilateral action of the school board in mailing individual teacher contracts violated constitutional rights of teachers under the First and Fourteenth Amendments.

The appeals court, disagreeing with the lower court opinion, ruled, "There is no constitutional duty to bargain collectively with an exclusive bargaining agent; such duty, when imposed, is imposed by statute. . . . Nor does the fact that an agreement to collectively bargain may be enforceable against a state elevate a contractual right to a constitutional right."

The appeals court agreed with the school board's argument that there was a "pressing need" for the board to know "as soon as possible" how many incumbent teachers would renew their contracts.

The appeals court differed from the lower court, and ruled that teachers' constitutional rights did not extend "to the right of equality of opportunity enjoyed by citizens in private employment to bargain collectively with respect to terms and conditions of public employment," as the lower court had found. The higher court did assert, however, "There is no question that the right of teachers to associate for the purpose of collective bargaining is a right protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments."

Following the appeals court decision, the state superintendent of public instruction issued a directive urging all boards and teachers to come to agreement as soon as possible, and said that, in his view, "teachers have a right to join in groups or organizations for the purpose of discussing with local boards, matters relating to their welfare, and other educational considerations."

Note: An Indiana State Legislative Committee is scheduled to hear proposals for teacher collective bargaining legislation at a session with the state teachers organization in September. The Committee hopes to prepare a bill for 1971. It is believed that although a bill granting public employee bargaining (excluding teachers) failed in the 1969 session, the Committee will draft it's own proposal, should the teachers associations and the Indiana School Boards Association fail to agree on a single proposal.

IOWA

EXPANSION OF COURT OPINION PROHIBITS PUBLIC EMPLOYEES FROM STRIKING

Expanding an opinion handed down in June 1969, that state law permits, but does not compel, public employers to enter into collective bargaining with their employees, the court ruled that public employees have no right to strike.

The Iowa state Board of Regents had requested further rulings in the case, which arose from a strike in February 1969 by the United Packinghouse Workers who were attempting to obtain recognition for physical plant employees at the University of Northern Iowa.

Noting that neither the Iowa legislature nor state supreme court have dealt with public employees strikes, the court said: "This question has been before the courts in numerous states, however, including many states with no express statutory provision covering this matter. The overwhelming authority throughout the United States holds that public employees have no right to engage in a strike against their public employer, irrespective of whether this 'public policy' has been articulated by legislative enactment or by judicial decision."

The court dismissed the Regents' request that the union be enjoined from picketing the campus, and from inducing employees of other employers to cease work (secondary boycott) because the judge found no evidence that the unions engaged in either of these activities. The court thus concluded that "they cannot be enjoined from doing what they have not done or threatened to do."

MICHIGAN

CURTAILMENT OF LEGALLY NEGOTIABLE AREAS FOR TEACHERS OVERTURNED

A Michigan circuit court ruled curtailment of legally negotiable areas for teachers erroneous.

An October 1968 opinion of the attorney general had eliminated school-board agreements on terminal leave, payment for accumulated sick leave, and reimbursement of tuition credits for graduate study. This opinion was based on the premise that the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act is a general law, and therefore overruled by specific laws, such as the School Code and the Teachers Retirement Act.

In overruling the opinion of the attorney general, the circuit court noted that PERA "creates a monumental change in this State," and defined the purpose of PERA as granting "many of the rights and kinds of contractual benefits gained by workers in private employment by the collective bargaining process." The court said further that the purpose of the legislature in PERA "is to make the provisions of the Public Employment Relations Act controlling on the subject of the authorized scope of public collective bargaining and resulting employment contracts . . . . We find no necessary repugnancy between [PERA and other statutes]. On the contrary, none of the other statutes pertains to the permissible scope of public employment collective bargaining agreements nor irreconcilably limits the negotiable subjects."

Indicating the implied limitations of PERA for teachers, the court noted: "Public Employees and teachers cannot strike to support their demands, and the economic benefits of school contracts are necessarily limited to available funds which are controlled by legislative appropriation and public approval of extra millage proposals."

NEW YORK

APPEAL OF CONTEMPT CONVICTIONS FOR STRIKING TURNED DOWN

An appeal by New York sanitationmen of a criminal contempt conviction was denied by the New York Court of Appeals, and was refused a hearing by the Supreme Court of the United States.

The New York Court of Appeals found the Taylor Law constitutional, and said that the guidelines of the Supreme Court of the United States for illegal strikes indicate that the state, "in governing its internal affairs had the power to prohibit any strike if the prohibition was reasonably calculated to achieve a valid state policy in an area which was open to state regulation."

Taking this criterion as the main question in the case, the court of appeals found that the prohibition against strikes "is reasonably designed to effectuate a valid state policy in an area where it has authority to act."

"The striking employees," the court reasoned, "by paralyzing a city through the exercise of naked power, could obtain gains wholly disproportionate to the services rendered by them . . . . The consequence would be the destruction of democratic and legislative processes."

The sanitationmen then appealed the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, charging that the Taylor Law was unconstitutional in depriving public employees of due process in the denial of a jury trial and the denial of liberty and property without due process.

The Supreme Court of the United States declined to review the decision of the New York Court, "for want of a properly presented federal question."

STATE COURT HOLDS NONTENURE TEACHERS MAY GRIEVE

The New York Supreme Court of Suffolk County ruled that public employee organizations may submit grievances to binding arbitration for nontenure teachers, if the teacher's termination violated terms of the contract.

An apparent contradiction arose over two clauses in the agreement: one stated that nontenure teachers must be notified of termination by March 1; the other specified that "in the case of a nontenured teacher, termination shall not be grievable."

The Board of Education of the Union Free School District No. 3 contested arbitration of a grievance filed by the Associated Teachers of Huntington over the dismissal, after March 1, of a nontenure teacher, citing the clause that "in the case of a non-tenured teacher, termination shall not be grievable," and the State Education Law, which does not require termination by March 1.

The court found that the Education Law "allows termination of employment of a non-tenure teacher at any time during his probationary period without a hearing." but, the court continued, it is "indisputable that this section does not forbid providing a non-tenure teacher with prior notice of termination," as specified in the subsequent contract.

The contradiction between the two clauses cited by the board, the court said, is resolved by the fact that the clause which says "termination shall not be grievable" for a nontenure teacher refers to termination of a tenure teacher's contract. The Court concluded that it had been unable to find "any language" in the contract "which would imply that the procedure used in the termination of a non-tenure teacher was prohibited from being the subject of an arbitration proceeding."

PENNSYLVANIA

VOLUNTARY TRANSFER CLAUSE HELD INVALID

A Philadelphia teacher contract clause allowing only voluntary reassignments to schools was declared invalid by a Philadelphia court, because such a clause removes the publicly delegated responsibility from the superintendent.

The clause, negotiated by the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, under threat of a strike, was supported by the school superintendent, who maintained the clause would resolve the problems of racial imbalance and fair distribution of teachers. The clause aroused considerable controversy and instigated an investigation by the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission.

In its decision, the court confined itself to consideration of "whether the 'Board' by permitting this to be a subject for collective bargaining, abused its discretion." The court found that the policy of assignment and transfer of teachers must remain with those invested with those powers by the legislature, and that the Philadelphia Charter places this power specifically with the superintendent.

Although it recognized that this decision could have a negative effect on "the need to maintain a cadre of experienced and qualified teachers," the court said this "obviously does not justify the 'Superintendent's' surrender of his obligation to design the policy."

While recognizing the "right of teachers to bargain collectively," the court concluded that these considerations do not "prevent the curtailing of the latter right where overriding policies so dictate. Where the State's educational system is involved, the range of appropriate subjects for collective bargaining must be circumscribed by the public interest in carrying out, in a meaningful way, the objectives of the overall educational policies."

RHODE ISLAND

BINDING ARBITRATION FOR PUBLIC EMPLOYEES HELD CONSTITUTIONAL

The Rhode Island Supreme Court held that an arbitration panel, called under the authority of the Fire Fighters Arbitration Act, can make decisions on bargaining issues, which will be binding on both the bargaining agent and the municipality.

The lower court had held that arbitration panel decisions were an invalid delegation of the police power of the state to private persons, i.e., the arbitrators. The court ruled against this contention on the grounds that the function of an arbitration panel relates to "the public safety, and to the public's interest in an uninterrupted operation of the public safety services."

Note: The case will effect the Rhode Island School Teacher's Arbitration Act (NRD), May 1967), which calls for binding arbitration in nonmonetary matters.

WASHINGTON

PROFESSIONAL NEGOTIATION LAWS HELD VALID

The validity of state laws governing teacher/school board negotiation for wages was upheld by the Washington Supreme Court.

The Yakima Local (AFT) brought the suit, following a bargaining election in which the Yakima Education Association was the sole teacher organization participating. The suit charged that the negotiation act unconstitutionally delegated legislative power to the school boards.

The state supreme court ruled that "the Legislature may properly grant broad powers to municipal corporations . . . so long as those powers relate to local purposes of regulation or administration."

WISCONSIN

SCHOOL BOARD PROHIBITED FROM GRANTING EXCLUSIVE CHECK-OFF OR PROFESSIONAL LEAVE FOR MAJORITY TEACHER'S REPRESENTATIVE

A majority union cannot negotiate an exclusive dues check-off, according to a recent ruling of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, which overturned a decision of the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission.

In an appeal brought by the Milwaukee Teachers Union, after the school board negotiated with the Milwaukee Teachers Education Association for an exclusive check-off, and a concomitant request by the school board for a declaratory judgement in the case, the validity of the following issues was raised: the legitimacy of exclusive dues check-off under the state's public employees law, the minority union's right to speak on negotiable items at public meetings of the negotiating group, and whether names and addresses of new employees should be made available to the minority union.

WERC had ruled that exclusive check-off is permissible, that a minority union's right to discuss negotiable items in public meetings could be denied, and that the employee list, as a matter of public record, was available to all interested parties.

The state supreme court first considered whether the certified majority representative of municipal employees is the exclusive bargaining agent for all employees in the unit, a question not specified by the law. The court noted, "All the parties to this appeal, including the minority union, concede that it should be so interpreted, or there would be little point in having an election to determine the majority union representative."

In the matter of exclusive check-off, the court ruled, "The sole and complete purpose of exclusive check-off is self-perpetuation and entrenchment. While a majority representative may negotiate for check-off, he is negotiating for all the employees, and if check-off is granted for any, it must be granted for all."

In the matter of the minority union's right to speak in public negotiating meetings, the court ruled that because of Wisconsin's state Anti-Secrecy Law, "the open meeting is the necessary and final step in the 'negotiation' process between the school board and the majority teachers' union." Therefore, the court concluded that the minority union should not be permitted to speak at the open negotiation meetings, because, "if the minority union representative met privately with the municipal employer to discuss negotiable topics, i.e., wages, hours and conditions of employment, the employer would certainly have committed a prohibited practice. To permit such a discussion under the guise of a public meeting is just as improper." The court reversed WERC's ruling.

Board Findings and Rulings

MICHIGAN

INDIVIDUAL CONTRACTS MAILED BEFORE MASTER AGREEMENT REACHED

The Michigan Employment Relations Commission, overruling a trial examiner's report, held that a Bullock Creek School Board had not committed an unfair labor practice when it mailed individual employment contracts to teachers before collective bargaining had been completed.

The trial examiner had found mailing the contracts unfair because it required the teachers to make a decision before they knew what the conditions, wages, hours for the next year would be.

The board found that requiring teachers' signatures on contracts before completion of collective bargaining was not unfair because "in the event of collective bargaining agreement providing increased benefits for a teacher should be entered into after an individual contract has been signed, the collective bargaining agreement prevails and modifies the individual contract to the extent that the two documents vary."

SCHOOL BOARD ORDERED TO FURNISH INDIVIDUAL TEACHERS' NAMES AND SALARIES TO ASSOCIATION

The Michigan Labor Mediation Board ruled that the Traverse City Public School District violated the Public Employment Relations Act by refusing to furnish the Traverse City Education Association with the name and salary of each teacher in the system.

The Association said this information was necessary in order to formulate bargaining demands and to bargain collectively for the following school year. The Association also requested, but was denied, the salaries of 70 administrators not in the bargaining unit.

The school board said it would withhold individual teachers names and salaries from the Association, unless given signed releases by the individual teachers involved.

The trial examiner, noting that the school board had provided the Association with detailed budget summaries, found that "as extensive as the information provided by the Traverse City School Board has been, it does not give sufficient information as to allow the bargaining agent to police the agreement and to 'intelligently fulfill its statutory obligatio as a bargaining agent.' "

In finding that the school board had erred in not providing individual teachers' names and salary scales, the trial examiner noted that the board had gone to "extensive effort" to comply with the Association's request and that the record did not "disclose or indicate any willful attempt to avoid its statutory duty to bargain."

The examiner also ruled that the school board was not obligated to disclose salaries or names of those not in the bargaining unit, i.e., administrators.

WISCONSIN

PAID LEAVE FOR ATTENDING CONVENTION OF MINORITY GROUP

The Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission reversed a ruling by its examiner, holding that a contract provision granting paid leave for attendance at the majority teachers' representative's state convention also must grant paid leave for teachers wishing to attend other conventions on the same dates.

The Commission found that to allow paid leave only for attendance at the majority convention "exceeds the bounds of the permissive cooperation which Local 1275 was priviledged to receive as a result of its majority status."

The dissenting commissioner held that while "state" conventions (the majority union's meeting was a state convention) were specifically mentioned in the contract, "regional" conventions (the minority group's meeting) were not.

The majority of the Commission overruled this objection, reasoning that "to avoid an act of prohibited favoritism to the majority organization members of the minority organization should have been permitted to attend their regional convention on the same dates, without loss of pay."

MICHIGAN

SCHOOL BOARD'S SUBJECTIVE SELECTION OF TEACHER HELD A VIOLATION OF AGREEMENT

The arbitrator found that the Bay City Board of Education did not fully comply with the selection standards specified in the agreement with the Bay City Education Association when it selected a candidate known to the board member responsible for the final selection, without taking into account the other candidates' "experience, training, tenure and other objective factors required to be considered by the labor agreement."

According to the arbitrator, the grievant, one of the candidates not selected, had "a clear edge" over the other two applicants, one of whom was chosen for the position.

While the arbitrator found that "the Administration's judgment in these matters must be accepted," he pointed out that the Administration's "broad discretion" also carried with it "an obligation to exercise fairness . . . . In a case such as the instant one where the judgment turns on subjectively determined personality traits, and where those making the judgment have substantial personal knowledge of one applicant and little or none of a second applicant who ranks higher in most objective factors, fairness requires that a vigorous effort be made . . . to inquire into the personality traits of the second applicant." The arbitrator ordered that the applicants be reconsidered because, "the record indicates that this was not done here."

TEACHER JUSTLY ASSIGNED EXTRA DUTY NOT MENTIONED IN CONTRACT

The arbitrator ordered that the sponsorship of a Girls Athletic Association, not specifically mentioned in the employment contract, was justly assigned to the teacher who had previously sponsored it, becaue the contract provided a method for her to request another assignment prior to the beginning of the school year, which she did not use, and because the sponsorship of the G.A.A. was not mentioned in the master contract.

The teacher in question had voluntarily sponsored the Girls Athletic Association the previous year. The case arose the following year when the teacher was ordered to continue her sponsorship when she had not planned to.

The board of education contended the question was not grievable, because the grievance was not submitted in writing and filed within the time required by the master contract, and the sponsorship of the Girls Athletic Association was not included with the items to "be retained for further consideration for additional compensation at the time the contract was negotiated."

The arbitrator said that the timeliness question was open, but denied the grievance, saying, "The request must be denied as it is a well understood and established fact in collective bargaining that the parties cannot obtain at arbitration what they were unsuccessful in obtaining at collective bargaining."

NEW JERSEY

PERC DEFINES UNIT FOR REPRESENTATION

The Public Employees Commission of New Jersey defined the state university teachers unit for representative purposes as "all full-time professional employees, including teaching, research, administrative and academic support personnel at each state college, but excluding all managerial executives, supervisors having the power to hire, discharge, discipline or to effectively recommend the same (other than peer judgement) part-time and all other personnel." To maintain the autonomy and independence of each college, each of the separate state colleges and university each college was also defined as a single unit.

NEW YORK

CONTRACT LANGUAGE ALLOWED TEACHERS TO GO DIRECTLY TO STEP 2 OF GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

The Falconer Education Association did not violate its contract when it went directly to step 2 of the specified grievance procedure by applying the clause, "if a grievance affects a group of teachers and appears to be associated with system-wide policies, it may be submitted by the Association directly at Stage 2."

The policy in question was a directive by the school principal, that all teachers were required to attend a PTA program.

The teachers, contending that the directive had "precedent-setting potential," throughout the district, took the grievance to the supervising principal (step 2), who refused to accept it.

The arbitrator, noting that "it is axiomatic in contract interpretation that all words in an agreement should be given effect," found that "the parties recognized the inherent difficulty in precisely defining the phrase 'associated with system-wide policies' and qualified its meaning by the word 'appears'."

The arbitrator found that the association had so interpreted the contract, and had genuinely felt that the directive could have "system-wide" implications; and therefore, the Association had not violated the agreement by carrying the grievance directly to the second step.

NEW YORK

RULING ON REPRESENTATION ORGANIZATIONS FOR STATE UNIVERSITY TEACHERS

The Director of Representation of the New York Public Employees Relations Board ruled that the multi-campus State University of New York constitutes a proper single unit. The SUNY unit consists of 11,000 faculty and 3,554 nonteaching professionals in the state's four university centers, 11 four-year colleges, two medical centers, and other affiliated institutions.

The single-unit finding for SUNY denied the request of the State University Federation of Teachers for a dual-unit determination, one local and one state.

In the matter of the proper bargaining agent for the unit, the Federation opposed the Faculty Senate as a candidate, charging that the Senate was "employer dominated." PERB's Director of Representation replied that if the Senate is "employer-dominated," it should be dealt with under the "improper practices" provision of the Taylor Law.

The Senate and the Civil Service Employees Association, as joint petitioners, have pledged to adopt whatever financial arrangement PERB might require, should they be chosen bargaining agent for the SUNY teachers.

In ruling for the Senate as a possible bargaining agent, the Director of Representation found that the Senate "in its role as faculty governor, has represented the faculty position with regard to economic goals as well as a number of matters of educational concern such as admissions policies, faculty hiring, promotion and tenure procedures, curriculum, and class size . . . there is no basis in fact for finding that the Senate's primary purpose is other than the improvement of terms and conditions of employment."

RHODE ISLAND

REFUSAL TO GRANT SEVERANCE PAY A VIOLATION OF AGREEMENT

The Providence School Committee's refusal to give retiring teachers the negotiated amount of severance pay was a violation of its contract, according to an arbitration panel ruling.

The school committee had voted to omit severance pay after the mayor and the city council failed to appropriate enough funds to cover the school budget.

The arbitration panel said the school committee's contentions that the severance pay contract was an illegal "gratuity" and that the committee could therefore "unilaterally disallow" it, "is at war with the collective bargaining scheme set forth in the Teachers Arbitration Act." (NRD, May 1967, C-7)

The panel also said the union's role in determining conditions is "not [that of] an advisory group," but that of a "co-architect of those terms and conditions." It drew two distinctions in regard to the school committee's argument that the arbitration clauses are invalid delegations of power, saying that it is possible that third party compulsory determinations in negotiation impasse disputes of what a municipal body's obligations are, could be construed as an invalid delegation of power. But in a contractual situation, where the questions concern whether the municipal body has violated contractual obligations voluntarily incurred, and voluntarily agreed on grievance arbitration as the dispute-settling mechanism arising under the contract, "should not one insist upon a strong showing of legislative desire to exclude from the realm of bargaining a process [grievance arbitration] which has so commonly been accepted and which has so much to recommend it?"

The panel rejected the school committee's contention that the contract did not take effect immediately, saying that the severance pay itself is not an illegal "gratuity" because the "clause does not purport to apply to teachers who had retired before the effective date of the contract" but "the teacher's performance after the effective date is a critical factor in determining payment," and "it is perfectly possible that a teacher with a potential severance pay in a substantial amount as of the effective date would retire six months later with no severance pay due, and this because of intervening absence."

Negotiation Notes

CALIFORNIA

SAN DIEGO MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES STRIKE

The California Superior Court ruled that public workers have a constitutional right to strike.

The case involved an appeal by San Diego State County and Municipal Employees against an injunction granted to the City of San Diego, prohibiting a threatened strike.

The court based its decision on the fact that the California legislature had specifically outlawed strikes by firemen and policemen but had left the issue of whether other public employees can legally strike open. The court also noted that the Supreme Court of the United States ruled that the rights of public workers, as citizens, cannot be taken away "without imperative necessity" or substantial threat to the public safety.

KANSAS

SCHOOLS MAY PAY FOR FRINGE BENEFITS

Local school boards in Kansas may now pay for fringe benefits, according to an opinion by the state attorney general. Basing his opinion, a reversal of previous statutes, upon laws enacted by the state legislature's 1969 session, the attorney general stated, in part, that "it would now appear that all of the more popular employment benefits, including tax sheltered annuities, liability and group life and health insurance, are properly authorized for inclusion in school employment contracts."

MASSACHUSETTS

AGENCY SHOP LEGALIZED IN GREATER BOSTON

The acting Massachusetts governor signed an act legalizing agency shop for public employees in Boston and surrounding Suffolk county, effective June 22, 1969.

The act provides that the contract, with stipulation of fees involved, must be accepted by a majority of all employees in the bargaining unit, whether or not they belong to the union; the agency service fee must be "proportionally commensurate with the cost of collective bargaining and contract administration"; and the fee may be deducted only "during the life of the collective bargaining agreement so providing."

MICHIGAN

LABOR MEDIATION BOARD CHANGES NAME

The name of the Michigan Labor Mediation Board was changed to Employment Relations Commission in an act passed August 5, 1969. The new law also provides for rewording definitions in existing legislation, without altering their meaning.

FINDINGS OF TRIAL EXAMINER INADEQUATE

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled that the School District of North Dearborn Heights had engaged in unfair labor practices against the North Dearborn Heights Federation of Teachers because the board did not examine the transcript of testimony or admit oral or written arguments, but acted solely upon the findings of the trial examiner; and this violated the provisions of Michigan's Administrative Procedures Act. The court said this Act "places the duty upon a majority of the officials who are to render the decision to personally consider the whole record or portions thereof as may be cited by the parties."

Statistics

SCHOOL-BOARD MEMBERS AND SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS AS NEGOTIATORS

For the past three years, the NEA Research Division has conducted a national survey of written negotiation agreements and procedures in school systems with 1,000 or more pupils. All the surveys—1966-67, 1967-68, 1968-69—have yielded national statistics on the involvement of school-board members and school administrators in negotiation sessions with teacher representatives.

Three Year Patterns

These three surveys indicate several significant changes in the character and participants of teacher/school board negotiation sessions. Some of the most salient trends have been:

- The percentage of negotiation units for classroom teachers only, has increased while that of all-inclusive units has decreased.
- The number of school systems with two or more organizations representing certain categories of professional staff has more than doubled.
- Whereas, five superintendents in 10 described their role in negotiation sessions as school-board negotiators or advisors three years ago, now almost seven in 10 indicate this is their role.
- The percentage of negotiating teams made up of school-board members only, has consistently declined while mixed teams of school-board members and school administrators have consistently increased.
- The percentage of negotiating teams made up exclusively of other school administrators, excluding the superintendent, has risen consistently.

The three surveys asked similar questions: who negotiates for the board? What is the role of the superintendent in negotiation sessions? For states which reported 50 or more school systems with negotiation agreements, tables on these patterns in negotiation were developed: Table L, Role of the Superintendent in Negotiation Sessions, Table M, Negotiator for the School Board, and the table on Patterns in Negotiations. Corresponding tables for 1966-67 data were reported in the September 1967, December 1967, January 1968, and September 1968 issues of NEGOTIATION RESEARCH DIGEST.

Role of the Superintendent

Nationally, only one significant change in the role of the superintendent from 1966-67 or 1967-68 was reported: about 10 percent have switched from being advisors for both the board and the teachers to being advisors for the board only. California and Michigan still reported a modal response that the superintendent has full authority in negotiation. These superintendents who "negotiate with full authority" have dropped from two-fifths (in 1966-67 and 1967-68) to one-fifth in 1968-69.

Mandatory negotiation statutes which were passed in Minnesota and New York seem to have effected some change in their school systems' responses in the past two years. In both states, the percentage of responses for the superintendent as advisor to board negotiators only, has shown a significant increase, from about 20 percent in 1967-68 to 50 percent in 1968-69. Some of the change, though by no means all, may have been affected somewhat by the greater number of systems with negotiation agreements.

The responses by enrollment strata still indicate that as the size of the system increases, the superintendent's role shifts from that of negotiator with full authority to that of advisor to the negotiators for both the teachers and the school board; and further, the largest systems show the superintendent as advisor to the board only.

Negotiators for the School Board

The percentages of school systems which reported that in negotiation sessions the boards are represented by board members only, or by the superintendent only, decreased from 1966-67 to 1967-68, through 1968-69. The percentage reporting board representation jointly by board members and the other school administrators increased slightly.

The data presented by enrollment strata show some shifting of representation for the board in negotiation sessions. Stratum 1 systems (100,000 or more pupils) reported that school administrators other than the superintendent predominantly represent the board. Most often Strata 2 through 4 systems (12,000-99,999 pupils) reported that superintendents, together with other school officials, represent the board in negotiation sessions, and the smallest systems (1,000-11,999 pupils) reported most frequently that the board and the superintendent represent the board jointly.

Patterns in Negotiation

Thirteen states reported 50 or more school systems with written negotiation agreements in 1968-69 (the same number as in 1967-68). Data on the role of the superintendent in negotiation and on who negotiates for the school board were tabulated in separate contingency tables for each of these states and for the nation. When these data are considered together, many differences appear among the states.

The bottom portions of Tables L and M provide comparable data on the basis of school system enrollment. The eight enrollment strata used are:

Stratum	School System Enrollment
1	100,000 or more
2	50,000-99,999
3	25,000-49,999
4	12,000-24,999
5	6,000-11,999
6	3,000- 5,999
7	1,200- 2,999
8	1,000- 1,199

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Report of the Task Force on Collective Bargaining in Public Education to the Massachusetts Board of Education

The enactment of Chapter 763 of the Acts of 1965, amending Section 178 of Chapter 149 of the General Laws of the Commonwealth, has changed the traditional relationship between public school administrations and their employees. The Board of Education of the Commonwealth, recognizing the impact of this law on these groups and concerned with its lasting effects, in January of 1968, appointed this Task Force on Collective Bargaining in Public Education, "to examine the problems associated with Chapter 763 of the Acts of 1965 (the Collective Bargaining Act)."

The Task Force, consisting of fifteen members from the fields of education and labor relations, met on a bi-monthly basis. It concentrated its efforts principally in two areas:

(1) educational programs aimed at instructing the general public, as well as those directly involved, in the collective bargaining process as it relates to the Massachusetts public schools; and

(2) guidelines and recommendations intended to make collective bargaining in public education under Chapter 763 most effective.

To meet these goals, the Task Force set up two committees.

The Committee on Guidelines

Early in its deliberations the Task Force determined that one of the primary needs of educators, teachers, school committees, other employees of school departments, and employee organizations, was some sort of coherent, concise, but comprehensive, guide to the law. The Committee on Guidelines, under the chairmanship of George McInerny, prepared such a manual, which was approved by the Task Force and forwarded to the Board of Education for its approval and dissemination. This guide takes the reader chronologically step-by-step through the various phases that almost invariably occur in the process of collective bargaining. It should be consulted for comprehensive guidelines and for elaboration on the matters considered in this report.

The Committee on Seminars

At its inception the Task Force also decided to hold a series of one-day seminars in five geographical areas of the Commonwealth for the broad purpose of educating school committee members, administrators, teachers, and interested parties in the nature of collective bargaining and their responsibilities under the law. These seminars were held in the Fall of 1968 under the direction of the Committee on Seminars, chaired by Marcia L. Greenbaum and Harvey L. Friedman, and in cooperation with the School of Education and the Labor Relations Research Center of the University of Massachusetts. These seminars drew a total of approximately 550 persons.

Continuing Education

As a result of the success of these seminars and the apparent need for further educational programs, the Task Force hopes that appropriate institutions will undertake the conduct of summer workshops, annual conferences and regular courses on collective bargaining.

The Deliberations and Recommendations Of The Task Force

The members of the Task Force, who represent diverse interests, spent a considerable period of time proposing, discussing, probing, counterproposing, modifying and agreeing upon a series of procedural and substantive recommendations aimed at making collective bargaining in public education more effective. The following is the result of those deliberations.

The Effect of the Statute

Before the enactment of Chapter 763 there was no guaranteed right of municipal employees or employers to select their own bargaining representative or obligation to bargain collectively with respect to wages, hours and conditions of employment. The employer's rights were relatively unfettered and in many areas it was free to act unilaterally without consulting the employees.

The passage of the statute imposed a new set of rules, which changed this. Section 178H gave, and protected employees in the exercise of "... the right to self-organization, to form, join or assist any employee organization, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing on questions of wages, hours and other conditions of employment. . . ." It also imposed on "the municipal employer and the employee organization recognized or designated as exclusive representative of employees in an appropriate unit . . . the duty to bargain collectively." Section 1781 further specified:

For the purposes of collective bargaining, the representative of the municipal employer and the representative of the employees shall meet at reasonable times, including meetings appropriately related to the budget making process, and shall confer in good faith with respect to wages, hours and other conditions of employment, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder, and shall execute a written contract incorporating any agreement reached, but neither party shall be compelled to agree to a proposal or to make a concession. . . .

The existence of such a law dictates that public employers and their employees familiarize themselves with its provisions and their rights and responsibilities under the law, for things are not as they were before. For example, it is not yet widely known that when an employee organization is designated, whether by recognition or certification, as the bargaining agent for a particular group of employees, even before actual bargaining takes place, the employer has a duty to refrain from unilateral action on matters affecting wages, hours and conditions of employment, the matters bargainable under the law. Thus, after recognition or certification, even though it has not yet commenced bargaining, a School Committee cannot unilaterally raise wages, or shorten or lengthen working hours, or institute any other changes affecting such matters unless it first bargains with the designated representative of the group affected by a proposed change. Similarly, it is little known that the exclusive representative, even though selected by only a majority of the employees in a particular unit, is nevertheless required to represent all employees in the bargaining unit, whether or not they are members of the particular employee organization involved.

The law is a fact the parties must accept and live with. The first step is for the parties to familiarize themselves with its terms and their implications for future action.

In carrying out the mandate of the Board of Education, the members of the Task Force have done this. From the beginning they have accepted the statute as it now exists and within which the parties must operate. They have concerned themselves with making collective bargaining under that statute as effective as possible. They have acknowledged that effective collective bargaining involves more than adherence to just the letter of the law. They have recognized that it also involves the development of attitudes and a frame of mind conducive also to living within the spirit of the law.

The Approach of the Parties to the Collective Bargaining Process

It is the belief of the Task Force that effective collective bargaining is largely dependent upon the development of positive attitudes to the negotiations process.

- For the employer this means an acceptance of the employees' right to select their own bargaining representative as provided for in Chapter 763 and the right to bargain collectively with respect to wages, hours and other conditions of employment.
- For the employees it means recognition of the employer's duty and responsibility with respect to providing public education, as well as the employer's right to designate its own bargaining representative for the negotiating process.
- For both parties this means acceptance of the principle of bargaining in good faith, and maintenance throughout the negotiating process of an intent to reach agreement and to reduce agreed upon terms to writing. (As stated in the manual: "Essentially good faith involves an attitude of mind which accepts the existence of the other party, warts and all and encompasses a real desire to come to agreement. Good faith involves also the willingness to try to understand the objectives and the reasoning of the other side, plus a willingness to compromise, even sometimes on the most important issues, in order to reach agreement.")

Collective Bargaining Procedures

The Task Force also believes that effective collective bargaining is in part dependent upon the procedures followed by the parties.

Timeliness of Negotiations

To avoid the conflict possible when the parties in public education collective bargaining are unable to reach agreement on monetary matters in time to have them included in the school committee budget for the coming year and acted upon by the appropriate body, the Task Force recommends:

- That negotiations for initial contracts be commenced promptly after the employee representative has been designated.
- That negotiations for successor contracts and under reopener clauses be commenced not later than October 1 of the year prior to that in which the successor contract or amendment is to take effect.
- That negotiations proceed with due dispatch toward the reaching of an agreement in time for any necessary budget implementation.

- That when negotiations commence, the parties recognize the desirability of providing for settlement by mediation and/or fact finding of unresolved disputes in time to include necessary funds in the budget.
- That in cases where, because of special circumstance, the foregoing recommendations are not appropriate to a particular budget deadline, the parties should commence negotiations, complete negotiations, and, if necessary, engage in mediation and/or fact finding in time to meet the deadline.

Designating Representatives, Time and Place

Bargaining should take place between the "designated representatives" of labor and management in a place and at a time agreeable to both parties.

On the management side of the table, the school committee has prime responsibility for the conduct of collective bargaining. In carrying out this responsibility, the members may all serve as the negotiating team, may appoint a subcommittee of one or more persons of the school committee and administration, may employ a professional consultant or negotiator, or may utilize any combination of the foregoing to act in its behalf.

The role of the superintendent and his assistants in collective bargaining should be made clear. They are members of management and should participate in negotiations and caucuses as advisers and resource persons to the school committee's negotiators. The Task Force believes, however, that to designate them as chief negotiators may, except in unusual cases, detract from their ability to perform their primary executive functions.

Authority to Negotiate

Regardless of who is chosen to represent either party, the participants should have authority to explore, to negotiate, and to make temporary agreements which they will support with voice and/or vote upon return to their respective principal bodies.

Setting up the Negotiating Sessions

Collective bargaining should be the only item on the agenda at any negotiating session.

Negotiations sessions should involve only the official representatives of the parties. Such meetings should not be regular school committee meetings. Experience has shown that best results are obtained in closed sessions without the presence of the press or public.

Before the commencement of bargaining both parties should undertake considerable preparation and should come to the bargaining table adequately prepared.

Press releases, if they are to be given, should be issued jointly. It is preferable to conduct negotiations at the bargaining table rather than in the newspapers.

Conduct at the Negotiating Sessions

Collective bargaining sessions, like any business meeting, should be conducted in an orderly manner with observance of common courtesies. The parties should be punctual and meetings should commence on time.

Each party, while it may be represented by a committee, should have one chief spokesman. Each should be a good listener and hear the other party out. Proposals should not be rejected out of hand. Each should consider what is proposed and respond to it with meaningful, reasonable and well-considered views. Discussions should be honest and deceitful practices avoided. Unclear points should be questioned and explained. What are the facts? If a spokesman is not sure of his committee's feeling on a point, a caucus should be called. The parties should concentrate on problems and particulars rather than principles. How will the proposed clause operate in particular cases?

When a matter has been fully discussed and the parties are not making headway, but covering the same ground with rising tempers, the subject should be changed, and the matter under discussion held for future action. Finally, while perhaps demanding the moon, the stars and a few planets as initial positions, both parties should have a realistic approach to what is ultimately attainable at the given time.

Give and take and trading are the name of the game. While, of course, nothing in the statute compels either side to agree to something it considers unreasonable, neither party should unreasonably take refuge in the language "neither party shall be compelled to agree to a proposal or make a concession."

The Substance of Collective Bargaining

Effective collective bargaining is obviously affected by the parties' approach to the substantive issues. Essentially the Task Force believes that controversial subjects should be treated more as problems in need of solution rather than as prerogatives in need of protection.

What is Negotiable?

The Task Force was asked by the Board of Education to consider "what is negotiable?" or "what is meant by the term 'condition of employment'?" because the Board had received requests for a definitive statement on these questions. The members of the Task Force discussed these subjects and came to the conclusion that it would not be proper nor possible for it to precisely define, delineate or delimit these areas.

The basic problem stems from the inherent conflict between a school committee's previous relatively free discretion to set educational policy and the teachers' newly granted right to bargain over conditions of employment. These two areas are not easily separable domains.

There are a number of ways to view the issue. In one sense anything two parties mutually agree to discuss at the bargaining table is "negotiable." Conditions of employment is admittedly a broad term, which can be interpreted to encompass virtually anything affecting the conditions under which teachers teach. Presumably excluded from it would be matters set by law or state regulations. However, even some of these do not necessarily mean restriction of the scope of bargaining.

For example, the state minimum number of school days is now set at 180 days per year. A number of communities have inferred from this that teachers may not bargain over number of school days. In one sense this is correct. The state regulates the number of school days, that is, days school must be in session. However, it does not regulate the number of days or hours a teacher must work. Similarly, while the state may regulate minimum ratios of professional employees to pupils, the parties may bargain to exceed such a standard, that is, contract for higher ratios.

In practice, communities differ with respect to what is considered negotiable. What is acceptable in one community may very well be anathema to another, and what is anathema to a community at any one time may very well be acceptable to it at another time. At any point in time there are in every community some matters which the bargainers would agree are clearly negotiable, some clearly not negotiable, and others over which they would have an honest difference of opinion. These last fall into a gray area from which in time they could possibly emerge and be accepted by the bargainers as negotiable matters.*

In the last analysis whether a subject is negotiable is a matter either for the good will of the parties or for determination by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission and the courts. While the Task Force takes no position on what is or should be a negotiable condition of employment, it does recommend that the parties establish a dialogue and discuss matters even though controversial, rather than to object to such discussion on principle and to litigate. The Task Force believes it desirable that the scope of negotiations focus on the development of attitudes rather than specific conditions to be negotiated, for only free and open discussion among the parties will resolve the issue. Neither party should close its mind or ears, for even "what is negotiable?" is negotiable.

Resolution of Impasses

The Task Force recognizes that despite the best of intentions, two parties, who have earnestly bargained in good faith, may nonetheless come to an honest disagreement, and a resultant impasse. The Municipal Collective Bargaining Law sets forth mediation and fact finding procedures to be followed in such circumstances. These procedures are governed by the rules of the Massachusetts Board of

* Moreover, this Task Force has neither the duty nor authority to define or delimit the term "conditions of employment," this being a matter for the Massachusetts State Labor Relations Commission. In the legal sense, the question of what is negotiable or what is meant by conditions of employment becomes the question whether a refusal to bargain on a particular subject constitutes a prohibited practice under the law.

Under the Massachusetts Municipal Employees Collective Bargaining Law, the parties are required to bargain collectively "in good faith with respect to wages, hours and other conditions of employment. . ." This language is similar to that contained in the National Labor Relations Act, which has been interpreted and enforced in the private sector by the National Labor Relations Board and the courts. For more than thirty years that agency and the courts have developed a body of labor law. They have differentiated between so-called "mandatory" bargaining subjects, that is, matters which can be negotiated to the point of impasse (a strike) and on which refusal to bargain may be found to be an unfair labor practice per se; and so-called "permissive" bargaining subjects, which may be discussed and bargained, if both parties agree, but not to the point of impasse, and which insistence upon by one party over the objections of the other can be found to be an unfair labor practice per se.

In Massachusetts the State Labor Relations Commission is charged with interpreting and enforcing this aspect of the Municipal Employees Collective Bargaining Act, which makes a refusal to bargain collectively in good faith a prohibited practice. It is this Commission and the courts which are authorized to delineate the mandatory subjects of bargaining, and a party refusing to bargain on such matters or pushing to the point of impasse a permissive subject may be found to have committed a prohibited practice. To date there has been no test of whether certain subject matter relating to teacher negotiations is legally negotiable, that is, a mandatory subject and bargainable to point of impasse and presumable subject to fact finding. Hence there is not yet any law which can be consulted for a ready answer to these questions.

Conciliation and Arbitration, which administers this portion of the Act. Both the procedures and the rules are explained in the manual.

Selecting a Process and a Neutral

However, the parties are not legally obligated to turn exclusively to the State Board, if they reach an impasse. They may, if they wish, develop their own impasse resolution arrangements, including provisions for mediation, fact finding and/or voluntary arbitration of new contract terms by impartial third parties.

Thus, for example, when a dispute arises and and time is of great importance the parties may agree upon an "ad hoc" mediator and/or fact finder of their own choosing, call him directly, and ascertain his immediate availability. Or they may agree at the outset of negotiations that if they fail to reach agreement by a specific date they will call in a specifically named mediator or fact finder. Or they may make such provisions during one round of negotiations for the next round of negotiations and incorporate this in the collective bargaining agreement along with the future negotiations procedure.

Or they may wish to avail themselves of one of the agency rosters of neutrals. The New England Plan is a service developed by the American Arbitration Association to assist the parties in making and carrying out their own mutually agreed to impasse resolution procedures. The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, like the American Arbitration Association, also has a roster of skilled neutrals who can assist the parties in resolving disputes arising in public employment.

Carrying out the Process Most Effectively

No matter which process the parties select they should continue to attempt to reach agreement.

Where possible, all matters should have been discussed before going to fact finding. Those which are not in dispute should have been earmarked by the parties as tentatively agreed to, and subject to ratification, should the parties reach a total agreement. Unresolved matters should have been delineated as subject to mediation and fact finding. In this way, it is possible to utilize these adjustment processes to resolve all that remains in dispute and arrive at a total agreement without the parties subsequently having to bargain over matters not previously mentioned or thoroughly discussed.

Each party should analyze why an impasse has been reached. Is it money, prerogatives, personality conflicts, the need to save face? Is it one side holding back its final offer?

Frequently, parties go to fact finding when it is really mediation that they need. Fact finding should not be treated as a perfunctory step. Rather it should be viewed, as the statute intended it, namely as a last resort.

In most cases mediation should precede fact finding. Both parties should cooperate with the mediator in an effort to reach agreement. While mediation may not resolve all issues in dispute, it usually serves several useful functions. It may resolve some of the issues and narrow down what is left for the fact finder. It may clarify the parties' views of what is actually in dispute. It may bring out facts the parties overlooked or misconstrued. And the parties will have honed their arguments on the impartial third party, as well as learned how to view the dispute more objectively.

If mediation by the mediator and/or fact finder fails, the parties should waste no time in going to fact finding. However, they should adequately prepare their cases, seeking the advice of experts, if necessary, so that they come "armed" with the facts, a clear view of what is in dispute, and their positions on those issues.

Again, it cannot be stressed too strongly, that fact finding should not be entered into lightly by the parties. The fact finding report should contain recommendations, based on the record of facts, which reasonable persons can accept or at least regard as realistic points upon which the parties can reach agreement with little further bargaining.

Inasmuch as this is the last formal step in the adjustment process, the parties should do their utmost to make it the end of the road to agreement. After the report is issued, they should meet with their respective committees, carefully analyze the report and recommendations, and then meet with each other in a sincere attempt to use the terms of the report as a basis for settlement. If settlement is not forthcoming, they should continue to use the services of the mediator, fact finder, or other impartial third party.

Finally, the parties should reduce agreed upon terms to writing as soon as possible, while they are still fresh in the minds of both. Of course, no total agreement is reached until there is no longer an impasse, all matters are resolved, and the agreement is ratified. The parties should have their respective members ratify the agreement and it should be signed as soon as possible. Such procedure may avoid a dispute over what was agreed to, a dispute caused by delay and lapse of memory.

Contract Administration

In collective bargaining, the relationship of the parties does not end with the signing of a contract. It is an on-going relationship governed by the terms of the agreement. Hence, it is crucial that both parties live up to the terms of the contract.

To make this possible it is imperative that the parties educate their respective personnel with respect to the contents of the contract, the implications of the provisions, the desirability of abiding by these terms, and the mechanics of administering the agreement.

When a dispute arises during the term of the contract, which cannot be resolved informally, it is important that the parties use contractually agreed to processes for the resolution of disputes over the interpretation and/or application of its terms.

To make this process of dispute settlement most effective, the Task Force recommends that for the resolution of disputes concerning the interpretation and/or application of the terms of the agreement, the parties incorporate in their contract a multi-level grievance procedure terminating in final and binding arbitration by an impartial third party or board.

CASE REVIEWS

CALIFORNIA

Public Employees Have No Right To Strike

A California Court of Appeals held that, in the absence of specific legislative authorization, a 1967 dismissal of 127 Sacramento County social workers who engaged in a work stoppage was valid.

The social workers had left their jobs because, they said, the county had "refused to meet and confer and negotiate in good faith." The social workers were subsequently dismissed for "absence without leave." Upon appeal to the county Civil Service Commission, the dismissal was upheld. The union then petitioned for a superior court order, for reinstatement with back pay, which was denied. They then brought the suit before the California Court of Appeals for the Third District.

The court first considered judicial precedent. It found "the rule, that absent an authorizing statute, a public employee has no right either to bargain collectively or to strike is well settled." This, the court said, is "settled by decision of the Supreme Court itself and by that court's denial of hearings in courts of appeal decisions. . . and this court is bound by the rule."

As to the question of whether the social workers are entitled to reinstatement, the court held:

> As we have shown, provisions of the county charter supplemented by the rules of the Civil Service Commission authorize the removal of an employee who is absent without leave. An employee cannot be said to come within that status if he had a right to strike and is justifiably exercising that right. On the other hand if no right to strike exists, the absence was without leave, the appointing authority had the right to discharge, and the Commission had jurisdiction to affirm the removal and did so without abuse of discretion since substantial evidence (in fact actual admissions) showed unauthorized absence from work with a refusal to return except upon payment of unearned salaries.

The court then reviewed the California statutes to determine if the right to strike had been granted implicitly. In examining a then (1967) effective "meet and confer" law, the court pointed specifically to a section of that law, and noted that it "is the section which gives the right of collective bargaining to private employees. Thus, by the terms of the legislation in effect when appellants struck, the right of collective bargaining—hence the right to strike—had been expressly withheld from them." And although later statutes authorized memorandum agreements, the court concluded that "our analysis of both the pre-1968 acts, therefore, compels us to, and we do, hold that the Legislature has not declared the right of these appellants to strike."

Note: In considering the decisions which the social workers cited to support their claim that California public employees do have the right to strike, the appeals court differed from a recent California Superior Court decision concerning San Diego public employees (NRD October 1969). In considering the social workers' case, the appeals court said the Superior Court's finding in favor of San Diego employees (other than police and firemen) "infers a legislative grant to all other public employees to strike, drawn from the fact that that right is forbidden to firemen and policemen." In the extant case of the social workers, however, the appellate court ruled:

> In our view such a broad inference is impermissible—particularly under the history of legislation and case law we have given. The ruling seems to be based upon 'a fundamental right to strike.' We find no case law holding that a public employee enjoys that right.

LOUISIANA

No Violation of Equal Protection in Refusal To Bargain

The American Federation of Teachers local in New Orleans was denied an injunction to compel the administration of Delgado College (an agency of the city) to bargain collectively with the teachers. The union claimed that the refusal of the city to bargain with a teachers organization, while engaging in collective bargaining with other unions representing city employees, was a violation of equal protection under the Fourteenth Amendment.

The U.S. District Court refused the union's request, saying, "Here no 'intentional or purposeful discrimination has been shown'. . .nor have 'conspicuously artificial lines' been established." The court drew a distinction between teachers and other public employees, reasoning, "Public education is a basic function of American state and local government, and the teachers to whom this task is imparted have rightly been considered deserving of special consideration." But, the court continued, these "special considerations" also carry different responsibilities and conditions surrounding teacher negotiation. "Defining 'conditions of employment' for a teacher may involve matters of educational policy imparted by law for decision to an administrative board. And these public officials may think that public sovereignty is more important in matters of education than in connection with other municipal problems." The court concluded that for a municipality to bargain with all public employee unions, excluding teachers, might constitute a denial of equal protection but that an opinion on Louisiana law issued by the attorney general "neither commands municipal corporations to, nor prohibits them from, bargaining collectively with unions representing groups of municipal employees." Because New Orleans had engaged only in limited bargaining, a denial of equal protection could not be proved.

The court also found that the facts were insufficient to warrant a requested union injunction against dismissal of a union leader and alleged harassment of the union in New Orleans.

MICHIGAN

Non-member Contribution to Scholarship Fund in "Agency Clause" Legal

A trial court overruled a decision of a civil service board by upholding a union contract which required union membership or payment by check-off of the equivalent of union dues.

Agreements between the city of Grand Rapids and three unions representing city employees required voluntary union membership as a condition of employment. Those who chose not to join the union were required to pay the equivalent of monthly union dues to a scholarship fund (whose establishment pre-dated the agreement), which provided financial assistance to children of city employees for educational purposes.

The case arose when two city employees refused either to join the local union or to contribute to the fund. In addition, they refused the city's offer to transfer them to jobs outside the bargaining unit, preferring to appeal their case to the civil service board. The board ruled that the city had no cause for dismissal and ordered that the two employees be reinstated with back pay. The city appealed the case to a circuit court.

The circuit court, in reviewing the facts of the case, found it involved four essential questions:

1. Are modified agency shop provisions of the local contract valid?
2. Is the city bound by the decisions of the Civil Service Board to reinstate the employees?
3. Were the union provisions for reconstitution of the Grand Rapids Civil Service Board valid?
4. Are the acts of the city commission in the exercise of its powers controlling of boards established by the City Charter?

The court found that although the local contract "differs slightly from the agency shop arrangements approved in [previous] decisions... this difference gives rise to no more of a conflict with the Public Employment Relations Act than the pure agency shop." The court noted that PERA's provisions were designed only to prevent "employer discrimination, not bargained-for contract provisions," i.e., under PERA, the unit may vote or decide to discriminate within itself or for itself; but an employer may not impose such discrimination upon the unit. On this point the court concluded, "Finally, this court finds no more tendency of the modified agency shop to encourage or discourage membership in a labor union, as proscribed by the PERA, than the straight agency shop."

The court also ruled that the scholarship contribution provision was not illegal in itself, because "authority to bargain on 'conditions of employment' includes the prerequisite conditions as well as the environmental conditions of employment," and, "thus, the contributions to the scholarship fund required of [the employees] were constructively authorized by them through their exclusive bargaining agent. . . .In substance, binding effect on the minority must be given to decisions of the majority."

The court also said that neither it nor the Civil Service Board was authorized to comment upon the policy of check-off:

> The most persuasive arguments of defendants. . .go to the policy of the check-off, not to its legality. This court, no matter what its private reactions to the wisdom of such a policy decision, has no business substituting its policy judgment for that of the representatives of the people on the Grand Rapids City Commission. It can interfere only when it finds illegal exercise of their judgment, and it finds no illegality here. Its answer, then, to the question, "Are the modified agency shop provisions of the Local 1061 contract valid?" is "Yes."

The board, it found, can rule only upon the question of whether or not the discharge of a civil service employee was "for cause"; it cannot, as it did in this case, base its ruling upon an evaluation of policy: "But the Board has no power, and this Court so holds, to alter the City Commission's judgment as to what shall be a condition of employment within the factual framework presented in this litigation."

NEW JERSEY

Discrimination Claim Denied

A U.S. District Court ruled that the Newark School Board did not discriminate against white teachers when it appointed more Negroes than whites to principalships and vice-principalships in elementary schools. The issue arose after the Newark School System changed its procedures for filling vacancies by eliminating the previous procedure of using competitive examinations to choose among applicants.

The 10 white teachers who brought the suit—none of whom were appointed—charged that the change had been made in order to appoint Negroes to positions for which they might not otherwise be qualified, and that appointments made subsequent to the procedural change were made solely on the basis of race.

Although the school board maintained that eliminating the examination procedure was a valid action to improve the promotional means, it also admitted that "even if the court should find that the purpose behind the abolition of the examination system was to make available more Negroes for promotional appointments, this was a legitimate goal of the Board in light of the past racial imbalance that existed in the administrative ranks of the Newark school system."

The court, in its reasoning, found that discrimination against the white teachers could not be proved, and further, it concluded that even if the effect of the procedural change was to increase the number of black administrators in the school system, "in such a situation, and in light of the evidence adduced in court that the absence of meaningful representation on the administrative level was retarding the educational development of the school population, the action taken by the board in this case can only be viewed as a legitimate function of the Board. . . .And this is especially so where the proofs fall short of showing that qualified white applicants were excluded from consideration or discriminated against."

The court found the motivation for the board's policy, rather than being one of discrimination against white applicants because of skin color, was an intention to obtain for these positions "qualified persons, white or black, whose qualifications were based on an awareness of, and sensitivity to, the problems of educating the Negro school population."

In ruling on the school board's policy, the Court also considered the testimony of Dr. Richard Trent, Associate Professor of Urban Education at Brooklyn College. The court stated, "Dr. Trent's testimony is relevant in this case because the record indicates that these are precisely the concepts that motivated the board in the actions it took." The court took special notice of the following statements: "If you want significant change in the school performance of the ghetto population, it is highly advisable to involve as much as you can, competent black professionals." And, "The presence of a black man in authority is evidence to the children that if they study, they too, can achieve."

The court refused to make a distinction between the school board's hiring practices in elementary schools and its practices in secondary schools, as the teachers had urged. Noting that in Newark secondary schools, where no promotion lists existed, 31 white applicants and 13 Negroes were appointed, the court concluded that the board's hiring practices as a whole must be considered, and that in this instance:

> As has already been indicated, defendants admit that one of the criteria used in making the appointments in the instant case was the color of the applicant's skin. However, this does not, in and of itself, demonstrate discrimination against white applicants. In fact, the record shows that the Board has no intention of limiting appointments to Negroes, or that consideration was given only to black applicants. The great preponderance of the evidence supports the contention of defendants that the persons recommended and eventually appointed were considered by the appointing authority to be the best qualified individuals for the available positions. Indeed, when the Board considered the recommendations of the Superintendent and his staff, some members of the Board were not even aware of the race of those whom they voted to appoint.

The court added that while "it is true that the criteria for appointments to promotional positions had not yet been established when this case was heard, . . .it is the Court's understanding that such criteria will be worked out by the Superintendent and his staff and representatives of the Newark Teachers' Association." After reaching such an agreement, the court said, "There is no reason to believe that when such criteria are established, appointments will not be made in a manner that will provide the Newark School System with persons best qualified to perform their respective tasks." (Victor Porcelli et al. v. Franklyn Titus, Superintendent of Schools of the City of Newark; U.S. District Court for New Jersey Civil Action No. 864-68, August 14, 1969).

VERMONT

Supervisory Unions May be Used in Negotiation

The state attorney general issued a declaration that school directors are permitted under Vermont law to use supervisory unions for negotiating with teacher organizations, and that such agreements, subject to local board ratification, are binding upon the local school districts. The opinion, issued in July, states in part:

The statute has clearly given the district board authority to delegate responsibility for negotiating but the result of such negotiation must be ratified before it becomes binding upon each board. Consequently, it is conceivable that the supervisory union could negotiate the contract with the teachers and then each local school board in ratifying it may find it necessary to suggest minor changes which would apply to the situation in their district.

This would result, in effect, in several contracts but the major portion of negotiations could be conducted by the supervisory union. Therefore, inasmuch as the school board makes the final decision, it should be made clear that negotiations by the supervisory union are not binding until ratified by the school boards.

Note: In 1968-69 there were 21 operating supervisory unions in Vermont, whereby a superintendent administered two or more school districts for separate local school boards for each district.

BOARD FINDINGS AND RULINGS

MICHIGAN

Contract Covers Non-classroom Positions

A Michigan arbitrator awarded reinstatement and restitution of compensation to a Kent City social studies teacher who was removed from his extra-duty position as head football coach.

The school board had contended that as long as the teacher continued to hold tenure for his classroom position, the school board could deny or withhold tenure for non-classroom activities. The board said it had implied authority under the Michigan Tenure Act "to unilaterally decide whether or not to employ any particular teacher in any extra-duty post."

The school board also said that because it had not dismissed the coach, but had only allowed his coaching contract to expire, it had not violated its contract with the Kent City Education Association.

The arbitrator found that a disagreement over a non-classroom position was to be dealt with as a grievance procedure, because the dismissal from a classroom position was excluded from the grievance procedure, "by a statute specifically establishing procedure for redress." But because non-classroom positions are not covered by statutory redress, it is to be assumed that they are grievable.

The arbitrator found that unless the school board can show cause for removal, a teacher in such a non-classroom position is entitled to reinstatement and restitution:

> To remove such an incumbent, "just cause" must be shown. This is so, because, while the statutes of the State of Michigan do not require that the Board grant tenure "for extra-duty positions" (such as coaching), it does not inhibit the Board from extending committment, in collective bargaining under PERA, that unjust deprivation of said "professional compensation or advantage" is grievable and that the affected ex-incumbent in such position shall be made whole and reinstated unless "just cause" is demonstrated.

MICHIGAN

Full Pay For Striking Coaches

A Michigan arbitrator ruled that football coaches who were docked for a three-week strike during the football season were entitled to full pay because they completed the season "as fully as possible."

The arbitrator ruled in favor of the coaches, who had signed side agreements with the school board for "extra pay" athletic work, because the strike was an accomplished fact at the time of the negotiated agreement: "The specific listing of the. . .figures for the '1968-69' season, must be taken to mean that this is what coaches would actually receive," the arbitrator said.

The arbitrator also based his decision on the fact that the season, despite the three-week break, had contained a number of practices "comparable" to the previous year, and "of additional significance. . .is that the coaches here involved completed the football season as fully as was possible for them to do."

NEW YORK

Reprisal Findings Reversed

The New York Public Employment Relations Board refused to accept the findings of a hearings officer that a Monroe Community College teacher was the victim of reprisal for union activities when she was denied promotion. The Board ordered the faculty committee to review the teacher's "complete and official" file, and to re-evaluate her promotion "de novo."

A hearing officer had determined that the faculty promotions committee had been free from evidence of reprisal in the teacher's case; but the hearing officer did find evidence of reprisal in the refusal of the Department Chairman to recommend her for promotion—although he "admitted satisfaction" with her teaching; and in his inclusion of a departmental file containing union newsletters supposedly written by the teacher, "without making sure that the Committee also received the official file, which would round out [the teacher's] performance picture and which did not, as far as [the Department Chairman] knew, contain union newsletters."

The Board, however, interpreted the facts differently, and reasoned,

> The gist of the matter is that the Committee did not have before it pertinent and material evidence in her official file and did have before it material such as union newsletters which may have been prejudicial. However, we cannot say that if the complete facts had been before the Committee, they would have recommended . . . [her] for promotion.

The PERB also pointed out that department chairmen, in making recommendations for promotion are "mandated" to "consult with and report the consensus of a tenured departmental committee."

In concluding its decision, the PERB rejected the hearing officer's recommendation, it said, because:

> There is nothing in the record to indicate that the Committee did not exercise fair and impartial judgment based on the material before them.
> The question, rather, is would the Committee have made a favorable recommendation if the proper materials had been before it. This is a judgment that this Board cannot make.

The PERB, in rejecting the hearing officer's recommendation that the teacher be promoted and reimbursed for pay lost, ordered the promotions committee to review the case, including the official file on her performance as a teacher.

Note: In a similar New York case, (NRD, June 1969, page C-11) the Board determined that the president of the Ockawamick Faculty Organization was unjustly denied reappointment and tenure because of her union activities. In that case, the Board ordered the school district to reinstate the teacher and to compensate her for loss of wages as a result of the "reprisal."

NEGOTIATION NOTES

CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles Teachers Strike

Los Angeles Teachers staged a one-day walkout to protest the school board's lack of action on teacher demands for higher pay. The strike was led by the 19,200-member Association of Classroom Teachers, and supported by the 3,000-member Los Angeles Federation of Teachers.

The teachers demanded pay raises of 14 to 23 percent, based on a 5 percent "cost of living" increase recently granted by the city school board. (Current starting pay for the B.A. is $7,000 annually.)

Teacher supporters, according to some sources, pressed their demands because the school board unexpectedly found an additional $3-million to conduct some special education programs which had been eliminated from the budget because of an earlier shortage of funds. Some teacher leaders believed that the board deliberately made its financial situation appear worse than it actually was at that time (by cutting the special programs) to avoid having to submit to teacher demands for higher salaries. The school board denied this allegation, but the teacher leaders hoped that a vigorous dramatization of their situation—the strike—might lead the school board to find the funds to increase teacher salaries.

HAWAII

Panel Drafting Bargaining Legislation

A 1968 Constitutional Convention amended Hawaii's constitution to give civil service employees the right to organize and bargain collectively. Because implementing legislation is needed, a 17-member committee was appointed to draft legislative proposals for public employee bargaining. The proposals will be presented to the 1970 session of the state legislature.

ILLINOIS

Granting Personal Leave Days Valid

In a motion for summary judgment filed against the South Stickney Township School District by the local American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, a Circuit court overruled the state superintendent's ruling that the granting of personal leave days by the local board of education was illegal.

In reversing the state superintendent's opinion, the court found that the "Board of Education has the right under the laws of the State of Illinois and, in particular, the School Code of the State of Illinois to contract for or grant personal leave days" for teachers represented by the bargaining unit. The court also ordered that the board of education "shall honor requests for personal leave by its employees in accordance with. . .the subject collective bargaining agreement."

MASSACHUSETTS

Teachers Fined for Walkout

A New Bedford judge fined the New Bedford Teachers Association a total of $50,000 for an eight-day strike conducted in September. The teachers, who had been working without a contract for 22 months, struck over several disputed issues, including salaries for advanced degrees, work schedules, curriculum development, and lunchroom duty. Before the strike the teachers had agreed to a $6,000 starting salary.

The court that levied the fine said the strike had cost the city of New Bedford $100,000. The court ordered that the bulk of the fine could be paid by the teachers collectively, but that the field director of the Massachusetts Education Association must pay $5,000 of the total.

The Association's attorney said that he was considering appealing the fine to a higher court, and that since the judge found both the school committee and the Association responsible for the strike, the school committee should be ordered to pay the other $50,000.

NEW JERSEY

Cost of Living Adjustments Provided

An unusual New Jersey law enacted recently will provide automatic cost-of-living adjustments for pensioners with total annual incomes under $6,000 after three years of retirement. The new pensions will be adjusted according to the consumer price index of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Officials estimate the increases will be slightly more than 2 percent the first year, beginning January 1970, for the approximately 27,000 state and local pensioners who retired before January 1, 1967. Approximately 4,000 employees who retired before 1955 will receive adjustments unrelated to the consumer price index and their total income.

NEW YORK

Longevity Pay Based on Transfer Credit

The New York State Commissioner of Education upheld the claim of a Westchester County school teacher for longevity pay, based on transfer credit for years served in another school district.

The teacher claimed she was entitled to a longevity increment in 1967-68. She had been employed in September 1949, and had been granted three years' transfer credit after five years' service. A 1968-69 amendment changed the longevity increment requirement to 20 years in the same district.

The Commissioner ruled that the teacher was entitled to the increment because:

> Notwithstanding the optional nature of the longevity increment, the Education Statute clearly mandates parity between actual service within a school district and service rendered outside the school district once transfer credit has been voluntarily granted.

STATISTICS

TEACHER STRIKES IN 1968-69

The number of teacher strikes and work stoppages recorded from August 1968 through June 1969 reached an all-time high of 131. These strikes occurred in 24 states and the District of Columbia. Of the total man-days involved in strikes or work stoppages, 90 percent were recorded in New York, a state which enacted a strike penalty law about two years ago. Man-days involved in teachers' strikes in the state of New York exceeded 7 percent of the estimated total man-days of instruction.

In the remaining 23 states and the District of Columbia, the number of man-days involved in strikes was 0.6 percent or less of the estimated total instructional man-days for each area.

Although 2.7 million man-days were involved in strikes last year, they equaled less than 1 percent of the total estimated 384 million man-days of instruction scheduled for the entire United States.

During the 1968-69 school year, four new states—Iowa, Nevada, North Dakota and South Dakota—were added to the list of states in which teacher strikes had occurred since 1960, when the NEA Research Division began collecting strike information.

In addition, Nevada and South Dakota passed mandatory negotiation statutes which included penalty provisions against teachers and teachers organizations involved in strikes. The man-days involved in teachers' strikes recorded in these two states accounted for less than 0.6 percent of the total man-days of instruction in each state.

The total number of man-days of instruction in 1968-69 was calculated by multiplying the estimated total instructional staff by the constant figure of 180 days of instruction for the year. While the minimum number of instructional days mandated by state law varies, most state laws require 180.

Further details on teacher strike activity since 1940 and a system-by-system listing for 1968-69 are given in a Research Memo in process.

TEXT

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON STATE LABOR LAW TO AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, AUGUST 1969

Each year, the Committee opens its report with a brief discussion of a current and significant problem on the labor law scene. This year, the Committee on State Labor Law has decided to focus its attention on the total area of public employee relations.

A. THE RIGHT TO ENGAGE IN CONCERTED ACTIVITY

Public employment bargaining laws may be divided into three basic categories. This division is accomplished on the basis of the employer's permissive ("may") or mandatory ("must") obligation to confer or bargain with employee representatives. A third category is established for those laws allowing employees to "present proposals" regarding wages, hours and working conditions, without expressing any form of employer obligation to discuss such proposals.

By early 1969, "present proposal" laws existed in Alabama (firemen); California (firemen); Florida (state and local); and Pennsylvania (state and local).

There were eight permissive obligation laws in the states of Alaska (state and local); Delaware (municipal); Nebraska (teachers); New Hampshire (towns); North Dakota (cities); Ohio (public utilities); Oregon (state and local); and Washington (public utilities and port districts).

Mandatory obligation laws have been enacted in California (local); Connecticut (local); Delaware (local transit authorities, state and local); Florida (firemen); Georgia (Chatham County only); Hawaii (state and county); Louisiana (public transportation); Maine (firemen); Maryland (teachers); Massachusetts (state and local); Michigan (local); Minnesota (state and local); Missouri (state and local, except teachers and police); Montana (nurses); Nebraska (state and local); New Jersey (state and local); New York (state and local); North Dakota (teachers); Oregon (teachers and nurses); Pennsylvania (transit authorities, police and firemen); Rhode Island (state and local); South Dakota (state and local); Vermont (state and municipal, except professionals); Washington (state and local); Wisconsin (state and local); and Wyoming (firemen).

The number of states currently allowing some or all of their public employees some voice in the determination of their wages, hours and working conditions has now reached thirty.

1. State Legislation

In 1968 and early 1969, several states authorized their public employees to engage in some type of collective activity. Nine states enacted public employee relations statutes, while New York, Nebraska, California, and Delaware amended their statutes.

The Alaska statute (T. 23, Chapter 40) is permissive. Political subdivisions, including schools, may contract with labor organizations. Grievance arbitration is specifically authorized.

Georgia (House Bill 1645) vests public employees in Chatham County with the right to bargain collectively; the County, and the City of Savannah, have a duty to bargain which includes reducing any agreement to writing.

The Maryland act (Section 175, H.B. 274) covers all certified employees in public schools, excluding superintendents and persons designated to serve on a school negotiating committee. The act allows employees to form and join any organization intending to represent the employees in bargaining for wages, hours and working conditions. The State Board of Education administers representation elections, and issues certifications which terminate at the end of two years. The composition of the statutory countywide unit is a subject of bargaining. Employer unfair labor practices, as well as tri-partite (combination mediation—fact finding) impasse panels are provided.

In New Jersey, the Legislature overrode the Governor's conditional veto (partially based on the absence of a strike prohibition) of the New Jersey Employee-Employer Relations Act. The bill (264 GERR F-1) created a seven-member public employment relations commission to administer representation and bargaining procedures under the act. The commission defines appropriate units, but there are neither unfair labor practices nor strike prohibitions. The statute extends to all public employees except elected officials, supervisors and managerial employees (except under extraordinary situations). Also, policemen are precluded from joining any general labor organization. A chancery court denied a preliminary injunction restraining the operation of the law. Lullo v. IAFF, Local 1066 (N.J. Supr. Ct., Hudson Cnty., 1968).

Pennsylvania enacted S.B. 1343, L. 1968, 48 SLL 240d, authorizing policemen and firemen employed by the Commonwealth, or political subdivision thereof, to bargain through organizations designated by fifty per cent or more of the employees. Bargaining regarding terms and conditions of employment, as well as grievances, is to be conducted on a statutory timetable. There is a mutual duty to bargain in good faith which includes reducing any agreement to writing. In impasses, the law provides for binding compulsory arbitration of the contract.

The State of Rhode Island also enacted police and firemen compulsory arbitration laws (Title 28, Chapter 9.1, Section 28-9.1-2, et. seq., and Title 28, Chapter 9.2, Section 28-9.2-2, et seq.), for all permanent uniformed members of paid police and fire departments up to and including the rank of chief. These employees have the right to organize, bargain collectively, and to select a majority representative as exclusive bargaining agent.

Required good faith bargaining must follow a statutory timetable, with all unresolved issues submitted to binding arbitration. Written contracts may not exceed one year.

Shortly before this report was finalized, North Dakota, South Dakota and Vermont passed statutes regarding their public employees.

North Dakota's recent law (H.B., L. 1969) requires school boards to meet and negotiate in good faith with recognized bargaining agents of units of classroom teachers or administrators. School boards conduct elections, with certification lasting one year. The bargaining parties may select mediators, or petition the education fact finding commission established by the law. Strikes are prohibited, and strikers may not be paid for the time they are on strike.

South Dakota's law (S.B. 150, L. 1969) provides a system of fines for strikes by state and local employees and their representative organizations. The Labor Commissioner administers the representation procedure, and the employer government is required to meet and confer regarding grievances and conditions of employment. Employees are protected from discharge or discrimination for exercising their rights under the Act.

The Vermont State Employees Labor Relations Act (Ch. 27, L. 1969, Section 901, et seq.) establishes a board to determine issues regarding representation, unfair labor practices and grievances of state employees.

California amended its statute dealing with state and local employees (Ch. 1390, Govt. Code, Sections 3500, et seq.) to specifically add the mutual duty to bargain in good faith, and to define such obligation. Recognition of employee organizations was added by what was titled the Meyer-Milias-Brown Act. The amendments are not applicable to state employees.

Pursuant to Section 1312 of the Delaware public employee relations statute (Del. Code, Tit. 19, Ch. 13, s. 1301, et seq.), the state established a merit system which state employee unions assailed as in derogation of their collective bargaining rights under the statute. By H.B. 624, L. 1968, the legislature repealed the offending section, and provided that nothing in the merit system could deprive state employees or their representatives of the full exercise of collective bargaining rights. The amendment required good faith bargaining regarding wages, leaves, promotions and classifications, vested in employees a cause of action to enforce the Law; and provided that union negotiated grievance procedures supersede those established by the merit system.

Nebraska (L.B. 15, L. 1969) recently amended its court of industrial relations statute (Section 48-801, et seq., Reissue Revised Statutes of Nebraska, 1943), expanding that court's compulsory arbitration powers over state and local government employees.

On March 4, 1969, New York Governor Rockefeller signed amendments to the state's Taylor law which impose stiffer penalties on striking public employee unions by removing the statutory limits on both fines and loss of check-off. Also, the new version of the law states that individual employees absent from work without permission on the day of a strike are presumed to be on strike. Striking employees lose two days' pay for each day they are off the job, and are placed on probation without tenure for one year. Taxpayers are granted the right to prefer charges against employers who fail to institute proceedings before PERB. Other sections of the new law grant authority for impartial arbitration of impasse issues, and permit the legislative body affected by an impasse to require the bargaining parties to appear and report on their positions. The law also contains employer and employee unfair labor practices, and prohibits payment of wages to a public employee for any day he was on strike.

2. Local Legislation

A number of local governments have adopted ordinances granting their public employees representation and collective bargaining rights.

The Baltimore Municipal Employee Relations Ordinance (Article I, Sections 110 through 125 of the Baltimore City Code, 1966 Edition, as amended; 266 GERR E-1) covers all municipal employees in the classified service of the Mayor and City Council except school, police, fire, confidential and clerical employees. This ordinance requires mutual good faith negotiation, and creates a mayor-appointed position of labor commissioner to administer the ordinance and to serve as a permanent member of the city's bargaining team. The labor commissioner processes representation petitions, and defines appropriate units. Any unresolved representation issues are submitted to binding arbitration by a tripartite panel. The commissioner may order a secret ballot election upon a thirty per cent showing of interest, with ten per cent required for intervention. If an organization receives a majority of the votes cast, the commissioner shall certify the organization as exclusive bargaining agent. The ordinance provides for a two-year election free period, tripartite fact finding, checkoff, employer and union unfair labor practices, and permits advisory arbitration of grievances. Strikes and secondary boycotts are prohibited with the penalties being revocation of recognition and checkoff.

The Los Angeles Ordinance (261 GERR F-1) created the Employee Relations Commission of the County of Los Angeles which was given authority to determine appropriate bargaining units and to certify employee organizations as representative of the employees in such units. The ordinance was challenged in a suit filed by the Los Angeles County Employees' Association in the Los Angeles Superior Court, Case No. 939557. Claiming to represent some 34,000 of the approximately 60,000 public employees in Los Angeles, The Association attacked the ordinance on a variety of grounds, including improper delegation of authority to the Commission, conflict with state law, and conflict with the local Los Angeles Charter. The Association sought to prevent the establishment of appropriate units smaller than a unit of all of the 60,000 employees in Los Angeles in order to preclude any organization representing crafts or classes of employees within the County from securing representation rights. In January, 1969, the court upheld the validity of the ordinance, and dissolved a temporary injunction against implementation of the ordinance (281 GERR B-8). The Association has appealed.

The City of Portland, Oregon (Ordinance No. 128056, 269 GERR B-1), requires good faith bargaining re-employment relations, which includes monetary benefits, hours, vacations, sick leave, grievances, and other conditions of employment. Employees have the privilege to form or join labor organizations and are protected from coercion in the exercise of these rights. Unions may petition the City Council for recognition on a thirty per cent showing of interest. The auditor then reports on the petition, and the Council holds a hearing. Recognition may be granted for up to one year; or the petition may be transferred to the Bureau of Labor for advice on the acceptance or rejection of the representation claim, the conduction of an election, or the holding of a hearing to determine an appropriate bargaining unit. The City may suspend recognition at any time if the union fails to represent all employees equally without regard to membership or activities in the union.

Also adopting ordinances related to their public employees were the City of Lakewood, Ohio (271 GERR F-1), and the City of Louisville, Kentucky (265 GERR B-13).

3. Court Decisions and Attorney General Opinions

During the past year, courts and attorneys general, with the exception of Nevada Attorney General Opinion No. 494, were unanimous in holding that public employees have a constitutionally protected right to join unions which cannot be abolished by statute. There was little agreement, however, as to the nature and scope of public employee rights beyond the bare right to join unions, and the degree to which further rights are dependent upon statutes.

Federal court jurisdiction was invoked by public employees seeking constitutional protection of their union activities, McLaughlin v. Tilendis, 398 F.2d 287 (7th Cir., 1968), involved Chicago school teachers discharged for attempting to form a union. The teachers brought suit under the 1871 Civil Rights Act, alleging that the discharges interfered with their freedom of association and thus abridged the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. In remanding the court held that the first amendment permitted public employees to form and join labor unions as a matter of right. The court reaffirmed the principle of Keyishian v. Board of Regents of New York, 385 U.S. 589 (1967), that teachers have free association rights which may not be unreasonably restricted as a condition of employment. Non-tenure teachers, the court held, were also protected under the Civil Rights Act; and teacher-school board collective bargaining contracts were held not contrary to public policy.

AFSCME v. Woodward, 406 F.2d 137 (8th Cir., 1969), involved a similar issue. North Platte, Nebraska, municipal employees were discharged for engaging in union activities. The court followed McLaughlin reasoning to establish that public employee union association is protected by the first and fourteenth amendments. Wieman v. Updegraff, 344 U.S. 183 (1952), was cited for the concept that public employees, while having no constitutional right of employment, are constitutionally protected from patently arbitrary and discriminatory discharge. The Eighth Circuit could find no paramount public interest justifying the City's limitation on free association, particularly when a state statute provided that employment was not to be denied because of union membership. Contrary to the City's contention, the court concluded that neither the state statute nor the Constitution are limited to private employment.

Subsequently, a three-judge federal court held unconstitutional the North Carolina statute prohibiting public employees from belonging to unions. Atkins, et al., IAFF v. City of Charlotte, 296 F. Supp. 1068 (W.D.N.C., 1969). However, the court decreed that statutory prohibition of contracting with public employee unions was a valid exercise of legislative power. The court found the statute overbroad in its restrictions upon protected freedom of association, and too prohibitive of legally exercisable rights despite its legitimate purpose of preventing public strikes. Firemen union activity was found to be within the protections of the first and fourteenth amendments, with a citation to both McLaughlin and Woodward.

In City of Fort Smith v. Arkansas State Council 38, AFSCME, 245 Ark. 398, 433 S. W. 2d 153 (1968), the Arkansas Supreme Court reversed a chancery court's order that the City bargain with its striking employees. The court reasoned that while municipal employees have a right to join unions, municipal governments may not be required to recognize and bargain with such unions. A somewhat similar conclusion was reached by the Blackhawk County, Iowa, District Court in State Board of Regents v. United Packinghouse, Food & Allied Workers Local 1258, 68 LRRM 2677, 251 GERR D-1 (1968). That court held that in the absence of a state collective bargaining statute, public employers have the power to bargain collectively and contract with their employees, but the employees may not compel an employer to do such.

Attorney General opinions were as diverse in reasoning and conclusion as court decisions. Minnesota Attorney General's Opinion 270-D (33 SLL 248c) held that academic teaching staffs of state colleges and junior colleges are subject to the state's Public Employee Labor Relations Act. The Arkansas Attorney General advised (255 GERR B-12) that State Labor Department employees may join a union and bargain collectively since there are no laws prohibiting collective bargaining by state employees. At the opposite side of the spectrum is Nevada Attorney General's Opinion No. 494 (243 GERR D-1) which concluded that a public employer may adopt a policy prohibiting its employees from belonging to any organization which has collective bargaining as an object. The Nevada rationale is that you cannot have collective bargaining without the strike threat. Since public strikes are illegal, public collective bargaining with the strike as an inherent part is also illegal. Since unions have historically demonstrated an intent to engage in such illegal activities, public employers may prohibit their employees' membership in unions.

Attorneys General in Delaware (205 GERR B-8) and Missouri (Opinion No. 276, 35 SLL 212) held that while teachers may organize and present proposals, their exclusion from state bargaining laws precludes school boards from signing legally enforceable collective bargaining contracts with them.

B. REPRESENTATION ISSUES

1. Supervisory Units

A prime issue in 1968 was whether both supervisors and non-supervisors are, or should be, covered by a public employment relations act; and, if covered, whether both may be included in the same unit.

The Indiana Attorney General, in Opinion No. 25 (261 GERR B-11; 249 GERR B-12), concluded that freedom of association under both federal and state constitutions permits both supervisory and professional employees to join unions of which their subordinates are members. The Attorney General limited the scope of this principle by noting that public departments need not tolerate disloyalty; hence they may discipline and discharge supervisors in rank and file units if there is evidence of conflicting loyalties.

The Governor of Rhode Island vetoed a bill which would have allowed public school administrators below the rank of superintendent to engage in collective bargaining. The veto rationale was that administrators, as management personnel, are entrusted with effectuation of school policies and enforcement of teacher contracts (250 GERR B-8).

The Michigan Labor Mediation Board, in Hillsdale Community Schools, 274 GERR G-1 (1968), reaffirmed its previous decision in Saginaw County Roads Commission, 192 GERR B-1 (1967), that supervisors are entitled to engage in concerted activities under the Public Employment Relations Act. Hillsdale held that the principal and administrators' organization's affiliation with the Michigan Education Association did not per se establish domination or assistance of, or by, the organization representing the classroom teachers. The issue of dominance or assistance would be determined only in an unfair labor practice proceeding during which evidence of actual domination or assistance may be adduced. MLMB qualified its rule on supervisors' coverage:

> "Before this position is interpreted as allowing the organization of 'vice presidents' mentioned in the Packard Motor Car Company v. NLRB, 330 U.S. 485 case, we note that there is a level at which organization must end. That level consists of 'executive' employees, and is limited to those employees who formulate, determine and effectuate management policies."

This exclusion standard was defined in City of Detroit and Governmental Analysts and Accountants Association, Case No. R67 D-125 (1969). MLMB, noting that the Michigan statute uses the words "executive" and "supervisor," held that employees closely identified with policy determination are not covered by PERA.

The Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission dismissed a petition filed by supervisors under that state's municipal employees statute. Milwaukee County, 250 GERR B-1 (1968). Though the definition of "employee" does not expressly exclude supervisors, the Commission held that the statute does not provide protection or processes for supervisors. Thus, the dismissal was premised on the interpretation that supervisors cannot be included in a unit with the supervised employees, and cannot constitute an appropriate unit by themselves.

In a case currently on appeal to the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Milwaukee Circuit Court upheld the WERC ruling that city attorneys have the right to organize and affiliate with an organization of their own choice. The court and commission rejected the executive-supervisor-confidential exclusionary argument because the management and labor relations information available to the attorneys did not directly apply to relations between the city and the attorney association. City of Milwaukee v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission, 274 GERR C-3 (Milwaukee Cir. Ct. 1968).

2. Legality of Exclusive Recognition

In early 1969, the Dade County, Florida, Circuit Court voided a teacher-school board contract recognizing one teacher organization as sole representative because Florida law does not permit exclusive recognition of any public employees' representative (284 GERR B-10).

In Mayor and City Council of Cumberland v. Municipal Employees Local 812, 284 GERR B-5 (Allegany Cnty., Md., Cir. Ct., 1969), the Laborers' Union challenged the legality and constitutionality of a city ordinance authorizing elections to determine whether employees wished to be represented by an exclusive bargaining agent. The court distinguished Mugford v. City of Baltimore, 185 Md. 266, 44 A. 2d 745 (1945), on the basis that Mugford precluded a city department from recognizing a union, not the City itself. Since the City had the charter power to change wages, hours and working conditions, there was no delegation of a city's legislative power by a department, as in Mugford, when the City acted itself. The court concluded that a city has power to execute collective bargaining agreements, so long as the contract does not discriminate against non-union employees.

A recent decision of the Missouri Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the state's statute giving public employees the right to select exclusive bargaining agents. The court held that mandamus was a proper procedure to seek reinstatement of employees discharged for union activity and to require a city to recognize a union chosen by employees. State ex rel. Missey v. City of Cabool, 70 LRRM 3394 (1969).

When a New York City Executive Order permitted checkoff only to exclusive bargaining agents, a minority union challenged the change in a policy that formerly allowed checkoff to all unions. Bauch (Local 832, Teamsters) v. City of New York, 21 N.Y. 2d 599, 237 N.E. 2d 211 (N.Y. Ct. App., 1968). The court found no requirement that a city checkoff to a minority union in either the municipal law's permissive checkoff provision, or the Taylor law's required checkoff, if requested by an exclusive bargaining agent. Due process and equal protection were not violated since the order had a permissible objective of stabilizing bargaining relations, and a reasonable basis in the history of private and public labor relations. The court found no substance in the union's position that loss of checkoff challenged its existence, thus jeopardizing employees' right to free association. Checkoff, the court found, has no necessary relation to the right to support an organization, and the first amendment does not entitle any organization to the City's aid in collecting dues.

3. State Agency Jurisdiction in Representation Cases

In City Manager of Medford v. State Labor Relations Commission, 228 GERR B-5 (Mass. Supr. Jud. Ct., 1968), a city sought to challenge certain inclusions in a unit of foremen ordered by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission. The court dismissed the suit as premature because under national and state (private sector) precedent a unit determination is not a final, reviewable order.

Teamsters Local 97 v. City of Orange (N.J. Supr. Ct., Essex County), involved a union action to enjoin a city from recognizing a rival union and to obtain exclusive recognition for itself. The New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission intervened to urge that the issue of unit determination was within its primary jurisdiction. The court ordered the case transferred to the Commission.

The Wisconsin Supreme Court held that state courts have no jurisdiction to review the WERC Chairman's letters refusing to process a petition filed by a supervisors' union. The letter, the court held, did not satisfy the requirements for an administrative decision since it was nothing more than the Chairman's "estimate" of policies and practices. Universal Organization of Municipal Foremen v. Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission, 166 N.W. 2d 239 (1969).

4. Other Representation Issues

In City of Medford v. Local 446, Teamsters and Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission, 267 GERR B-2 (1968), the Taylor County Circuit Court held that the statutory language allowing police to be represented by unions in fact finding may not be expanded to permit union representation of police at the bargaining table. Since the City met with the police but refused to negotiate with a union representing the police, the court found no refusal to bargain. Thus, the court enjoined WERC from proceeding with fact finding because of the WERC determination that the City had failed to negotiate in good faith with the union representing the police.

The Wisconsin Commission, in University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee, 222 GERR B-1 (1967), expressed its preference for larger units in state employment. This principle was put to the test in Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations, et al., Decisions Nos. 8304, 8345, 8346 (1968), when the agencies involved opposed nurse and attorney-examiner units' petitions with an all-employee unit contention. Since professionals are the equivalent of craft employees in Wisconsin, the Commission found the attorney-examiners and nurses to each be recognizable and identifiable professions entitled to units apart from an all-employee unit. The Commission determined that the policy of the act would be best effectuated if units did not cut across agency lines and muddle management. Thus, the Commission found appropriate units of each profession within each agency.

By decision, the Wisconsin Commission changed its rules regarding election petitions where there is an established bargaining agent. In the past, WERC had not required a showing of interest in support of petitions because few petitions had been filed in bad faith. A study disclosed that an increasing number of petitions where there was little likelihood of success had an adverse effect on the bargaining relationship. Thus, in Wauwatosa Board of Education, Decision

No. 8300-A (1968), the Commission dismissed an employer's decertification petition where there was no supporting showing of interest. The Dane County Circuit Court affirmed the dismissal. Wauwatosa Board of Education v. WERC, 69 LRRM 2241 (1968).

C. UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES

1. Conduct of Bargaining

Two opinions hold that public sector collective bargaining may be conducted in private. The California Attorney General, in Opinion No. 68177 (266 GERR B-1), stated that there is a limit on the public's right to know; thus, public sector collective bargaining is legal if conducted in private. The Michigan Labor Mediation Board, in Menominee Board of Education, 245 GERR B-6 (1968), ruled that insistence on public bargaining constitutes refusal to bargain. In its opinion, MLMB said:

> "Collective bargaining cannot be effective in the presence of either press or public. Representatives of employers and labor organizations (perhaps because they are human) tend to speak for the public and the news media rather than engage in the collective bargaining procedure."

2. Mandatory Subjects of Bargaining

a. Arbitration of Grievances

The Missouri Supreme Court, in State of Missouri ex rel Burke v. Cervantes, 423 S.W. 2d 281 (1968), held that a state law providing for advisory arbitration of firemen grievances was unconstitutional as applied to constitutional charter cities (St. Louis), because it imposed duties on a municipal office not authorized by the city charter.

In determining grievances, the court declared, the City was not required to go beyond the comprehensive provisions of its charter which deal with employees. To the contrary is Opinion of the Oregon Attorney General No. 6571 (45 SLL 234a) holding that binding arbitration of grievance clauses in collective bargaining contracts are valid, and a Mahoning, Ohio, Common Pleas Court decree that a binding arbitration clause in a contract between the City of Youngstown and the firefighters is valid and enforceable (276 GERR Local Notes).

However, the enforceability of the arbitration clause may depend on contract language. In Local 572, AFSCME v. City of Dover, 249 A. 2d 681 (N.H. Sup. Ct., 1969), the court found that a contract providing arbitration by a public advisory arbitration board could not be construed to enlarge the charter authority of the arbitration board. As the charter provided that the arbitration board was authorized to issue only non-binding recommendations, it could not be interpreted to provide for binding arbitration.

Public sector arbitration is an area fraught with the concepts of delegation of sovereign authority and conflicts between statutes governing the acts of officials or agencies and contracts negotiated pursuant to public collective bargaining laws.

Of the several challenges to Wyoming's compulsory arbitration for firemen law (Wyom. Stat. Sec. 27-265, et seq., 1965 Cum. Supp.) raised in State of Wyoming ex rel v. City of Laramie, 437 P. 2d 295 (Wyom. Sup. Ct., 1968), the major thrust was the unconstitutional delegation of municipal powers. The court gave two answers to this contention. The first was that the city, as a creation of the legislature, has only such powers as the legislature grants it. Thus, as the legislature can authorize the city to employ and pay firemen, the legislature can place limits on the manner in which wages and working conditions are determined. In the second answer, the court quoted with approval the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's opinion in Erie Firefighters Local 293 v. Gardner, 406 Pa. 395, 178 A. 2d 691 (1962). The principle involved was that non-delegable power is power to enact a law exercising discretion as to what the law should be; whereas, delegable power involves authority to execute a law already determined.

Both unlawful delegation of authority and conflict with governing statutes were raised in a petition for declaratory judgment of the validity of an existing contract in Tremblay v. Berlin Police Union, 108 N.H. 416, 237 A. 2d 668 (N.H. Sup. Ct., 1968). One of the contract clauses under attack provided for binding arbitration of grievances, but subject to the state's arbitration law. The court held that there was no delegation or conflict, but the rationale may limit the effect of the holding. Binding arbitration of grievances by itself might raise problems, the court reasoned, but the clause at issue was approved because it was made subject to the state law which provided that a party may give notice not to be bound by an arbitrator's award.

The delegation and conflict arguments were raised before the Michigan Labor Mediation Board in Oakland County Sheriff's Department, 227 GERR F-1 (1968). Raised as a defense to a refusal to bargain charge, the Michigan Board held that the collective bargaining obligation imposed by subsequent statute modified the Sheriff's statutory authority where it was in derogation of his bargaining obligation. Adding the philosophy of the Steelworkers Trilogy or the legislature's intent to import private industry practices into the public sector resulted in a final conclusion that binding arbitration as the terminal point in a grievance procedure was a mandatory subject of bargaining.

This decision applied only to non-civil service counties. In subsequent litigation, Michigan circuit courts have held that civil service or other local laws must yield when in conflict with provisions which are mandatory subjects of bargaining contained in contracts negotiated pursuant to the bargaining law. Civil Service Commission v. Wayne County Board of Supervisors (Wayne County Cir. Ct. Case No. 85654, 1968); Local 666, AFSCME v. City of Hamtramck (Wayne County Cir. Ct. Case No. 119814, 1968), pet. for leave to appeal denied, 381 Mich. 808 (1969);

City of Detroit, Civil Service Commission v. AFSCME, Council 77, 71 LRRM 2026 (Wayne County Cir. Ct., 1969).

b. Union Security

The Oakland and Tremblay cases, supra, were also significant for their discussion of union security. The New Hampshire Supreme Court found the union shop clause before it qualified by its terms, which the court found to impose a financial obligation only and not a requirement to maintain membership in good standing. The union could seek the discharge of an employee only for his withdrawal of checkoff. Since the law decreed collective bargaining to be a proper public purpose, the court found that municipalities are vested with discretion as to the desirability and propriety of the union shop in the operation of the city. Once agreed upon, there is no unlawful delegation of authority because the city has, in its discretion, found such a provision essential for the effective operation of the city.

In the Michigan case, the sheriff contended that the absence of an (8a) (3) type proviso authorizing a union shop (among other arguments) in the Public Employment Relations Act rendered illegal any type of union security. There were three separate opinions, with two of the members concurring that agency shop was the only type of union security legal under the statute (the equivalent of s 8(3), Wagner Act) prohibiting employers from discriminating to encourage or discourage union membership. The two-member majority concluded that agency shop does not involve membership, while eliminating free riders. A dissent on the membership question was premised primarily on NLRB v. General Motors Corporation, 373 U.S. 734 (1963).

Later in the year, Michigan circuit courts held that a contractual agency shop violates neither the Public Employment Relations Act prohibition against discrimination to encourage membership nor conflicts with the Cities' Civil Service Act, City of Warren v. Local 1383 Firefighters, 68 LRRM 2977 (Macomb County Cir. Ct., 1968); nor Teachers Tenure Act, Clampitt v. Board of Education of Warren, 68 LRRM 2996, 256 GERR E-1 (Macomb County Cir. Ct., 1968); Smigel, et al. v. Southgate Community Schools, et al., 70 LRRM 2042 (Wayne County Cir. Ct., 1968).

3. Strikes With Concurrent Unfair Labor Practices: Agency Jurisdiction

In Wauwatosa Board of Education, 256 GERR C-3 (1968), the employer contended that a one-day strike brought about by the union's instigation constituted unlawful interference with employee rights. The Wisconsin Commission stated that while strikes are prohibited, there is no statutory provision regarding penalties or making the strike a prohibited practice. Thus, the Commission held that only courts have jurisdiction to enjoin strikes; but where a strike is accompanied by acts of employee interference, such acts, excluding striking, may be restrained as prohibited practices.

Wisconsin's decision in State of Wisconsin, Department of Health and Social Services, Division of Corrections 288 GERR B-3 (1969), is believed to be the first in the country to sustain a prohibited practice charge against a state agency. Employees boycotted a conference because of their displeasure at the Governor for not calling a special legislative session to consider their wage claims. The Commission determined that the boycott was not a strike because attendance was voluntary; and that a dispute over wages was not unprotected activity, because wages are a voluntary and non-bargainable subject. A post boycott transfer of the union president was declared discriminatory. The employer's requirement that employees take vacation time instead of working a regular day on conference days was declared to be a unilateral change of a mandatory subject of bargaining, but not discrimination of interference.

D. STRIKES

In Board of Education, Borough of Union Beach v. New Jersey Education Association, 53 N.J. 29, 247 A. 2d 867 (1968), the New Jersey Supreme Court affirmed an order that the Education Association cease its sanctions and coercive activity against a school system that had refused to rehire three non-tenure teachers active in association activities. After imposing the sanctions, NJEA sent copies to all of its 57,000 members, to building representatives in key surrounding districts, and to placement directors of teachers colleges in New Jersey and surrounding states. Additionally, letters were sent to teachers considering jobs with the sanctioned board warning them of a breach of professional ethics for accepting employment. Similar warnings appeared in the local press.

In answering NJEA's contention that a sanction is not a strike, the court declared that the public demand for services renders strikes against government illegal; thus, any concerted action designed to make government unable to function by denying it the necessary manpower, is illegal concerted activity. The NJEA argued that the injunction, barring all coercive acts intended to coerce the board to act according to NJEA's desires, was so broad and imprecise as to violate freedom of speech. The court was in agreement with the basic right to persuade government to act as desired, but stated that this legitimate exercise of freedom of speech did not extend to illegally disabling the public body from acting at all—which standard the NJEA activities satisfied. In reply to the contention that equitable relief was not appropriate, the court held that it would not invoke "clean hands" when to do so would injure the public.

Injunctive restriction of free speech was also before the California Supreme Court in In re Berry et al., 65 Cal. Rptr. 273, 436 P. 2d 273 (1968). The court held an injunction against striking Sacramento County social workers to be "a model of overreaching and confusion." Assuming without deciding that public strikes could be enjoined, the court found the injunction's proscriptions broad enough to encompass both enjoinable strike activity and constitutionally protected free speech in the form of informational picketing and demonstrations to mobilize public sentiment. The court adopted the reasoning of Thornhill v. Alabama, 310 U.S. 88 (1940), that the injunction's sweeping language was "too blunt an instrument" to effect the legitimate aim of enjoining public strikes, and further refused to read "in context" language which was not specifically enough drawn to prevent "repression" of free speech. Additionally, the court found the injunctive language so vague as to permit application to persons not associated with the union, and thus violative of due process.

The issue of involuntary servitude in teacher strike injunctions was before two courts during 1968. In Pinellas County Classroom Teachers v. Board of Public Instruction, Pinellas County, 214 S. 2d 34 (Fla. Sup. Ct., 1968), the court upheld an injunction against teachers who went on strike after returning their individual contracts. The court found no involuntary servitude involved because, once a teacher has signed and returned a contract, he is required to comply with the contract, terminate it legally, or subject himself to the penalties for resigning in violation of the contract. The court emphasized the point that teachers may not strike and retain the contract benefits.

Many substantial issues, in addition to involuntary servitude, were raised before the Supreme Court of Michigan in School District for the City of Holland, etc. v. Holland Education Association, et al., 380 Mich. 314, 157 N.W. 2d 206 (1968).

The court vacated a circuit court's restraining order which had been entered on affidavits and oral argument proving only that school would not open on the appointed date with teachers in the classrooms. Of the four opinions issued, the prevailing opinion reaffirmed the constitutionality of the Public Employment Relations Act, including the strike prohibition;[1] held teachers to be employees subject to the strike prohibition even though neither individual contracts nor a collective bargaining agreement had been executed; and decreed that trial courts, in deciding complaints for public strike injunctions are to exercise traditional equity power—which was to include taking evidence to determine (a) whether the employees are on strike; (b) whether irreparable harm will be done to the public health, safety and welfare; and (c) whether there had been good faith bargaining by both employer and employees.[2]

Two judges held that the striking teachers were not employees because they had not signed individual contracts and there was no collective bargaining agreement. The latter two judges, however, recognized that in a "proper" case, equity is the means to enforce the strike prohibition in the statute.

[1] The Hutchinson Act, of which the Public Employment Relations Act was an amendment, had been held constitutional in City of Detroit v. Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway & Motor Coach Employees Association, 322 Mich. 237, 51 N.W. 2d 228 (1952).

[2] This phraseology is the interpretation of the language of the Supreme Court by circuit courts called upon to interpret the language in meting out selective injunctions. The Supreme Court said "We here hold it is insufficient merely to show that a concert of prohibited action by public employees has taken place and that ipso facto such a showing justifies injunctive relief. We so hold because it is basically contrary to public policy in this state to issue injunctions in labor disputes absent a showing of violence, irreparable injury, or breach of the peace. . . . We suggest that such proceedings inquire into whether, as charged by the defendants, the plaintiff's school district has refused to bargain in good faith, whether an injunction should issue at all, and if so, on what terms and for what period in light of the whole record to be adduced."

CASE REVIEWS

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

NO-STRIKE OATH RULED UNCONSTITUTIONAL

An oath demanded of federal employees as a stipulation of employment that they will not "assert" their right to strike against the government was ruled unconstitutional in a unanimous decision rendered by a three-judge panel of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The case was brought against the Postmaster General by the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) in seeking a declaratory judgment that portions of a U.S. statute and the required implementing Post Office employment oath violated First Amendment freedoms.

The district court heard the case on application from the government for a preliminary injunction, which was denied. In its brief, the government initially contested NALC's standing as the exclusive representative of some 6,000 postal employee bargaining units and thousands of individual members on the basis of the statute's wording:

> An individual [emphasis added] may not accept or hold a position in the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia if he—
> . . .
>
> (3) participates in a strike, or asserts the right to strike, against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia;
> (4) is a member of an organization of employees of the Government of the United States or of individuals employed by the government of the District of Columbia that he knows asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia. [5 U.S.C. §7311 (3) and (4)].

Accordingly, the government urged that only individual NALC members could challenge the statute and the employment oath.

The court, however, ruled that the government's strict view . . . ignores the trend of courts "increasingly to recognize the standing of associations to raise in some circumstances the rights of their members." . . .

Here, as in [United Federation of Postal Clerks v. Watson], the NALC is the authorized spokesman of its membership and recognized as such by Executive Order . . . . NALC's interest, for itself and on behalf of its membership, especially in light of the recent case law, is quite sufficient to give it standing.

In addition, the court found that "if NALC openly 'asserts' the right to strike, its members may be put at hazard since the statute carries criminal sanctions . . . and they could be barred from Government employment because of NALC's activities. And other letter carriers may be inhibited from joining because of the possible sanctions."

A second issue raised in the case involved a question of semantics. In its complaint, the NALC said its various elected officers and spokesmen had "urged and supported the right of postal employees, along with other federal employees, to strike," and that many of its members "desire to repudiate" portions of the oath forbidding them from asserting "the right to strike against the Government of the United States or any agency thereof while an employee of the Government of the United States or any agency thereof."

The government argued that such a "wish" did not constitute a justiciable controversy, and that a court test would be necessary only when action against a worker for legitimate First Amendment activity had begun or was imminent.

The court acknowledged that "superficially, this argument has great appeal," but cited the "chilling effect" doctrine as evidence that First Amendment precedents set in United Public Workers v. Mitchell (upon which the government based its argument) have been weakened by subsequent case law:

> More recent cases indicate that where freedoms of expression and association are involved, the threat alone of loss of job, criminal sanction or other penalty may inhibit, or "chill" their exercise and thus require court intervention to preserve them. In short, "immediate and real injury is done to the plaintiff's interests if he does not speak or act as he says he wants to . . . [because of] the threat of enforcement."

The court established the justiciable nature of this case by stating that "the chilling effect may well be quite pervasive if 'asserts' is given its ordinary dictionary meaning. . . . To the ordinary citizen, the word 'assert' evokes the image of advocacy or reasoned argument. It is defined by [the dictionary] to mean, 'to state or declare positively.'"

The government, however, contended that "'asserts' refers only to 'overt conduct to incite others' to strike and that 'asserts' has never been thought to forbid advocacy of 'a change in the law to legalize strikes by government employees.'" Its reasoning was based upon a supposed ambiguity inherent in the "idiomatic nature of the statute," and a House debate in which the statute's wording was changed from "believe" to "assert" so that the area of prohibition would apply only to incitement.

The court termed this argument "ingenious but unacceptable":

> It is absurd to think that the ordinary employee will carefully parse the oath, grasp the suggested semantic subtlety, and conclude that he may argue for the right to strike with impunity. It is more ridiculous still to imagine that he will resort to this scrap of legislative history to resolve any ambiguity if perceived. Nor can the Postmaster's interpretation, never publicized or embodied in regulations and not binding on his successor, be relied upon to any extent to remove the ambiguity.
> The short of the matter is that the language of the statute, reinforced by the identical phrasing of the oath, is not ambiguous. There is consequently no occasion to examine the legislative history. Even if there were an ambiguity, the isolated colloquy the Government cites would not satisfactorily eliminate it. One would be left with words so incurably vague that men would have to guess at their meaning. In the First Amendment area, this defect is as fatal as outright prohibition of free speech.

In ruling that the challenged statutory provisions and the implementing oath violated the First Amendment, the court struck the words, "or asserts the right to strike," from 5 U.S.C. § 7311(3) and struck the entire text of 5 U.S.C. § 7311(4). It also enjoined the Postmaster General from requiring, either directly or indirectly, the Post Office employment oath, and declared that "all existing executed oaths are of no force and effect." MICHIGAN

BENCHMARK HOLLAND RULING AFFIRMED

Affirmation of the Michigan Supreme Court's precedent-setting 1968 Holland ruling occurred with the high court's October 1969 reversal of an anti-strike injunction issued by a circuit court against the Crestwood Education Association.

The court's Holland decision established the principle of equity in the issuance of an injunction by suggesting that future courts determine whether the plaintiff school district refused to bargain in good faith prior to a strike, or the issuance of an injunction against a strike. It also found that strikes which are devoid of a showing of "violence, irreparable injury, or breach of the peace" are not, in themselves, enough to warrant automatic issuance of an injunction.

In the case of Crestwood School District v. Crestwood Education Association, the district filed a complaint in the Wayne Circuit Court seeking injunctive relief against striking teachers on grounds that they were public employees who had not reported to work, and that they were consequently "on strike" according to provisions of the Hutchinson Act.

The defendant association (certified bargaining representative of some 180 district teachers) filed motion for accelerated judgment of dismissal, arguing that as a result of a negotiation impasse between the district and the association, there were no agreements stating the beginning of the 1967-68 school year, and most district teachers had not signed contracts for that year. Furthermore the district had refused to submit to the jurisdiction of a mediation board and had not proved it would suffer "irreparable damages" from the strike. Accordingly, the association denied "the jurisdiction of the court to enter any relief under the [Public Employment Relations Act], contending that plaintiff was obligated first to exhaust administrative remedies and [denied] that defendants were employees or subject to any employment obligations and [denied] they were 'on strike' within the meaning of the Act."

The circuit court, however, "permanently restrained and enjoined" the Crestwood Education Association and others "from encouraging, inducing, or persuading teachers to strike under any guise whatsoever. . . ." It also ordered that > any other persons who have been or who are actively engaged in contract negotiations with plaintiff or in encouraging any work stoppage, affirmatively counsel and instruct teachers who are members of the defendant association to return to their classrooms forthwith and resume their teaching duties.

Although most of the district's teachers submitted formal resignations, some returned to work in compliance with the judgment.

In its May 1969 appeal before the Michigan Supreme Court, the association sought reversal of the lower court's judgment and dismissal of the entire proceedings on grounds that the circuit court > erroneously concluded that Crestwood teachers, who had never voluntarily contracted or agreed to work in that school district for the 1967-1968 school year, were "on strike" within the meaning of the [Public Employment Relations Act] and that the court had jurisdiction under that Act to issue an injunction against them though statutory administrative remedies had not been availed of or exhausted.

Noting that the school district had not filed a brief in the appeal and that its counsel did not intend "to appear in this matter or to take any part in the appeal proceedings," the high court reversed the circuit court's judgment and remanded the case to that court "for further proceedings consistent with the result ordered in the case of Holland. . . ." It also ordered that since the strike had been resolved, the lower court "dismiss the plaintiff's complaint with prejudice." (Crestwood School District v. Crestwood Education Association et al., Michigan Supreme Court, October 6, 1969).

U. S. GOVERNMENT

NEW EXECUTIVE ORDER ISSUED

Executive Order 11491, signed by President Nixon on October 29 and due to take effect January 1, 1970, will make "sweeping changes for improving the federal labor-management relations program," according to the White House. The new order replaces President Kennedy's Executive Order 10988.

White House sources added that the new document will "substantially strengthen the federal labor relations system by bringing it more into line with practices in the private sector of the economy."

Eight major changes are included in the order:

- A Federal Labor Relations Council (FLRC) will administer the program outlined in the order, prescribe regulations, and serve as a final appeals body on all labor-management issues except negotiation impasses. This central authority will consist of the chairman of the Civil Service Commission, the Secretary of Labor, an Executive Office official, and other executive branch officials the President may appoint.
- A second organization and FLRC agency, the Federal Service Impasse Panel, will be authorized to consider, provide recommendations, or settle negotiation impasses when mediation and other voluntary efforts fail. The parties involved may use arbitration or third party fact-finding as a means of assisting in the resolution of an impasse only when directed or authorized by the panel. This body will consist of at least three members appointed by the President.
- The new order abolishes formal and informal recognition, as well as national formal recognition. However, labor organizations which qualify under standards to be determined by the FLRC may be granted national consultation rights. No labor organization already holding exclusive recognition at the national level shall be accorded national consultation rights. Exclusive recognition no longer will be a product of a showing of majority membership, for the new order requires secret ballot elections in all cases.
- The Assistant Secretary of Labor for Labor-Management Relations will decide questions about the appropriate exclusive recognition unit, supervise and certify elections determining an exclusive recognition unit, and decide questions concerning the eligibility of labor organizations for national consultation rights.
- Final authority for resolving complaints within agencies about unfair labor practices, grievances, and standards of conduct for employee organizations will now reside with the FLRC and the Assistant Secretary, instead of agency heads.
- The exclusive employee representative may negotiate a grievance procedure which is the only procedure available to unit employees, if the agreement so provides.
- Exclusive recognition for units of supervisors is terminated by the new order, and will be replaced by agency systems for "intra-management communication and consultation with its supervisors or associations of supervisors."
- Government unions will now be subject to financial reporting and disclosure requirements similar to those found in the private sector.

The full text of the President's order is printed in the "Texts" section of this issue of the DIGEST.

BOARD FINDINGS AND RULINGS

MICHIGAN

CRITICAL REMARKS RULED HARMLESS

The Michigan Labor Mediation Board ruled that a college administrator's remarks on the competence of a faculty bargaining agent were not serious enough to form the basis for an unfair labor practices charge.

An agent for the Macomb County Community College Faculty Organization, who had inquired about "discrepancies" in the college's interpretation of faculty insurance policies, objected to portions of an administrator's reply which characterized the inquiry as misinformed and uncomprehending.

The trial examiner said some of the administrator's remarks might be construed as "injudicious and imprudent." But he ruled that the entire reply was "hardly more than an honest reply to a question, and cannot seriously be considered as a calculated, coercive attempt on the part of the college administration to undermine the union by belittling the bargaining agent." (Matter of Board of Trustees of the Community College District of the County of Macomb and Macomb County Community College Faculty Organization, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, September 9, 1969).

NEW JERSEY

OPEN-ENDED CONTRACT NO BAR TO ELECTION

A New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission decision found that an existing contract with no termination date and only a pledge to negotiate in the future is open-ended, and therefore no bar to a representation election.

The commission's ruling resulted when officials of the Port Authority Transit Corporation (PATCO), a state agency falling within the definition of "public employer," refused to recognize any employee representatives as the exclusive representative of certain PATCO employees.

Citing a portion of the state's Employer-Employee Act which says that "the best interests of the people of the State are served by the prevention or prompt settlement of labor disputes," the commission ruled that open-ended contracts are incapable of fostering the employer-employee peace outlined by the act. (Matter of Port Authority Transit Corporation and Teamsters Local Union 676, New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission, September 23, 1969).

OHIO

SCHOOL BOARD MAY ENTER COLLECTIVE BARGAINING AGREEMENT

A three-pronged, binding decision rendered by an Ohio arbitrator established the implied authority of the Toledo Board of Education to enter into a collective bargaining agreement with the Toledo Federation of Teachers, Local 250.

The arbitrator found that an existing collective bargaining agreement between the parties resulted from policies adopted by the board during October 1968 negotiations with Local 250 over the working conditions of local teaching employees. Article II of the agreement outlined a three-step grievance procedure with arbitration as the final step, and the parties agreed in May of 1969—over and above the agreement's provisions—that the arbitrator's decision would be "final and binding."

During arbitration, however, the board contended that its previous recognition of Local 250 as the exclusive bargaining agent of its teachers was "beyond the scope of its authority," thus making the policy agreement "null and void." The arbitrator ruled:

> Where state law [empowers] a school board to enter into contracts, to engage the services of teachers under limited and continuing contracts, and to discharge continuing contract teachers for cause, there is no statutory prohibition against entering into a collective bargaining agreement with the representative organization of teachers, in addition to the individual teacher contracts, over work conditions so long as the collective agreement does not alter the terms of individual contracts.

The case arose when the grievant, a probationary teacher hired under a limited contract for the 1968-69 school year, objected to the board's refusal to renew his contract for the 1969-70 school year. According to the Teacher Tenure Act of Ohio, boards of education may enter into limited contracts "with each teacher who has not been in the employ of the Board for at least three years."

Any teacher employed under a limited contract and not eligible to be considered for a continuing contract is, at the expiration of such limited contract, deemed re-employed under the provisions of this section . . . unless the employing Board, acting on the Superintendent's recommendation as to whether or not the teacher should be re-employed, give[s] such teacher written notice of its intention not to re-employ him on or before the 30th day of April.

The statute establishes no standards for deciding whether to renew the limited contract of a probationary teacher, so the Toledo Board argued that it could refuse "to renew the contract of a probationary teacher for any reason or for no reason."

The arbitrator noted, however, that the Toledo Board had established a Teacher Personnel Office empowered to "evaluate probationary teachers employed under a limited contract" by means of a series of standardized Evaluation Documents. And he ruled that since the board had statutory discretion over the renewal of probationary teacher contracts, it had the implied right to determine criteria for evaluating those employees:

Such governmental agencies have many powers which are not specifically delegated by the Legislature but which are necessarily implied from the general directives contained in the enabling legislation. To indulge in the presumption that because the Legislature did not establish criteria for the evaluation of probationary teachers before renewal of their teaching contracts, it intended that Boards of Education should refuse to renew such contracts for no reason or for reasons other than the efficient operation of the school system and quality education for the children of the state is tantamount to presuming that the Legislature did not intend to establish an effective and workable system of public education.

Written evaluations of the grievant's teaching performance were made on six different occasions during the 1968-69 school year; the third and sixth documents were filed with the Teacher Personnel Office. And the sixth and final evaluation contained a recommendation that the grievant's contract not be renewed on the basis of "certain alleged deficiencies in teaching skills and improper behavior of the grievant."

In an examination of the evaluation forms, the arbitrator found that they "yielded a generally satisfactory performance evaluation." He also observed that the grievant had participated in a one-day work stoppage in January 1969, had "displayed a lack of discretion and good judgment" in handling several students, and had been "slow to act on the recommendations of his evaluator."

The criteria for evaluation state that a teacher who receives a majority of satisfactory ratings in his evaluations "is to be considered for future employment." As such, the arbitrator concluded:

the performance of the grievant as a teacher should be and apparently was fully encompassed in the evaluations filed with the Teacher Personnel Office . . . . The decision of the evaluator to recommend that the grievant's contract not be renewed is contrary to the written evaluations prepared by him and not in accord with the Criteria for Evaluation of First and Second Year Teachers of the Teacher Personnel Office of the Board.

In addition, the arbitrator decided that various detrimental "incidents" in which the grievant had been involved "do not justify the recommendations to the Board and the Board action declining to renew the contract of the grievant."

The arbitrator ruled that the grievant be reinstated as a probationary teacher with the Toledo Board of Education, although the grievant's partial fault in the matter did not entitle him to reimbursement for lost back pay. (Toledo Board of Education and Toledo Federation of Teachers, October 20, 1969).

NEGOTIATION NOTES

GEORGIA

BARGAINING LAW RULED UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The Supreme Court of Georgia declared unconstitutional a 1968 bargaining statute on grounds that it is a "special law" in conflict with a 1962 general law having state-wide application.

The high court's decision hinged upon a provision in the state constitution that "no special law shall be enacted in any case for which provision has been made by an existing general law."

In striking down the 1968 special law, which granted collective bargaining rights to Chatham County and city of Savannah public employees, the court ruled that powers delegated to the city by the 1962 general law were "full and complete," and did not require the city to bargain collectively.

The ruling derived from a petition by the International Association of Fire Fighters Local 574 to require the city of Savannah to recognize an employee labor organization and bargain collectively with it.

NORTH CAROLINA

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE AGREEMENT ILLEGAL

An opinion filed by the attorney general of North Carolina prohibits the Greensboro Housing Authority from entering into any bargaining contract or agreement with a labor organization representing any Housing Authority public employees.

The ruling adhered to a state general statute which declares "illegal and void" any agreement between an agency of the state and a labor union serving as a bargaining agent for the public employees of that agency.

NORTH DAKOTA

FACT-FINDING GUIDELINES PROPOSED

A set of bargaining guidelines proposed for use by the North Dakota Fact-Finding Commission has been announced, although commission members say they are open to suggestions for modifications.

The commission, established under the state's new teacher negotiation law, is to be used only when local level mediation procedures fail, and its findings are not binding.

The procedures are as follows:

1. Written notification of an impasse from the board and teachers' organization
2. Commission acknowledgment of the notice
3. Submission of a statement of problems by both sides to the commission
4. Submission of a "fee of good faith" which is charged to ensure that all other means of agreement have been tried
5. Commission securance of independent reports on the problem from community members
6. Designation of a commission member or other individual to gather the facts involved
7. Private consideration of the facts presented by both sides
8. Public announcement of the facts if the impasse remains

The commission emphasized that neither side involved in negotiations may make any statements to the press once notice is served to the commission. Also, commission meetings with both sides will be considered executive sessions in order to bar the press.

OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST

MEDIATORS CHALLENGED BY CHANGING BARGAINING ENVIRONMENT

In an address outlining major areas of change in the collective bargaining arena, J. Curtis Counts, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service (FCMS), emphasized that "it is the policy of the present Administration to make collective bargaining work and to minimize governmental intervention.

"No longer can the parties at the bargaining table in national-interest bargaining situations look to the government or someone else to 'get them off the hook' should bargaining become deadlocked," he said.

In addition to this first area of change, Counts discussed four others:

- The rapidly expanding scope of the collective bargaining environment, particularly in the public sector, is laden with problems found by FCMS to be "generally susceptible" to solution through mediation.

- Increasing concern with social issues constitutes perhaps the most important area of bargaining change, but third-party demands are complicating the labor-management bargaining process.
- Economic factors in general and inflation in particular are of primary importance to the current bargaining climate. Counts said the Administration's policy is to "reach this problem [inflation] through fiscal controls and without resort to guidelines, wage and price controls, and other regulatory measures."
- Work stoppages and the increasing number of negotiated settlement rejections constitute one of today's greatest mediation problems. Counts said the "impact of such rejections on the bargaining process is immeasurable," and added that the amount of lost time in 1970 will be "monumental" if stoppages increase at the current rate.

PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT SECTOR SLATED FOR RESEARCH

Geoffrey H. Moore, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, has named labor-management relations in the public employment sector as a long-range research concern of the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

Explaining that employment rates in state and local governments are greater than in any other major segment of the economy, Moore said all government employee organizations "are faced with problems of negotiation and dispute settlement in which they have had relatively little, if any, experience."

Moore said BLS will attempt to aid all parties involved in public employment bargaining by establishing "a collection of bargaining agreements covering federal and other public employees and [undertaking] a series of studies of their provisions, focusing on grievance issues and the way they are handled, arbitration, and resolution of contract impasses."

GREATER FEDERAL INVOLVEMENT NEEDED

Labor Secretary George P. Schultz constructed his concept of federal involvement in federal and state public employee negotiations on the premise that "the number and nature of these negotiations has national impact and . . . a federal policy of non-involvement is no longer satisfactory."

Schultz suggested three roles the federal government can undertake in the negotiations field: providing impartial fact-finders and mediators, collecting and disseminating data derived from existing public employee bargaining agreements, and providing research for use in developing workable public employee negotiation systems.

But he emphasized that expansion of federal services such as those provided by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service "will have to be a function of the state and local units themselves."

STATISTICS

PROVISIONS FOR PAID LEAVES OF ABSENCE IN COMPREHENSIVE AGREEMENTS

A newly published report[1] by the NEA Research Division indicates that 91.2 percent of the 603 comprehensive negotiation agreements in NEA Research Division files contain paid leaves of absence provisions. These agreements are recorded in 15 states and the District of Columbia.

Statistics on paid short-term and extended leaves of absence contained in comprehensive agreements were derived from the Research Division's 1967-68 negotiation survey of more than 7,000 school systems enrolling 1,000 or more pupils. In 586 of the 603 comprehensive agreements, the bargaining units included classroom teachers and represented a total of 299,781 professional personnel. The remaining 17 comprehensive agreements covered 3,915 administrators, supervisors, and other paraprofessional personnel.

[1] Paid Leave Provisions for Teachers in Negotiation Agreements. Research Report 1969-R9. 95 p. $1.75. #435-22884.

Almost 90 percent of the 603 comprehensive agreements included some type of negotiated short-term leave provisions, and a similar percentage contained cumulative short-term leave provisions. Annual short-term leave granted amounted to 10-14 days in 71.1 percent of the provisions, with a maximum accumulation of 90 days or more in 69.3 percent of the provisions. A majority of the agreements provided 1 to 10 days' additional leave in excess of the annual allowance. And more than 50 percent of the agreements annually allotted at least 15 leave days for various absences.

Short-term leave provisions most often reported included those for sick leave (89.1 percent), personal business (68.3 percent), and bereavement leave (56.7 percent). Modal numbers of days annually allowed for these leaves were 10 days of sick leave (59.2 percent), 2 days for personal business (39.1 percent), and 5 days for bereavement leave (45.9 percent). Approximately two-thirds of the leave provisions for personal business, bereavement leave, and religious holidays were separate from annual, cumulative short-term leave provisions.

Sabbatical leave was reported in 40.5 percent of the comprehensive agreements, and consisted most often of 2 semesters at part pay. Paid long-term sick leaves—those extending beyond the maximum accumulation—were covered by provisions contained in 16.1 percent of the agreements, although most extended sick leave provisions with full or part pay were left undefined regarding the length of time of continuous payments. Sick leave banks were provided for in 31 of the comprehensive agreements.

A table summarizing the number and percentage of comprehensive agreements containing provisions for various types of leaves of absence with full or part pay follows.

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURES

Data collected in the NEA Research Division's 1967-68 negotiation survey revealed that the number of comprehensive agreements containing grievance procedures represented an increase of 55.8 percent over the number reported in 1966-67. At the same time, the number of comprehensive agreements collected increased 51.5 percent.[1]

The number of grievance procedures containing provisions for final appeal to a party outside the school system remained at about 84 percent during the two years. But a 10 percent rise appeared in 1967-68 in the number of procedures providing for binding decision in a final appeal outside the system; procedures calling for advisory decision in an outside final appeal fell 10 percentage points in that year. Of the 603 comprehensive agreements for 1967-68 in NEA Research Division files, 53 percent provide for binding decision, and approximately 47 percent provide for advisory decision.

A shift also occurred in the designation by grievance procedures of an impartial third party for outside appeal. Seven sources of third party assistance were identified in the negotiation survey: parties specifically named in the agreement (named), parties jointly selected by the parties to the agreement (joint), state departments or commissioners of education (education), state public employee or labor boards (labor), the U. S. Mediation and Conciliation Service (USMCS), the American Arbitration Association (AAA), and "other."

In 1966-67, 47 percent of the procedures designated state public employee or labor boards for outside appeal, and 38 percent named the AAA. But comparable percentages for 1967-68 indicate approximately 40 percent for public employee or labor boards, and approximately 45 percent for the AAA. Over 60 percent of the agreements providing for advisory decision by an outside party specify the state public employee or labor board, while more than 68 percent of the agreements providing for binding grievance decision by an outside party designate the AAA.

The following table summarizes the distribution of grievance procedures among the various third parties identified for outside final appeal, and indicates whether the decision rendered by each party is advisory or binding. Comparative figures are derived from negotiation surveys taken during the 1966-67 and 1967-68 school years, and are based upon 398 comprehensive agreements in 1966-67, and 603 comprehensive agreements in 1967-68.

CONTRACT AGREEMENT

STONEHAM SCHOOL COMMITTEE
AND
STONEHAM TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

SCHOOL COMMITTEE CODE OF ETHICS
(As approved at the Annual Meeting, Massachusetts Association of School Committees, May 22, 1964)

PREAMBLE

The acceptance of a Code of Ethics implies the understanding of the basic organization of School Committees under the Laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The oath of office of a School Committee member binds the individual member to adherence to those State Laws which apply to School Committees, since School Committees are Agencies of the State.

AREAS OF RESPONSIBILITY

This Code of Ethics delineates three areas of responsibility of School Committee members in addition to that implied in the preamble: (1) community responsibility; (2) responsibility to school administration; and (3) relationship to fellow committee members.

1. A School Committee member in his relations with his community should:
   a. Realize that his primary responsibility is to the children.
   b. Recognize that his basic function is to be policy making and not administrative.
   c. Remember that he is one of a team and must abide by, and carry out, all committee decisions once they are made.
   d. Be well informed concerning the duties of a committee member on both a local and state level.
   e. Remember that he represents the entire community at all times.
   f. Accept the office as a committee member as a means of unselfish service with no intent to "play politics," in any sense of the word, or to benefit personally from his committee activities.
2. A School Committee member in his relations with his school administration should:
   a. Endeavor to establish sound, clearly-defined policies which will direct and support the administration.
   b. Recognize and support the administrative chain of command and refuse to act on complaints as an individual outside the administration.
   c. Act only on the recommendations of the chief administrator in all matters of employment or dismissal of school personnel.
   d. Give the chief administrator full responsibility for discharging his professional duties and hold him responsible for acceptable results.
   e. Refer all complaints to the administrative staff for solution and only discuss them at committee meetings if such solutions fail.
3. A School Committee member in his relations to his fellow Committee members should:
   a. Recognize that action at official meetings is binding and that he alone cannot bind the committee outside of such meetings.
   b. Realize that he should not make statements or promises of how he will vote on matters that will come before the committee.
   c. Uphold the intent of executive sessions and respect the privileged communication that exists in executive sessions.
   d. Not withhold pertinent information on school matters or personal problems, either from members of his own committee or from members of other committees who may be seeking help and information on school problems.
   e. Make decisions only after all facts on a question have been presented and discussed.

During summer recess, notices shall be distributed to the staff by mail.

(2) Such notices shall be posted as far in advance as possible, ordinarily at least thirty (30) days before the final date when applications must be submitted, and in no event less than two weeks before such date.

(3) Teachers who desire to apply for such vacancies shall submit their applications in writing to the District Principal, or his authorized agent, within the time limit specified in the notice.

(4) Such vacancies shall be filled on the basis of qualifications for the vacant post, provided, however, that where there are two or more applicants who are equally qualified, in the opinion of the District Principal, seniority in the Port Jefferson Station School System shall prevail. When a promotion or assignment is denied a teacher, that teacher will be entitled, upon request, to an explanation from the District Principal or his representative.

B. All appointments to the aforesaid vacancies and openings shall be made without regard to age, race, creed, color, religion, nationality, sex, or marital status.

C. Voluntary Transfers and Assignments

(1) No later than March 1st of each school year, the District Principal shall post in all school buildings a list of the known vacancies which will occur during the following school year.

Such statement shall include the grade and/or subject to which the teacher desires to be assigned and the school or schools to which he desires to be transferred, in order of preference.

(3) No later than May 10th of each school year, the District Principal shall post in all school buildings, a supplemental list of known vacancies which will occur during the following school year.

If more than one teacher has applied for the same position, the teacher best qualified for that position shall be appointed, and qualifications being substantially equal in the opinion of the District Principal, seniority in the school system shall prevail. When a position is filled, the District Principal shall promptly advise all unsuccessful applicants for the position.

D. Involuntary Transfer and Assignments—The Port Jefferson Station Teachers Association recognizes that some involuntary transfer of teachers from one school to another or reassignment within a school is unavoidable. They also recognize that under normal circumstances, transfer or reassignment of teachers should be held to a minimum. Therefore:

(1) Notice of an involuntary transfer or reassignment shall be given to teachers as soon as practicable and, under normal circumstances, no later than June 15th. The district will make every effort to provide such information by May 1st.

(2) When involuntary transfer or reassignment is necessary, volunteers from among those affected will be transferred or reassigned first. A teacher's area of certification, major and/or minor field of study, quality of teaching performance, and length of service in the school system will be considered in determining which teacher is to be transferred or reassigned.

(3) An involuntary transfer or reassignment will be made only after a meeting between the teacher involved and the District Principal, at which time the teacher will be notified of the reasons therefor. In the event that a teacher objects to the transfer or reassignment at this meeting, upon the request of the teacher, the Association will be notified and the District Principal will meet with the Association's representative to discuss the matter.

(4) Openings in the school system will be discussed with the teachers being involuntarily transferred or reassigned. Such teachers may request the positions to which they desire to be transferred. Teachers being involuntarily transferred or reassigned shall have preference over those seeking voluntary transfer or reassignment. In consideration of involuntary transfers, those best qualified for a particular position shall receive priority, and, qualifications being substantially equal, seniority in the school system shall prevail.

(5) The District Principal shall discuss with the Association, information pertaining to individual reassignments and/or transfers.

RECOGNITION

Section 7. Recognition in general.

(a) An agency shall accord exclusive recognition or national consultation rights at the request of a labor organization which meets the requirements for the recognition or consultation rights under this Order.

(b) A labor organization seeking recognition shall submit to the agency a roster of its officers and representatives, a copy of its constitution and by-laws, and a statement of its objectives.

(c) When recognition of a labor organization has been accorded, the recognition continues as long as the organization continues to meet the requirements of this Order applicable to that recognition, except that this section does not require an election to determine whether an organization should become, or continue to be recognized as, exclusive representative of the employees in any unit or subdivision thereof within 12 months after a prior valid election with respect to such unit.

(d) Recognition, in whatever form accorded, does not—

(1) preclude an employee, regardless of whether he is a member of a labor organization, from bringing matters of personal concern to the attention of appropriate officials under applicable law, rule, regulations, or established agency policy; or from choosing his own representative in a grievance or appellate action;

(2) preclude or restrict consultations and dealings between an agency and a veterans organization with respect to matters of particular interest to employees with veterans preference; or

(3) preclude an agency from consulting or dealing with a religious, social, fraternal, or other lawful association, not qualified as a labor organization, with respect to matters or policies which involve individual members of the association or are of particular applicability to it or its members.

Consultations and dealings under subparagraph (3) of this paragraph shall be so limited that they do not assume the character of formal consultation on matters of general employee-management policy, except as provided in paragraph (e) of this section. or extend to areas where recognition of the interests of one employee group may result in discrimination against or injury to the interests of other employees.

(e) An agency shall establish a system for intra-management communication and consultation with its supervisors or associations of supervisors. The communications and consultations shall have as their purposes the improvement of agency operations, the improvement of working conditions of supervisors, the exchange of information, the improvement of managerial effectiveness, and the establishment of policies that best serve the public interest in accomplishing the mission of the agency.

(f) Informal recognition shall not be accorded after the date of this Order.

Section 8. Formal Recognition.

(a) Formal recognition, including formal recognition at the national level, shall not be accorded after the date of this Order.

(b) An agency shall continue any formal recognition, including formal recognition at the national level, accorded a labor organization before the date of this Order until—

(1) the labor organization ceases to be eligible under this Order for formal recognition so accorded;

(2) a labor organization is accorded exclusive recognition as representative of employees in the unit to which the formal recognition applies; or

(3) the formal recognition is terminated under regulations prescribed by the Federal Labor Relations Council.

(c) When a labor organization holds formal recognition, it is the representative of its members in a unit as defined by the agency when recognition was accorded. The agency, through appropriate officials, shall consult with representatives of the organization from time to time in the and implementation of personnel policies and practices, and matters affecting working conditions that affect members of the organization in the unit to which the formal recognition applies. The organization is entitled from time to time to raise such matters for discussion with appropriate officials and at all times to present its views thereon in writing. The agency is not required to consult with the labor organization on any matter on which it would not be required to meet and confer if the labor organization were entitled to exclusive recognition.

Section 9. National consultation rights.

(a) An agency shall accord national consultation rights to a labor organization which qualifies under criteria established by the Federal Labor Relations Council as the representative of a substantial number of employees of the agency. National consultation rights shall not be accorded for any unit where a labor organization already holds exclusive recognition at the national level for that unit. The granting of national consultation rights does not preclude an agency from appropriate dealings at the national level with other organizations on matters affecting their members. An agency shall terminate national consultation rights when the labor organization ceases to qualify under the established criteria.

(b) When a labor organization has been accorded national consultation rights, the agency, through appropriate officials, shall notify representatives of the organization of proposed substantive changes in personnel policies that affect employees it represents and provide an opportunity for the organization to comment on the proposed changes. The labor organization may suggest changes in the agency's personnel policies and have its views carefully considered. It may confer in person at reasonable times, on request, with appropriate officials on personnel policy matters, and at all times present its views thereon in writing. An agency is not required to consult with a labor organization on any matter on which it would not be required to meet and confer if the organization were entitled to exclusive recognition.

(c) Questions as to the eligibility of labor organizations for national consultation rights may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

Section 10. Exclusive recognition.

(a) An agency shall accord exclusive recognition to a labor organization when the organization has been selected, in a secret ballot election, by a majority of the employees in an appropriate unit as their representative.

(b) A unit may be established on a plant or installation, craft, functional, or other basis which will ensure a clear and identifiable community of interest among the employees concerned and will promote effective dealings and efficiency of agency operations. A unit shall not be established solely on the basis of the extent to which employees in the proposed unit have organized, nor shall a unit be established if it includes—

(1) any management official or supervisor, except as provided in section 24;

(2) an employee engaged in Federal personnel work in other than a purely clerical capacity;

(3) any guard together with other employees; or

(4) both professional and nonprofessional employees, unless a majority of the professional employees vote for inclusion in the unit.

Questions as to the appropriate unit and related issues may be referred to the Assistant Secretary for decision.

(c) An agency shall not accord exclusive recognition to a labor organization as the representative of employees in a unit of guards if the organization admits to membership, or is affiliated directly or indirectly with an organization which admits to membership, employees other than guards.

(d) All elections shall be conducted under the supervision of the Assistant Secretary, or persons designated by him, and shall be by secret ballot. Each employee eligible to vote shall be provided the opportunity to choose the labor organization he wishes to represent him, from among those on the ballot, or "no union." Elections may be held to determine whether—

(1) a labor organization should be recognized as the exclusive representative of employees in a unit;

(2) a labor organization should replace another labor organization as the exclusive representative; or

(3) a labor organization should cease to be the exclusive representative.

(e) When a labor organization has been accorded exclusive recognition, it is the exclusive representative of employees in the unit and is entitled to act for and to negotiate agreements covering all employees in the unit. It is responsible for representing the interests of all employees in the unit without discrimination and without regard to labor organization membership. The labor organization shall be given the opportunity to be represented at formal discussions between management and employees or employee representatives concerning grievances, personnel policies and practices, or other matters affecting general working conditions of employees in the unit.

AGREEMENTS

(a) An agency and a labor organization that has been accorded exclusive recognition, through appropriate representatives, shall meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to personnel policies and practices and matters affecting working conditions, so far as may be appropriate under applicable laws and regulations, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual, published agency policies and regulations, a national or other controlling agreement at a higher level in the agency, and this Order. They may negotiate an agreement, or any question arising thereunder; determine appropriate techniques, consistent with section 17 of this Order, to assist in such negotiation; and execute a written agreement or memorandum of understanding.

(b) In prescribing regulations relating to personnel policies and practices and working conditions, an agency shall have due regard for the obligation imposed by paragraph (a) of this section. However, the obligation to meet and confer does not include matters with respect to the mission of an agency; its budget; its organization; the number of employees; and the numbers, types, and grades of positions or employees assigned to an organizational unit, work project or tour of duty; the technology of performing its work; or its internal security practices. This does not preclude the parties from negotiating agreements providing appropriate arrangements for employees adversely affected by the impact of realignment of work forces or technological change.

(c) If, in connection with negotiations, an issue develops as to whether a proposal is contrary to law, regulation, controlling agreement, or this Order and therefore not negotiable, it shall be resolved as follows:

(1) An issue which involves interpretation of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level is resolved under the procedures of the controlling agreement, or, if none, under agency regulations;

(2) An issue other than as described in subparagraph (1) of this paragraph which arises at a local level may be referred by either party to the head of the agency for determination;

(3) An agency head's determination as to the interpretation of the agency's regulations with respect to a proposal is final;

(4) A labor organization may appeal to the Council for a decision when—

(i) it disagrees with an agency head's determination that a proposal would violate applicable law, regulation of appropriate authority outside the agency, or this Order, or

(ii) it believes that an agency's regulations, as interpreted by the agency head, violate applicable law, regulation of appropriate authority outside the agency, or this Order.

Section 12. Basic provisions of agreements.

Each agreement between an agency and a labor organization is subject to the following requirements—

(a) in the administration of all matters covered by the agreement, officials and employees are governed by existing or future laws and the regulations of appropriate authorities, including policies set forth in the Federal Personnel Manual; by published agency policies and regulations in existence at the time the agreement was approved; and by subsequently published agency policies and regulations required by law or by the regulations of appropriate authorities, or authorized by the terms of a controlling agreement at a higher agency level;

(b) management officials of the agency retain the right, in accordance with applicable laws and regulations—

(1) to direct employees of the agency;

(2) to hire, promote, transfer, assign, and retain employees in positions within the agency, and to suspend, demote, discharge, or take other disciplinary action against employees;

(3) to relieve employees from duties because of lack of work or for other legitimate reasons;

(4) to maintain the efficiency of the Government operations entrusted to them;

(5) to determine the methods, means, and personnel by which such operations are to be conducted; and

(6) to take whatever actions may be necessary to carry out the mission of the agency in situations of emergency; and

(c) nothing in the agreement shall require an employee to become or to remain a member of a labor organization, or to pay money to the organization except pursuant to a voluntary, written authorization by a member for the payment of dues through payroll deductions.

The requirements of this section shall be expressly stated in the initial or basic agreement and apply to all supplemental, implementing, subsidiary, or informal agreements between the agency and the organization.

Section 13. Grievance procedures.

An agreement with a labor organization which is the exclusive representative of employees in an appropriate unit may provide procedures, applicable only to employees in the unit, for the consideration of employee grievances and of disputes over the interpretation and application of agreements. The procedure for consideration of employee grievances shall meet the requirements for negotiated grievance procedures established by the Civil Service Commission. A negotiated employee grievance procedure which conforms to this section, to applicable laws, and to regulations of the Civil Service Commission and the agency is the exclusive procedure available to employees in the unit when the agreement so provides.

Section 14. Arbitration of grievances.

(a) Negotiated procedures may provide for the arbitration of employee grievances and of disputes over the interpretation or application of existing agreements. Negotiated procedures may not extend arbitration to changes or proposed changes in agreements or agency policy. Such procedures shall provide for the invoking of arbitration only with the approval of the labor organization that has exclusive recognition and, in the case of an employee grievance, only with the approval of the employee. The costs of the arbitrator shall be shared equally by the parties.

(b) Either party may file exceptions to an arbitrator's award with the Council, under regulations prescribed by the Council.

Section 15. Approval of agreements.

An agreement with a labor organization as the exclusive representative of employees in a unit is subject to the approval of the head of the agency or an official designated by him. An agreement shall be approved if it conforms to applicable laws, existing published agency policies and regulations (unless the agency has granted an exception to a policy or regulation) and regulations of other appropriate authorities. A local agreement subject to a national or other controlling agreement at a higher level shall be approved under the procedures of the controlling agreement, or, if none, under agency regulations.

NEGOTIATION DISPUTES AND IMPASSES

Section 16. Negotiation disputes.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service shall provide services and assistance to Federal agencies and labor organizations in the resolution of negotiation disputes. The Service shall determine under what circumstances and in what manner it shall proffer its services.

Section 17. Negotiation impasses.

When voluntary arrangements, including the services of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service or other third-party mediation, fail to resolve a negotiation impasse, either party may request the Federal Service Impasses Panel to consider the matter. The Panel, in its discretion and under the regulations it prescribes, may consider the matter and may recommend procedures to the parties for the resolution of the impasse or may settle the impasse by appropriate action. Arbitration or third-party fact finding with recommendations to assist in the resolution of an impasse may be used by the parties only when authorized or directed by the Panel.

CONDUCT OF LABOR ORGANIZATIONS AND MANAGEMENT

Section 18. Standards of conduct for labor organizations.

(a) An agency shall accord recognition only to a labor organization that is free from corrupt influences and influences opposed to basic democratic principles. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this section, an organization is not required to prove that it has the required freedom when it is subject to governing requirements adopted by the organization or by a national or international labor organization or federation of labor organizations with which it is affiliated or in which it participates, containing explicit and detailed provisions to which it subscribes calling for—

(1) the maintenance of democratic procedures and practices, including provisions for periodic elections to be conducted subject to recognized safeguards and provisions defining and securing the right of individual members to participation in the affairs of the organization, to fair and equal treatment under the governing rules of the organization, and to fair process in disciplinary proceedings;

(2) the exclusion from office in the organization of persons affiliated with Communist or other totalitarian movements and persons identified with corrupt influences;

(3) the prohibition of business or financial interests on the part of organization officers and agents which conflict with their duty to the organization and its members; and

(4) the maintenance of fiscal integrity in the conduct of the affairs of the organization, including provision for accounting and financial controls and regular financial reports or summaries to be made available to members.

(b) Notwithstanding the fact that a labor organization has adopted or subscribed to standards of conduct as provided in paragraph (a) of this section, the organization is required to furnish evidence of its freedom from corrupt influences or influences opposed to basic democratic principles when there is reasonable cause to believe that—

(1) the organization has been suspended or expelled from or is subject to other sanction by a parent labor organization or federation of organizations with which it had been affiliated because it has demonstrated an unwillingness or inability to comply with governing requirements comparable in purpose to those required by paragraph (a) of this section; or

(2) the organization is in fact subject to influences that would preclude recognition under this Order.

(c) A labor organization which has or seeks recognition as a representative of employees under this Order shall file financial and other reports, provide for bonding of officials and employees of the organization, and comply with trusteeship and election standards.

(d) The Assistant Secretary shall prescribe the regulations needed to effectuate this section. These regulations shall conform generally to the principles applied to unions in the private sector. Complaints of violations of this section shall be filed with the Assistant Secretary.

Section 19. Unfair labor practices.

(a) Agency management shall not—

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of the rights assured by this Order;

(2) encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization by discrimination in regard to hiring, tenure, promotion, or other conditions of employment;

(3) sponsor, control, or otherwise assist a labor organization, except that an agency may furnish customary and routine services and facilities under section 23 of this Order when consistent with the best interests of the agency, its employees, and the organization, and when the services and facilities are furnished, if requested, on an impartial basis to organizations having equivalent status;

(4) discipline or otherwise discriminate against an employee because he has filed a complaint or given testimony under this Order;

(5) refuse to accord appropriate recognition to a labor organization qualified for such recognition; or

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with a labor organization as required by this Order.

(b) A labor organization shall not—

(1) interfere with, restrain, or coerce an employee in the exercise of his rights assured by this Order;

(2) attempt to induce agency management to coerce an employee in the exercise of his rights under this Order;

(3) coerce, attempt to coerce, or discipline, fine, or take other economic sanction against a member of the organization as punishment or reprisal for, or for the purpose of hindering or impeding his work performance, his productivity, or the discharge of his duties owed as an officer or employee of the United States;

(4) call or engage in a strike, work stoppage, or slowdown; picket an agency in a labor-management dispute; or condone any such activity by failing to take affirmative action to prevent or stop it;

(5) discriminate against an employee with regard to the terms or conditions of membership because of race, color, creed, sex, age, or national origin; or

(6) refuse to consult, confer, or negotiate with an agency as required by this Order.

(c) A labor organization which is accorded exclusive recognition shall not deny membership to any employee in the appropriate unit except for failure to meet reasonable occupational standards uniformly required for admission, or for failure to tender initiation fees and dues uniformly required as a condition of acquiring and retaining membership. This paragraph does not preclude a labor organization from enforcing discipline in accordance with procedures under its constitution or by-laws which conform to the requirements of this Order.

(d) When the issue in a complaint of an alleged violation of paragraph (a)(1), (2), or (4) of this section is subject to an established grievance or appeals procedure, that procedure is the exclusive procedure for resolving the complaint. All other complaints of alleged violations of this section initiated by an employee, an agency, or a labor organization, that cannot be resolved by the parties, shall be filed with the Assistant Secretary.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Section 20. Use of official time.

Solicitation of membership or dues, and other internal business of a labor organization, shall be conducted during the non-duty hours of the employees concerned. Employees who represent a recognized labor organization shall not be on official time when negotiating an agreement with agency management.

Section 21. Allotment of dues.

(a) When a labor organization holds formal or exclusive recognition, and the agency and the organization agree in writing to this course of action, an agency may deduct the regular and periodic dues of the organization from the pay of members of the organization in the unit of recognition who make a voluntary allotment for that purpose, and shall recover the costs of making the deductions. Such an allotment is subject to the regulations of the Civil Service Commission, which shall include provision for the employee to revoke his authorization at stated six-month intervals. Such an allotment terminates when—

(1) the dues withholding agreement between the agency and the labor organization is terminated or ceases to be applicable to the employee; or

(2) the employee has been suspended or expelled from the labor organization.

(b) An agency may deduct the regular and periodic dues of an association of management officials or supervisors from the pay of members of the association who make a voluntary allotment for that purpose, and shall recover the costs of making the deductions, when the agency and the association agree in writing to this course of action. Such an allotment is subject to the regulations of the Civil Service Commission.

Section 22. Adverse action appeals.

The head of each agency, in accordance with the provisions of this Order and regulations prescribed by the Civil Service Commission, shall extend to all employees in the competitive civil service rights identical in adverse action cases to those provided preference eligibles under sections 7511-7512 of title 5 of the United States Code. Each employee in the competitive service shall have the right to appeal to the Civil Service Commission from an adverse decision of the administrative officer so acting, such appeal to be processed in an identical manner to that provided for appeals under section 7701 of title 5 of the United States Code. Any recommendation by the Civil Service Commission submitted to the head of an agency on the basis of an appeal by an employee in the competitive service shall be complied with by the head of the agency.

Section 23. Agency implementation.

No later than April 1, 1970, each agency shall issue appropriate policies and regulations consistent with this Order for its implementation. This includes but is not limited to a clear statement of the rights of its employees under this Order; procedures with respect to recognition of labor organizations, determination of appropriate units, consultation and negotiation with labor organizations, approval of agreements, mediation, and impasse resolution; policies with respect to the use of agency facilities by labor organizations; and policies and practices regarding consultation with other organizations and associations and individual employees. Insofar as practicable, agencies shall consult with representatives of labor organizations in the formulation of these policies and regulations, other than those for the implementation of section 7(e) of this Order.

Section 24. Savings clauses.

(a) This Order does not preclude—

(1) the renewal or continuation of a lawful agreement between an agency and a representative of its employees entered into before the effective date of Executive Order No. 10988 (January 17, 1962); or

(2) the renewal, continuation, or initial according of recognition for units of management officials or supervisors represented by labor organizations which historically or traditionally represent the management officials or supervisors in private industry and which hold exclusive recognition for units of such officials or supervisors in any agency on the date of this Order.

(b) All grants of informal recognition under Executive Order No. 10988 terminate on July 1, 1970.

(c) All grants of formal recognition under Executive Order No. 10988 terminate under regulations which the Federal Labor Relations Council shall issue before October 1, 1970.

(d) By not later than December 31, 1970, all supervisors shall be excluded from units of formal and exclusive recognition and from coverage by negotiated agreements, except as provided in paragraph (a) of this section.

Section 25. Guidance, training, review and information.

(a) The Civil Service Commission shall establish and maintain a program for the guidance of agencies on labor-management relations in the Federal service; provide technical advice and information to agencies; assist in the development of programs for training agency personnel and management officials in labor-management relations; continuously review the operation of the Federal labor-management relations program to assist in assuring adherence to its provisions and merit system requirements; and, from time to time, report to the Council on the state of the program with any recommendations for its improvement.

(b) The Department of Labor and Civil Service Commission shall develop programs for the collection and dissemination of information appropriate to the needs of agencies, organizations and the public.

Section 26. Effective date.

This Order is effective on January 1, 1970 except sections 7(f) and 8 which are effective immediately. Effective January 1, 1970, Executive Order No. 10988 and the President's Memorandum of May 21, 1963, entitled Standards of Conduct for Employee Organizations and Code of Fair Labor Practices, are revoked.

THE EVOLUTION OF A COLLECTIVE BARGAINING RELATIONSHIP IN PUBLIC EDUCATION: NEW YORK CITY'S CHANGING SEVEN-YEAR HISTORY

*Ida Klaus

I. EARLY FORCES

The bargaining relationship between the New York City Board of Education and its teachers had its roots in the social forces of the mid-fifties and its formal origins in the events of the early sixties. The relationship came about without benefit of law or executive policy. No law permitting public employees to bargain collectively was in effect anywhere in those years, and Mayor Wagner's 1958 Executive Order—the culmination of three years of study and public inquiry—did not apply to teachers.[1] Instead, the impetus came directly from the persistent and increasingly powerful drive of the teachers themselves. They demanded a substantial voice in the determination of their salaries and, through improvement of their working conditions, enhancement of their stature as professionals. Ignoring the prohibitions of state law, they chose the strike as their pressure technique.[2] Two work stoppages[3] in the 1959-60 period signaled three important facts: (1) that the teachers were grimly serious about obtaining im-

[1] Executive Order on City employee Relations (March 1958). This order covers only those city employees who were under the direct control of the Mayor. It established for those employees a system of labor relations similar in many fundamental respects to that prevailing under federal and state law for private workers. Although Board of Education employees were not among those who would be covered by the Mayor's program, two organizations representing New York City teachers nevertheless participated in the public hearings which led to the adoption of the order. The one, representing only high school teachers and since defunct; stressed the separate professional, rather than trade-union, interest of teachers. The other, since merged into the present dominant United Federation of Teachers, expressed the hope that the hearings would point the way to effective collective bargaining for all nonsupervisory pedagogical employees in a single unit. See I. Klaus, Report on a Program of Labor Relations for New York City Employees (New York City Department of Labor, June 1957).

[2] The so-called Condon-Wadlin Law, Law of March 27, 1947, ch. 391, [1947] N.Y. Laws 842, as amended, Law of April 23, 1963, ch. 702, [1963] N.Y. Laws 2432 (repealed 1967), adopted in 1947 as a part of the Civil Service Law, banned all strikes by public employees and imposed severe penalties upon individual workers for engaging in the proscribed conduct. The Governor's message accompanying his approval of the measure declared the philosophy underlying the legislation to be that the public service, in all its aspects, is "a public trust in behalf of all the people" and that "a trustee cannot strike or falter in the performance of his duties."

[3] The first strike, which lasted for about three and a half weeks in February 1959, was limited to evening high school teachers who sought an increase in their rates of pay.

The second strike was called on November 7, 1960, by the American Federation of Teachers affiliate and predecessor of the present United Federation of Teachers. It sought to obtain for the teachers' representatives some form of recognition in dealing with the Board on salaries and on the improvement of working conditions. The strike was terminated after one day when a three-man panel of prominent labor leaders was appointed to inquire into the basic causes of the strike and the areas of teacher dissatisfaction. Thereafter, the panel was to make recommendations for the improvement of teacher-Board relations. The panel recommended a policy and program for the recognition and participation of teacher organizations. For months thereafter, the Board refused to declare and implement an unequivocal policy. Instead, it sought by various means to ascertain preliminarily the sentiments of its teachers and other pedagogical employees. Finally, in June 1961, it formulated a proposed policy for collective bargaining founded upon exclusive recognition of a bargaining agent chosen by the majority of employees. The policy was to become operative, however, only if it were established in a referendum that a majority of employees actually wished to have collective bargaining. Over 70 per cent of those participating in the preliminary referendum voted in favor of collective bargaining as defined by the Board. See 1962-1963 Agreement Between The Board of Education of the City of New York and United Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Covering Classroom Teachers (signed Oct. 18, 1962) (a copy of this agreement is on file with the Michigan Law Review).

provements in their welfare; (2) that they were strongly determined to achieve those improvements through collective bargaining by a duly chosen representative; and (3) that they would not tolerate further vague promises and tactical delays by the City Board of Education.

A. Basic Attitudes and First Steps

In 1961, a newly constituted and appointed New York City School Board gave highest priority to meeting the teachers' requests. Within a few months, the new Board had declared a clear policy of exclusive recognition for collective bargaining purposes; had implemented that policy by formal hearing and election procedures; had overcome earlier obstacles to determining appropriate bargaining units, voting eligibility requirements, and qualifications for organization participation; and had recognized the employees' majority choice, the United Federation of Teachers, Local 2, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO,[4] as the exclusive bargaining representative of all classroom teachers.[5]

Then, early in 1962, the Board of Education and the Union took the first steps toward establishing what is now probably the most advanced and critical collective bargaining relationship anywhere in public education, if not in the public service generally. The relationship—and especially the collective bargaining agreements by which it has been governed—have served as the model for school districts and other teacher groups.[6] Most teacher-board agreements in other large cities which are executed as the result of negotiations are plainly molded in the image of the basic New York City parent agreement.[7]

The New York City relationship was founded as much on the solid commitment of the Board of Education to the conceptual and practical responsibilities of collective bargaining as it was on the firm dedication of the teacher leadership to the correspondingly full harvest of substantive and procedural advantages which collective bargaining was expected to bring. Thus, each side entered upon this novel joint endeavor with its own understanding of how both would work together to fashion a new employee-relations "constitution" to govern the special public enterprise of which they were a part. It is hard to say whether either party foresaw at that time how the dynamics of the continuing relationship and the shadows already cast by oncoming social changes would expand the framework of the "constitution" and foster the emergence of a solid "common law" of the enterprise.

Trial, conflict, and combat—resolved in the end by a basic determination on both sides to make the joint venture work—have marked the seven-year history of the relationship and shaped the characteristics it has assumed in the process of continuing growth and cautious adjustment. For the teachers, this seven-year history has been a story of how from the beginning they won important psychic and economic gains, and found new professional freedoms and security. For the Union, it has been a series of encounters in the teachers' behalf along the road to tremendous power in the administration of the school system. For the Board and the administrators, it has been an account of how they met new challenges to [4] This organization is referred to hereinafter as the Union, the United Federation of Teachers, or the UFT.

[5] The Board members turned the resolution of the representation question and all related matters over to the City Department of Labor. The two most difficult issues which had blocked a rational and expeditious application of the new policy in favor of exclusive recognition were the designation of an appropriate unit and the qualification of contending organizations to represent employees for bargaining. A system-wide unit of classroom teachers was found most conducive to the prompt and effective institution of collective bargaining. Contending organizations were deemed qualified if they met three basic tests: (1) nondiscriminatory admission to membership; (2) capacity to act as a collective bargaining representative for all employees involved; and (3) capacity and disposition to represent equally all within the unit. A mail-ballot election among the then approximately 40,000 teachers in the unit resulted in a majority vote for the United Federation of Teachers as against two other organizations and a "none" choice. For a more detailed account of the technical aspects of the resolution of the preliminary issues, see 1963 PROCEEDINGS OF THE AMERICAN BAR ASSOCIATION, SECTION OF LABOR RELATIONS LAW, REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON LAW OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEE RELATIONS.

[6] Upon the conclusion of the second agreement in 1963, the American Federation of Teachers prepared and distributed in other areas of the country a special bulletin entitled Collective Bargaining for Teachers—the New York City Contract. The bulletin pointed out the highlights of the new agreement and noted: "Teachers everywhere are studying the contract in expectation of future advancement in their own school districts."

[7] The model has been followed by both American Federation of Teachers and National Education Association affiliates. See, e.g., contracts in Detroit, Boston, Philadelphia (all American Federation of Teachers affiliates) and Newark, New Jersey, and New Haven, Connecticut (the former a National Education Association constituent and the latter a National Education Association constituent for a time). established concepts and practices in the governance of the schools, and how they reshaped attitudes in the conduct of their relations with teachers. For the community, it has provided not merely a perennial source of anxiety about whether and when the schools would open, but also an impetus toward asserting its own separate interests in the outcome of the bargaining.

B. The Growing Process and the Stages of Evolution

The teacher-board relationship developed through three distinct but interrelated processes: (1) joint negotiation at the bargaining table by which the basic terms and conditions of teacher service are determined and then reduced to a written collective bargaining agreement; (2) actual day-to-day application and administration at the school (and other) levels of the terms and conditions agreed upon; and (3) active consultation between appropriate representatives of both sides on matters of mutual concern which are either not properly within the scope of collective bargaining, or are not susceptible to appropriate adjustment at the bargaining table, or should not be deferred for consideration until the opening of formal periodic negotiations. This Article deals primarily with the first process. But where important, it also attempts to show the interaction of all three.

The New York City Board of Education has negotiated four classroom teacher agreements:[8] the first in 1962,[9] for a one-year term commencing July 1, 1962; the second in 1963,[10] for a two-year term beginning on July 1, 1963; the third in 1965, covering a two-year period starting on July 1, 1965;[11] and the fourth and current one[12] for a twenty-six-month period commencing July 1, 1967, and ending with the beginning of the next school year in September 1969. Each agreement has built upon and expanded its predecessor. Each agreement, and the negotiations from which it emerged, marks a distinct and progressive stage in the evolution of the Board-Union relationship. As original documentary sources, the four agreements themselves provide much internal evidence of the organic growth of the relationship. However, the agreements alone do not reflect the complete history out of which they arose. The form, the style, and the content of these documents have their origins in external surrounding circumstances which serve to illuminate the writings and, hence, the relationship itself.

II. THE FIRST STAGE: EXPLORATION AND EXPERIMENTATION

The first stage in the relationship, which commenced early in 1962, consisted of the initial encounter between School Board and Union, the course of the negotiations between them, and the emergence of the first agreement. Although far from amateurs, both the Board as employer and the Union as agent for the teachers entered upon their respective responsibilities in a relatively simple and comparatively primitive way. Almost immediately after a formal ceremony in which the Board officially recognized the Union's status as the exclusive bargaining representative for all of New York's then 43,000 public school teachers, the UFT presented some 160 demands to the Superintendent of Schools. At that point, the Board was faced with the hard realities of translating into practice the theory of its new policy. What were the basic mechanics and the guiding substantive principles for the initiation and conduct of a bargaining relationship in public education? Other spheres of public employment offered little, if any, guidance. It was a matter of breaking new ground—as much for the Union as for the Board. A number of Board members were well acquainted with the process and the institution of collective bargaining in the world of industry. The UFT, indeed, drew considerable advice and assistance from the trade union movement of which it was a part. Hence, both sides set about adapting established private-sector concepts to the peculiar characteristics of this special public enterprise; the process of accommodation was a pragmatic one of informed improvisation. On the Board's side, the heaviest burden fell first on the Superintendent and then on the nine Board members, all of whom became personally involved in the negotiations.

The most important issue was, of course, salary. On this subject, Board members met with the Union committee far into the night in numerous negotiating sessions. A significant difference between government and private industry brought on an early disagreement about the timing of the salary negotiations in relation to the budget-making process.[13] The final allocation of funds to the Board for the next fiscal year had not yet been made when the negotiations began. The Board nevertheless felt that it could proceed to discuss salaries and other monetary items within the framework of realistic estimates of future income based on experience. The Union disagreed. It regarded negotiations under circumstances short of fiscal certainty as a mere game which gave little promise that the chips would ever be cashed in. Nevertheless, the bargaining on salaries proceeded, moving into high gear after the Mayor advised the Board of its operating budget for the following school year. The Union thereupon insisted on a substantial upward revision of the salary schedules, and the Board offered what it felt it could afford to pay within the limitations of its budget and of anticipated additional funds. The stalemate brought on a one-day strike that closed most New York City schools. The Union terminated the work stoppage in obedience to a court injunction and decision which declared the strike illegal under the state's so-called Condon-Wadlin Law.[14] Following the strike, the parties agreed on a very favorable salary structure after the Governor discovered that he could make additional state funds available to the Board for that year.[15]

Other teacher demands for long-awaited improvements in working conditions presented the challenge of how to accommodate collective bargaining to the Board's internal budget-making responsibility. That responsibility required the Board, once monies were made available to it for the ensuing fiscal year, to adopt its own internal operating budget for the year by allocating specific funds for designated school-system purposes. Among other important benefits, the Union sought during the first year of bargaining a reduced teaching schedule for teachers in the elementary and junior high schools, relief from unpleasant custodial and monitorial tasks known as "nonteaching chores," and a daily duty-free lunch period in the elementary schools. The Board acknowledged both the need for these changes and its willingness to bring them about. The problem was how to accomplish those objectives through the new mechanism of collective bargaining and at a cost which the Board could afford. The solution agreed upon was that both parties would jointly assume the burden of internal budgetary allotments within the limits of existing funds. The parties thus proceeded to negotiate a schedule of the amounts of money which the Board would spend on each desired improvement. The scheduled amounts agreed upon as well as the new salary terms were embodied as separate budget items in a formal Board resolution adopted in June 1962, just before the commencement of the next fiscal year. The resolution authorized the expenditure of stated sums of money for specified purposes to accomplish nine types of improvement in teacher working conditions. Three examples will illustrate how the parties subsequently translated the jointly negotiated budget into teacher benefits in the collective bargaining agreement: (1) the budget authorized the sum of 523,276 dollars to hire 116 additional teachers in order to accomplish a "Reduction of Teacher Instructional Load" in certain kinds of junior high schools from twenty-five to twenty-three or twenty-four periods per week;[16] (2) it authorized the sum of 1,903,000 dollars to hire school aides in the elementary and high schools and, on a limited basis, in the junior high schools, "[t]o perform other than teaching chores now carried out by instructional staff";[17] and (3) it authorized the sum of 1,831,466 dollars to hire 406 elementary school teachers in specialized areas in order "to make time available for relief of the classroom teacher, one . . . period per week."[18] When the parties drew up the first contract in September, they incorporated the items already specified in the budget resolution for the improvement of working conditions into the collective bargaining agreement as teacher benefits tied in amount to the budgetary allotments made in the resolution.

For example: the collective bargaining agreement provided for the reduction of teaching periods in certain junior high schools "to the extent permitted by" the June budget allotment for that purpose.[19] Similarly, the Board undertook in the agreement to grant relief from non-teaching chores through implementation of "the budgetary item as to school aides" authorizing the hiring of non-teaching personnel to perform those tasks.[20] Finally, the obligation to grant preparation periods in the elementary schools was tied to the amount of money made available in "the budgetary item as to increased specialized service."[21] In this way the parties negotiated from knowledge of the amount of money available, and the Board was not committed to promoting improvements beyond its budgetary capacity. However, each individual teacher had no assurance of any specific benefit.

Another aspect of the first bargaining experience was the formulation of a grievance procedure. The parties agreed upon a very detailed procedure which ended, for all grievances based on the application or interpretation of the "working conditions" terms of the contract, with a carefully prescribed resource to final arbitration by a neutral outsider chosen by both sides. Arbitration of this kind was at that time a bold and pioneer experiment in government;[22] both sides were aware that they were breaking new ground. The Board was ready to defend the arbitration provision against the possible attack of illegal delegation of its authority. In return, it sought and obtained from the Union the inclusion of a broad no-strike clause in the agreement.[23] The Union hailed the grievance procedure as the most significant aspect of the new relationship.[24] It assured its members, however, that "we have not renounced our right to take whatever action we deem to be the most effective in support of the negotiations for a new contract when this contract expires."[25]

Upon completion of the negotiations, all items of agreement were brought together into a single document in the form and style of a collective bargaining agreement[26] covering thirty-eight printed pages. On October 18, 1962, the Union and the Board formally signed the agreement[27]—the first document of its kind in the history of public education. The Union framed the signed agreement and hung it on its headquarters wall to commemorate the genesis of the bargaining relationship and perhaps to symbolize the solemnity of its pledge to its members that "[f]rom this time on, a Union contract will be a condition and the basis under which we perform our professional duties and set our professional standards."[28]

III. THE SECOND STAGE: CRISIS AND TURNING POINT

Negotiations for the second agreement started earnestly in January of 1963, about three months after the first agreement had been signed. The Union submitted salary proposals and demands for further improvements in working conditions and changes in established practice.

The first-round problems of accommodating the changes in working conditions to the Board's budget-making authority and financial ability assumed different proportions in the second stage. The negotiations were now looking toward an agreement for a two-year term. The Union, moreover, was asking for definite commitments on salaries and working conditions in each year—without conditioning their extent on the availability of [23] The provision, entitled "No-Strike Pledge," read as follows:

> The Union and the Board recognize that strikes and other forms of work stoppages by teachers are contrary to law and public policy. The Union and the Board subscribe to the principle that differences shall be resolved by peaceful and appropriate means without interruption of the school program. The Union therefore agrees that there shall be no strikes, work stoppages, or other concerted refusal to perform work, by the employees covered by this agreement, nor any instigation thereof.

[24] The October 1962 monthly bulletin of the United Federation of Teachers, United Action, reported to its members:

> The Grievance Procedure is the heart of the union contract. To most teachers, the effectiveness of the United Federation of Teachers will be judged by its ability to settle grievances. The grievance procedure reflects, more clearly than anything else, the great change made since the day when the Board made all the decisions; when the teacher was strictly at the mercy and whim of his principal.

funds. In other words, the teachers now wished to negotiate directly for improvements in their welfare. They wanted the substance of change and were leaving the financial means and budgetary consequences to the Board's ingenuity. As a result, the Board not only had to anticipate the amount of operating funds it might receive for the second year, but it was also faced with the necessity of obligating those future undetermined funds. Ability to pay thus remained a fundamental factor in the Board's negotiating position. For example, on the question of additional nonteaching and preparation periods, the dispute centered on the Board's ability to provide a definite number of such periods. In the end, the parties reached a compromise: for the first year of the agreement the Board would provide the elementary school teachers with a specific number of preparation periods "to the extent possible";[29] however, for the second year of the agreement the teachers had an outright guarantee of a given number of periods which was subject to the grievance procedure.[30] In the junior high schools, the Board promised a definite number of periods during the first year and a further limited increase in the second year "to the extent that funds are made available."[31]

Although the parties remained far apart on the matter of salaries until the eleventh hour, they did not face the same tactical problems of synchronization with the budget-making process as they had met the year before. In order to obtain a two-year contract and to absorb most of the increased salary costs in the second year, the Board was prepared to take its chances that its estimates of future financial ability were accurate. If necessary, it would have to divert to salaries and other negotiated items funds that would otherwise be utilized for other educational needs and services.[32] The result was a shift in the order of priorities.[33]

The main field of conflict during the second year concerned an extremely grave and difficult area in public education: the proper scope and boundaries of collective bargaining. Where is the line between what is primarily within the sphere of working conditions and hence subject to negotiation and bilateral decision, and what is essentially within the realm of educational policy and hence within the exclusive authority of the Board or the Superintendent and not subject to negotiation and agreement?[34] The Union sought to extend collective bargaining to new aspects of educational administration, and the Board rejoined that such matters were reserved exclusively to the discretionary professional judgment and policy-making authority of the Board and of the Superintendent. The stalemate hardened on three principal issues.

The first area of concern was the assignment of teachers to special classes and duties. The Union contended that all teachers should be presumed to be equally qualified for assignment to classes for the intellectually gifted and to certain special nonteaching positions (such as student guidance or counseling) carrying a lighter teaching load. It further maintained that the school's principal [33] The Board in fact negotiated with the Union the order of priorities for the disbursement of the moneys that would be made available to the Board in its budget for the second year of the agreement. The arrangement read as follows:

BASIC FORMULATION OF SALARY INCREASE POLICY

Expense budget funds made available to the Board for the 1964-65 fiscal year will be allocated in the following order: First, funds will be allotted to continue programs and activities at the level in operation during 1963-64. Second, funds will be allotted for salary increases for the bargaining unit as stipulated in this agreement, and twice this amount will be allotted for derivative costs and increases as determined by the Board and for other educational improvements. Third, any residual funds will then be allotted in the same proportion as provided in the preceding sentence.

In the application of residual funds to teacher salary schedules priority will be given to equalizing steps and to increasing the promotional differential and then the first and second differentials.

[34] The issue was similar to, although the legal implications were different from, that presented by a proposal for a "management rights" clause in private industry negotiations. The first agreement between the Board and the teachers contained no so-called "management rights" clause. However, the area left open by law to the Board for negotiations had been indicated as follows by the Board in the preliminary referendum on collective bargaining conducted by the Board on June 12, 1961:

Various governmental agencies have in recent years voluntarily adopted modified forms of collective bargaining for government employees. These, because of the legal limitations and responsibilities placed upon governmental bodies, necessarily differ in certain essential respects from industrial collective bargaining.

(a) As to certain subjects such as, for example, matters relating to hours, working conditions, holidays, vacations and allocation of funds within the total appropriated, the Board is advised that it has substantial powers. As to others, its powers are limited, particularly those calling for the appropriation of public funds, since it may make only recommendations of the total amount believed necessary for budgetary purposes.

(b) As to those areas which, under law, are removed from the Board of Education's power, the Board of Education may commit itself to recommending any agreed action to the appropriate public agencies.

should have no discretion to make teacher selections on the basis of his judgment of relative qualifications; instead, assignments should be made only in accordance with seniority. To this, the Board answered that qualifications were indeed relevant, and that their determination was within the exclusive domain of the principal. The Union replied that qualifications for special assignments should be negotiated and included in the agreement.

Second, there was considerable debate about class size. The Union insisted on a commitment as to maximum class size based not on what was a reasonable working condition for teachers but rather on what produced the best learning conditions for children. That judgment, the Board maintained, was one of educational policy which was committed to the sole discretion of the Board and could not be negotiated.

Third, the crucial question of improvement of "difficult" schools was raised. Late in the course of the negotiations, the Union submitted as a basis for negotiation and agreement a plan for the "effective" organization and administration of schools in low-income areas. The plan called for experimental educational policies and instructional programs. Component features of the proposal included the selection of teachers, principals, and superintendents "with the advice and consent" of the Union, and joint faculty-supervisor administration of the pilot schools. The Superintendent of Schools charged publicly that the Union was attempting to take over the administration of the schools, and he refused even to discuss the matter with the Union.

The clash over these issues led to the first serious breakdown in the teacher-Board relationship. Threats of strike were heard once more. This time the Union's leadership warned that, like freedom riders and other civil rights protesters, they would defy what they regarded as an unconstitutional state law prohibiting strikes by public employees.[35] The seriousness of these issues to both sides derived in large part from the Union's insistence that the desired changes be written into the collective bargaining agreement under the section on teacher "working conditions." In this way the changes would be subject to the full scope of the grievance procedure, including arbitration. For the Board, this meant compounding its delegation of authority to make educational policy—first, to the Union in the agreement, and then, possibly, to a third-party outsider. The Board was willing to enter into discussions with the Unions on the questions of qualifications for teacher assignments and class size, but it reserved the right to make its own policy decisions on these subjects. The Board did offer, however, to incorporate its final policy determinations in a superintendent's circular to be distributed to all the schools. Complaints of arbitrary departure from the policy prescribed in this circular would then be subject to the agency steps of the grievance procedure, but not to arbitration.[36]

With the aid of a mediation panel, the Board and the Union finally resolved the foregoing issues on the eve of the opening of school. The parties negotiated those elements of the basic demands which primarily concerned teacher working conditions and included them in the collective bargaining agreement. For example, the Board conceded that a class might be so large as to constitute an undue physical burden on a teacher. In that sense, class size could be regarded as a "working condition" subject to negotiation to determine the maximum number of pupils which a teacher could reasonably be required to handle.[37] Since class-size limitations became part of the working conditions section of the contract, any claimed departure from those limitations was subject to all phases of the grievance procedure, including arbitration. On the other hand, teacher assignments and qualifications for assignments remained within the discretion of the school principals. Still, the parties devised special procedures to promote fair and objective selection of teachers for coveted nonteaching assignments carrying a lower teaching load. Under these provisions, seniority was to be the controlling factor only where qualifications, as determined by the principal, were equal. In order to preserve its discretionary and policy-making authority, the Board insisted that teacher programs and assignments be covered in a separate article of the contract entitled "Statement of [35] The reference was to the modified Condon-Wadlin Law, passed in the 1963 session of the State Legislature and to remain in effect until July 1, 1965. Law of April 23, 1963, ch. 702, §§ 1, 2, [1963] N.Y. Laws 1732, amending Law of March 27, 1947, ch. 391, [1947] N.Y. Laws 842 (repealed 1967). The principal changes made were a reduction in the tenure and promotion forfeitures imposed on individual employees for striking, the imposition of monetary fines for striking, and the strengthening of enforcement procedures.

[36] The term "grievance" was defined to cover two types of complaints: (1) "a violation, misinterpretation or inequitable application of any of the provisions of this agreement"; or (2) unfair or inequitable treatment "by reason of any act or condition which is contrary to established policy or practice governing or affecting employees." 1965-1967 Agreement, supra note 11, art. VII, § A (emphasis added). Only the first type of complaint was subject to arbitration.

[37] For a description of the Union's strategy on its class-size negotiations and the meaning it placed upon the final outcome by the then director of organization for the United Federation of Teachers, see Selden, Class Size and the New York Contract, Phi Delta Kappan, March 1964, at 283.

Policy." This special article expressly provided that its provisions were deemed to be a part of "established policy and practice" within the meaning of the definition of "grievance."[38] This meant that complaints of arbitrary or discriminatory application of the policy were subject to the agency steps of the grievance procedure—but not to arbitration.

On questions of teacher recruitment and the improvement of difficult schools—essentially matters of school administration and educational policy—the Union ultimately demanded a medium for expressing the views of the majority of teachers, even if not through the normal channels of collective bargaining. The critical stalemate over that issue was resolved when the Board agreed to establish a system of periodic joint consultation—not negotiation—between the Superintendent of Schools and the Union on educational matters of mutual interest and concern. This meant that the Board, while reserving to itself the final decision in these matters, would permit the Union to press its position in separate discussions away from the bargaining table. The parties expressed this new consultative role for the Union in a formal declaration included as a "Preamble" to, but not a part of the substantive terms of, the second collective bargaining agreement. In the "Preamble," the Board of Education and the Union "recognize that they have a common responsibility beyond their collective bargaining relationship," and they "declare their mutual intent to work together toward the achievement of common aims of educational excellence." For this purpose, they agreed to "meet and consult" once a month during the school year "on matters of educational policy and development." One of the specific subjects of joint consultation was the development of a program for the improvement of "difficult schools."[39]

A related clash of positions demonstrated another limitation on the scope of collective bargaining in public education. The Union demanded that the agreement include specific provisions concerning the length of the school year, the length of teacher vacations, and related matters, all of which the Board had previously regulated by means of bylaw. The Board conceded that these matters had a direct bearing on working conditions but insisted that they were essential to its discretionary authority to manage the school system and hence could not be bargained away for a fixed period. The Union then sought definite assurance that the existing bylaws would not be changed during the term of the agreement; accordingly, it asked that the provisions of the bylaws be incorporated into the contract. The Board, asserting its continuing legal obligation to govern the school system according to changing educational needs, refused to yield the freedom to amend its bylaws when necessary. One salient example of the need for continued flexibility, the Board suggested, was the possibility that the school year would have to be lengthened or varied to make up for lost school time due to teachers' strikes. In the end, the parties resolved the dispute by narrowing the subjects of controversy to sick leave, sabbatical leaves, vacations, and holidays. The Board expressly agreed that it would continue its "present policy" as to these subjects, "except insofar as change is commanded by law."[40]

So critical to both sides were the implications of the fundamental issues resolved in the second round of negotiations that a serious public dispute arose between the Board and the Union as to what the one had yielded and the other had won. The parties met this threat to the completion of a final agreement by adding to the contract an epilogue entitled "Conclusion." This conclusion, reproduced here in part, provides significant internal evidence of the serious struggle which characterized the second phase of the bargaining history:

> In a field of collective bargaining which presents new and unresolved problems, the parties have successfully defined the proper area of interest on the part of the teachers in their rates of pay and conditions of work while providing simultaneously a mechanism for the teachers through their union to convey to the Board their views based on their knowledge and experience on matters of educational policy and professional concern. This agreement provides terms and conditions for the joint relationship which will redound not only to the benefit of the Board and teachers but more particularly to the students as well. At the same time it makes clear that the Board has complete authority over the policies and administration of the school system which it exercises under the provisions of law and in the fulfilling of its responsibilities under this agreement.[41]

The second agreement, eighteen printed pages longer than its predecessor, was not signed until February 10, 1964.

[38] The Statement of Policy contained the following introduction:

> Following discussions with the Union, the Board, exercising its authority under the Education Law to manage and administer the school system, adopted the following policies, which are deemed to be a part of "established policy and practice" within the meaning of the definition of "grievance" contained in Section A, Article VII, of this agreement to the extent that such definition is otherwise applicable.

IV. THE THIRD STATE: MATURITY AND UNION POWER

By the early winter of 1965, when negotiations commenced for a third agreement, collective bargaining had become the accepted technique for determining the salaries and working conditions of New York City teachers. The grievance procedure had become the principal mechanism for resolving complaints by teachers that they were not receiving the benefits assured them by the collective bargaining contract or by established practice.[42] When the grievance process failed, the Union submitted numerous cases to arbitration for final and binding decisions by neutral third parties chosen by both sides.[43]

The process of regular joint consultation on a year-round basis added a new and broader dimension to the teacher-Board relationship. Through this process the Union became a truly powerful force in school administration. The earliest product of joint consultation was the completion, through a joint committee, of the "More Effective Schools Plan" (MES), which was put into operation in a few schools on an experimental basis.[44] As a further aspect of the Union's new role in administrative and policy matters, it participated in planning the Board's internal procedures for administering the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement. Moreover, it appeared before school administrators and Board committees on the issuance of new licenses, the creation of new positions in the schools, and other matters of educational import. During this period the Union also awoke to its responsibility to enforce that provision of the contract under which the Board undertook to make no changes with respect to "matters not covered by this agreement which are proper subjects for collective bargaining" without "appropriate prior consultation and negotiation with the Union."[45] On several occasions, the Board withdrew items appearing on the calendar for action at a public meeting upon the Union's insistence that the matter was a proper subject for collective bargaining and that "prior consultation and negotiation" had not taken place.[46]

In the negotiations for a third agreement, the Union fared well in its salary demands and in obtaining other benefits for the teachers. Thus, the third contract made benefits less conditional on budgetary limitations. It afforded regular substitute teachers,[47] who had limited rights under law and a tenuous hold on their employment, rights of assignment under uniform and objective procedures and a reasonable measure of job security. Moreover, the new contract accorded regularly appointed teachers, generally unable to transfer to another school except through personal arrangements, the benefits of a transfer plan based on reasonable standards to be uniformly applied. It made the grievance procedure less formal, and opened recourse to arbitration for some complaints based upon policy provisions of the agreement. In addition, the contract expanded the classroom teacher unit for which the Union had obtained recognition to include those who served in part-time teaching programs conducted by the Board.[48]

But much more was at stake in the third set of negotiations than just wages and teacher benefits. The new theme in forging the third agreement was enhancement of the Union's status in the schools

[42] By the end of the school year in June 1965, 285 grievances had been filed at the last agency step of the grievance procedure.

[43] Twenty cases were taken to arbitration by the end of the school year in June 1965.

[45] 1963-1965 Agreement, supra note 10, art. XIV.

[46] An example of an item withdrawn from a public calendar upon protest by the Union at a public meeting was a proposed resolution for commencing the 1966-67 school year two days earlier than usual and requiring teachers to report for duty two days earlier than in prior years. The Union claimed that the proposal would, in fact, shorten the summer vacation of teachers and hence would violate that part of the agreement in which the Board undertook "to continue its present policy with respect to . . . vacations." See text accompanying note 40 supra. The Board took the position that its interpretation of the language in question permitted the proposed action. It asked the Union to take the matter to arbitration under the grievance procedure. The Union refused and threatened to keep the teachers out of school on the two days of proposed early reporting. The Board subsequently abandoned the proposal.

[47] These teachers constituted about one-third of the teaching staff.

[48] The broadened unit included, in addition to all classroom teachers in the regular day school instructional program, "all those employed as per session teachers." 1965-1967 Agreement, supra note 11, art I. The new grouping, among whom the Union had established majority representation, was composed of all those who were employed as teachers in one or more of the numerous after-school, evening, and summer programs conducted by the Board of Education.

The designation of "per session" teacher derives from the fact that each work period, consisting of a stated number of hours, is known as a "session," for which teachers are paid a "per session" rate. Except for a small number of teachers in summer day camps and in evening adult classes, the per session assignments are held by day school teachers. At the time of the third agreement, a number of these teachers were multiple per session jobholders filling after-school, evening, and summer positions. The Board pondered the wisdom of extending bargaining rights for these extra jobs and then decided to treat them up as though they were separate, regularly employed, full-time workers. The Board was thus involved in negotiating separate sets of working conditions for the same employees—as though they were in fact different persons than those employed in the day schools.

and in the school system. By now the Union was representing more than 45,000 teachers in the day-school system, and thousands among them who were serving in additional part-time assignments, as well as other units of collateral pedagogical employees.[49] The Union was seeking security for itself as an organization; it wanted the prestige and power which would attract and retain a growing membership. Accordingly, it asked the Board for the favored treatment that would give it that prestige and power. In short, the Union was seeking some of the incidents and advantages of exclusive representation which were already commonplace in private employment but which had not been completely accepted in the public sector. In part, this difference between the public and private sectors was due to conflict between the principles of the merit system and the closed shop or union shop.[50] In part, it was due to the generally recognized obligation upon government to spend public money only for public purposes.

In its earlier agreements, the Union had obtained some of the more common privileges attendant upon exclusive bargaining status. Thus, it had obtained the exclusive use of at least one bulletin board in each school "for purposes of posting material dealing with proper and legitimate Union business."[51] The Board had accorded a limited number of leaves of absence without pay but with service credit for salary increment and retirement purposes to teachers who were officers or staff members of the Union.[52] While union activity on working time was prohibited, the Board had assured members of the Union's negotiating committee and its special consultants that they would be excused "without loss of pay" for working time in negotiations with the Board or its representatives.[53] At the individual school level, organized by the Union as a "chapter," prior agreements had granted the following perquisites of exclusive bargaining status: chapter chairmen were allowed "reasonable time during school hours" to investigate grievances,[54] meetings of the school chapter were permitted within the school "under circumstances which will not interfere with the instructional program";[55] and the principal of the school was required to meet with the chapter committee once a month during the school year "to consult on matters of school policy and on questions relating to the implementation of this agreement."[56]

In the third round of negotiations, the Union did not demand any of the conventional union security clauses.[57] It sought the following forms of special treatment: First, it wanted the Board to abolish completely an established professional employee organization—the Policy Consultation Council— with which the Board had consulted for many years on various matters of educational and school policy. The Council was part of a Staff Relations Plan issued by the Board in 1956 following consultation with employee organizations and professional groups. In some structural respects, the Council resembled some of the company-devised employee representation plans encountered in private industry at an earlier time. The Union, insistent upon becoming the sole voice for teachers on matters of educational policy at the individual school level, also asked for the abolition of the Staff Relations Committees—the organs of the Staff Relations Plan at the individual schools.

[50] The Federal government's position was clearly stated in President's Task Force, supra note 22, at 25:

> The Task Force wishes to state its emphatic opinion that the union shop and the closed shop are contrary to the civil service concept upon which Federal employment is based, and are completely inappropriate to the Federal service.

[55] This provision was not contained in the first agreement covering the 1962-1963 school year, but was incorporated into the second contract, 1963-1965 Agreement, supra note 10, art. XI.

[56] This provision was first added in the second contract covering the 1963-1964 and 1964-1965 school years, 1963-1965 Agreement, supra note 10, art. XII.

[57] Nor could it ask for the right of exclusive representation of all teachers in the unit in grievance prosecution and arbitration. Special legislation pertaining only to teachers, enacted by the state legislature in 1964 and presumably still in effect, had vitiated the exclusive representation right for grievance prosecution which had been given to the Union in prior agreements. This was accomplished by means of language stating that the representative of "the public school teacher" in the presentation of his grievance "shall be designated by the public school teacher at the time he presents his grievance or at a subsequent date." Gen. Munic. Law, § 603-a (McKinney 1965).

The legislation was directed at a prior decision of the State Commissioner of Education that upheld the Union's exclusive right, as against any minority organization, to represent teachers under the grievance procedure prescribed in the first agreement. Matter of City Teachers Association of New York, Decision No. 7262 (Aug. 13, 1963). Hence, a teacher-grievant may select a minority organization to represent him in pursuit of the benefits negotiated in the agreement by the exclusive bargaining agent.

Such groups, the Union argued, were a threat to its exclusive bargaining status and should no longer be permitted to exist alongside a collective bargaining representative; even if, as the Board maintained, these groups were purged of all negotiating and grievance functions, they were still anachronisms whose survival could not be justified. The Union also sought favored status for the chapter chairman at each school. It asked the Board to make the office more attractive by arranging a lighter program of school duties for the chapter chairman in order to allow him more time during the school day for the tasks of his union office. Finally, and most significantly, the Union wished to administer unilaterally a welfare fund to which the Board was the sole contributor.

The Union won each of these demands either entirely or to a substantial degree. It won them on the theory that the privileges were an accepted perquisite of exclusive representation and that they would promote a stable and responsible collective bargaining relationship in the school system. The third agreement expressly stripped the Policy Consultation Council of all functions, and the Board undertook to adopt an appropriate resolution for its disestablishment."[58] The Staff Relations Committees were to be discontinued in any school where, as evidenced by valid check-off authorization,[59] a majority of the faculty were members of the Union. Moreover, the agreement granted to chapter chairmen a stated number of duty-free periods during the week for handling grievances and union business. The Union also acquired two additional leaves of absence for its teacher-officers or staff members.

But the grant of authority to administer unilaterally a welfare fund consisting entirely of Board contributions was the most unexpected concession to the Union. Welfare benefits were granted for the first time in the third agreement. That agreement stipulated that the Board would provide funds at the rate of 100 dollars per teacher per year during the first year of the agreement, and at the rate of 140 dollars per year during the second year, prorated on a monthly basis "for the purpose of making available for each day school teacher" supplemental welfare benefits "under a plan to be devised and established jointly by representatives of the Union and of the Board."[60] The details of the plan were to be left to later negotiation. The Board had earlier informed the Union of its intention to establish a welfare fund to be jointly administered under a plan whereby both sides would appoint trustees in a manner similar to the requirements of federal law for welfare funds in private industry.[61] Such a plan would have been modeled after the administration of the welfare fund for employees of the City Transit Authority, an autonomous agency established for the City of New York by state law. After accepting the Board's earlier proposal, however, the Union learned that the New York City government had approved a standard welfare fund arrangement with unions representing its employees which provided for unilateral union administration and management. The United Federation of Teachers then insisted upon the City's standard unilateral arrangement. The Board, concerned about the public policy and legal aspects of the payments and of the unilateral union administration of the fund, sought the opinion of the New York City Corporation Counsel. The Corporation Counsel advised early in 1966 that the Board's contributions to the proposed welfare fund were for a proper public purpose and that the proposed arrangement for unilateral administration would not violate the Board's fiduciary responsibility in the expenditure of public monies. The Board thereupon entered into a supplemental agreement with the Union requiring it to pay into the "United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund"[62] the amounts specified in the third basic contract. The supplemental agreement provided that "the Fund shall be administered and managed by five Trustees, who shall be appointed by the Administrative Committee of the Union." The Union anticipated that the Board's contributions to the Fund during the term of the new agreement would reach a rate of eight million dollars per year for all units which it represented.

The strict accounting, auditing, and reporting requirements of this welfare-fund agreement, its controls on administration, and its emphasis on the fiduciary responsibilities of trustees afforded reasonable assurance against misuse of Board contributions. Thus, the Union's power did not turn on mere control over the disposition of large sums of money. The important thing was that new and [58] The supervisors were the dominant groups remaining in the Policy Consultation Council at that time. However, they had already formed another organization, the Council of Supervisory Associations (CSA), composed of constituent organizations of supervisors at various levels of authority. On May 5, 1965, in a joint "Memorandum of Agreement," the Board recognized the CSA as the exclusive representative of all supervisors eligible for membership in each of its constituent organizations and agreed to meet and consult with it "on matters of educational policy and development" and on the working conditions, salary schedules, and grievances of the supervisors.

highly valuable benefits were available to teachers through an administrative facility designated as "the United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund." This undoubtedly afforded the Union the greater measure of prestige and power which it needed to gain and retain substantial numbers of new members.[63]

While the benefits were expressly available under the collective bargaining agreement to all employees in the unit without regard to their membership in the Union, there is reason to assume that the impression was nevertheless created that membership was either a condition precedent to receipt of benefits or an advantage in their dispensation. The fact that the Fund was designated as the "United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund" might reasonably have led the uninformed to suppose that the Union was actually expending its own money and hence would limit its largesse to its members. The Union's simultaneous grant of additional benefits from its own funds to union members only might well have heightened the confusion. Even those who understood that the Board provided the contributions to the "UFT Welfare Fund" might still have been uncertain as to whether nonmembers were intended beneficiaries; nor would it be unreasonable for them to assume that the disbursement of Board funds controlled by the Union might tend to favor union members.

The Union's administration of the Fund at the school level tended to strengthen the association in some teachers' minds between eligibility for welfare benefits and union membership. Thus, the chapter chairmen at the individual schools were the sole distributors of benefit application and fund enrollment forms. Employees complained to the Board of Education that the chapter chairmen in some schools gave the necessary forms only to union members. Schools having no union members, and hence no chapter chairman, were overlooked initially. Moreover, chapter chairmen were responsible for distributing literature on welfare-fund benefits, initially to all employees in each school and then regularly to new employees. Those unaccustomed to careful textual scrutiny may well have wondered whether union membership was not a condition of access to the valuable coverage described in the publications. The lack of clarity stemmed from the language of the basic booklet, which was entitled "Health and Welfare Benefits" and subtitled "For members of the fund and their families/UFT Welfare Fund." In its opening statement, the booklet asserted that all employees for whom the Board contributes money to the "UFT Welfare Fund, are hereinafter referred to interchangeably as 'covered employees', members of the Fund, or members." While the term "members" was thus technically tied to the Fund, its usage in connection with the availability of particular benefits may have led some teachers to believe that the term referred to union membership.[64] Although the Board brought to the Union's attention complaints by nonmembers of their disparate treatment by chapter chairmen, and even though the Union investigated and corrected instances of discriminatory action, it can scarcely be denied that the Union retained a fundamental advantage in its unilateral administration of the welfare fund. Indeed, the October 7, 1966, issue of the Union's official publication reported a "startling jump" in membership in the first month of the new school year.[65]

V. THE FOURTH STAGE: THE EMERGENCE OF PUBLIC-INTEREST ISSUES PECULIAR TO THE ENTERPRISE

The negotiations for the fourth, and current, agreement between the teachers and the Board emphasized the fundamental importance of the public-interest factor in public employment bargaining. Two basic components of the public-interest factor had, of course, appeared in earlier negotiating encounters: setting priorities among competing demands upon available Board funds for the administration of educational programs and the general operation of the school system; and separating the realm of wages, hours, and working conditions from the domain of governmental policy and public management.

The first public-interest component concerns the public agency's judgment as to what part of its total budget it can conscientiously commit to employee gains and benefits consistent with the public interest. In collective bargaining on economic demands—wages, fringe benefits, and working conditions—the Board has repeatedly asserted that its first concern in the fiduciary allocation of public funds must be the "good of the children." The Union's typical reply has been: "Teachers want what children need." In the end, the public has acquiesced in the final budgetary allocations for teacher gains and benefits—an acceptance based either on the perceived value of economic benefits as forces in educational improvement or on their worth in avoiding the educational and social hazards of a deferred school opening.

[63] For a discussion of the importance of this Fund to the Union, see Foreword, Message from the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, in Health and Welfare Benefits (published and distributed to New York City Schools by the Union): "New York City teachers are justly proud in the achievement represented by the United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund. The United Federation of Teachers Welfare Fund is an historic first. It is the first teacher welfare fund in the history of American education.'

[64] As an example of the later carry-over of the special term "member" to other literature, several statements in the Fund News (published and distributed to all schools in February 1968) explained that new benefits made possible by the fourth agreement with the Board would be granted to "our eligible members," or to "members," or to "the eligible employee-member." The Board received a number of inquiries from some employees seeking clarification of eligibility for the benefits and from others complaining of the exclusion of nonmembers of the UFT from the new benefits.

[65] United Federation of Teachers, United Teacher. Other issues showed that membership increased by 8,000 from September of the first year of the third agreement to December of its second year.

The second public-interest component is more fundamental: how can bilateral collective bargaining be limited in scope to matters directly affecting the employment relationship? How can it be kept from intruding upon the essential mission of a governmental agency such as the Board of Education, which has been entrusted with a nondelegable duty to design and operate an educational system in the public interest? As noted earlier, the precise scope of collective bargaining has not been easy to define. Previous differences have been resolved when the Union withdrew certain items from the bargaining table, when the Board ceded some of its authority in twilight-zone disputes, or when the parties devised other mechanisms of union participation, such as consultation and discussion. It was during the negotiations for the fourth agreement, however, that the sharpest and most stubborn public-interest conflicts emerged.

By the winter of 1967, the Board and parent and community groups had become persuaded that the improved working conditions granted to teachers in past agreements had impeded the attainment of higher educational goals for children. At the center of their concern were the children in the "special service schools" located in the low socioeconomic areas of the city. For these children, learning sights and educational achievements were concededly low. The Board was convinced that the interaction of three factors—a general teacher shortage, inability to recruit a conscientious career staff, and unrealistic working conditions prescribed by prior collective bargaining agreements—was hampering its efforts to provide a better education where it was needed most. In order to attract competent and experienced teachers to special service schools and retain them there, the Board had previously agreed with the Union to reduce the amount of teaching time required of teachers during their six and one-third hours of daily attendance in those schools; it had correspondingly increased the number of preparation periods. The third agreement had granted to teachers in the special service elementary schools two additional preparation periods per week (for a total of four) during which they were relieved of teaching duties and were expected to devote themselves to unsupervised and unassigned professional tasks. In the special service junior high schools, the Board reduced teaching time from twenty-four to twenty-two forty-five minute periods per week and increased preparation periods from six to eight per week. Three other provisions of past agreements also contributed to the Board's dilemma: the increase in the number and succession of paid sick-leave days for regular and substitute teachers for which no authenticating physician's certificate was required; the commitment to relieve teachers of teaching duties during preparation periods—except in an "emergency"; and the agreement to give teachers general control over the use of their preparation periods.

The practical impact of these four categories of improved working conditions on the education of children in special service schools became evident during the second year of the third agreement. The effect of the reduction in teaching time was to require the Board to increase the number of teachers in each school at a rate sufficient to provide each child with a full day's instruction. This meant recruiting several thousand new teachers. The system's experienced teachers did not find the lighter teaching schedules a sufficient inducement to lure them into the special service schools. Hence, the Board had to tap whatever sources of new teachers were available outside the school system. The tremendous expansion in staff brought to many special service schools untried and unseasoned recruits as well as a large number of casual or trnasient substitutes unwilling or unprepared to qualify for regular appointment. At best, the staffs which were recruited for these schools were often inadequate to the educational challenges presented. Nor was there any time during nonteaching periods which the Board could utilize for sustained teacher training and orientation. Still worse, the comparative rate of staff absenteeism for alleged illness increased markedly in these schools—particularly on the days preceding and following week-ends and holidays. If the principal exhausted the roster of neighborhood substitute teachers willing to "fill in" on a daily basis, he was forced to assign other teachers in the school to "cover" the teacherless class. For the children, the excessive absences meant intermittent breaks in the continuity of their badly needed instruction. For the teachers who were required to "cover" the teacherless class, it meant the reluctant surrender of one or more highly prized preparation periods.[66] Faced with these consequences, the [66] While teacher grievances on loss of preparation periods for class coverage were not sustained because of the "emergency" nature of the assignment an arbitrator nevertheless observed that a continuing state of emergency due to teacher shortage might not be a valid defense to excessive class coverages. He suggested better planning for recruitment.

Board became convinced that the four types of teacher benefits negotiated in the third contract were in fact educationally unprofitable and that their monetary cost could be put to substantial productive use if diverted to other needs of the system. Accordingly, it appeared to the Board that a return to pre-existing conditions and the introduction of new restrictions might be a partial answer to its dilemma.

To achieve its own goals and to meet the objections of parent groups, the Board prepared a set of demands incorporating proposals for changes in the new agreement which would, among other things: (1) increase the number of teaching periods and reduce the number of preparation periods in the special service elementary and junior high schools; (2) reduce the number and succession of paid sick-leave days for which no authenticating physician's certificate was required; (3) revise the transfer plan to encourage transfers of experienced teachers to schools having a low experience index; (4) require teachers to attend training and orientation courses after school hours and during their preparation periods; and (5) favor the novice teacher with less difficult class assignments. The Union, on the other hand, sought a further reduction in teaching time at all levels and an expansion in the number of nonteaching preparation and professional periods,[67] such nonteaching time to be used at the complete discretion of the teacher. As compensation for loss of preparation periods because of teacherless classes, or for any reason, the Union requested the Board to contribute to the welfare fund "at twice the maximum hourly per session rate for the time lost." Moreover, the Union wanted five additional days of paid sick-leave allowance and the complete abolition of the need for an authenticating physician's certificate. It also sought five additional days per year of paid leave for "personal business."

The clash of positions on these and other public-interest issues remained persistently intractable through three separate phases of mediation efforts conducted successively during the period following expiration of the third agreement on June 30, 1967.[68] Among the public-interest differences were two which proved to be particularly divisive: the problem of the so-called "disruptive" pupil and the controversy over the More Effective Schools program (MES). The conflict over these issues illustrated again how difficult it is to separate the realm of collective bargaining from the domain of governmental policy-making, and how delicate the balance is between the pull of public-interest concerns and the force of special group demands.

The Union submitted for incorporation in the fourth agreement a new section entitled "A Program To Remove Disruptive Children from Regular Classrooms." The proposal consisted of three subsections, which respectively recited the objectives of the program, set forth procedures for the effectuation of those objectives, and defined the role of the Union and the specific responsibilities of the Board to the Union. The principal objective was to vest in the classroom teacher a major share of the discretion to decide whether a child's behavior was so "disruptive" as to warrant his transfer from a regular classroom to other facilities more "appropriate" to his educational needs. The subsection on procedure began with the statement, "A teacher may exclude from his class a child whose behavior is causing serious disruption in the classroom." It then set forth the following three grounds for the exclusion of a "disruptive" child: (1) "Endangering the health and/or safety of (himself and) other children (e.g., fighting, smoking)"; (2) "Intimidation of the teacher and/or fellow students"; and (3) "Inciting to violence." Finally, the subsection described the steps to be pursued following a child's exclusion from the classroom. These steps included a report by the teacher and a conference between the teacher and members of the school's behavioral and supervisory staff to plan the necessary remedial measures. The subsection called for an interview with the child and a meeting with his parents, both in the presence of the teacher. It also prescribed mandatory remedies of permanent removal from the teacher's class or of suspension from the school under specified circumstances. The teacher was to have the right "to be accompanied by a United Federation of Teachers representative through all phases of this procedure."[69]

The Union's policy justification for the demand was that the behavior of disruptive children in some of the city's "difficult" schools so seriously undermined the stability of the normal classroom situation as to make it almost impossible for the teacher to teach and for other children to learn. The Union's explanation for placing the subject on the bargaining agenda was that violence and threats of violence by pupils against fellow-students and teachers, as well as other types of unmanageable pupil conduct, were so widespread as to affect seriously the working conditions of [67] The "professional" period is a period in which the teacher is relieved of an administrative assignment, as differentiated from a "preparation" period in which the relief is from teaching duties.

[68] The Union submitted altogether 670 demands on which over 100 negotiating sessions had been held by the expiration of the agreement on June 30, 1967; by then, an accord had been reached on only a few items.

[69] The Union's proposal was a modified version of a provision obtained by its sister American Federation of Teachers Local in Detroit, Michigan, in the latter's 1966-1967 collective bargaining agreement.

teachers. The Union claimed that the Board had no effective central policy for dealing with the plight of the teachers and that school administrators were consequently unwilling to remove disruptive pupils from regular classrooms and place them in other facilities. The Union saw the teacher as the victim of a grave injustice against which he had no recourse and no effective remedy. Hence, the Union sought to negotiate both the procedure of the recourse and the substance of the remedy; in so doing, it placed the greatest emphasis upon the teacher's right to take the initial self-help step himself and then to participate in all phases of the decision on the ultimate outcome.[70]

To the Board, the proper placement of the disruptive child in the school system was a matter of educational policy. And the role of educational policy maker, the Board insisted, could not be ceded to an individual teacher or to an outside body. Moreover, the Board did not share the Union's view that the teacher was necessarily an innocent victim of antisocial pupil habits in the classroom. The Board suggested that a poor or inexperienced teacher might well generate disruptive behavior because of inability to establish the relationships with pupils necessary to command their respect and retain attention. Parent groups shared the Board's views and foresaw in the Union's plan the possibility of placing in the hands of weak or hostile teachers the power to determine the educational fate of children already in need of intensive instructional care. As the negotiations reached the second mediation phase, the Board offered to prepare, in consultation with the Union, a Superintendent's circular for school administrators which would establish appropriate procedures for handling serious student behavior problems. The Board was not willing, however, to make the circular or its procedures contractually binding. For its part, the Union indicated a willingness to have an outside panel on which the Union would be represented make the final decission on the disposition of the pupil, but it stood firm in its demand to negotiate the procedures and include them in the agreement.

A similar stalemate developed around the MES program.[71] The Board had adopted the program in 1964 for a limited number of elementary schools as an experiment in elevating pupil achievement levels in slum areas through changes in school organization and structure. Briefly stated, the salient features of the plan for each school included: a relatively small total number of pupils, reduced class sizes, an increased ratio of classroom teachers and guidance counselors to pupils, additional small-group instruction, increased funds for educational materials and school supplies, and frequent consultation between faculty and administrators on teaching and supervision goals and techniques. Moreover, each school was to have on its staff a full-time team of experts in pupil-personnel services—psychologist, social worker, attendance teacher, speech therapist, and community coordinator. Apart from the obvious improvements in working conditions afforded teachers by the experimental MES design, the plan offered them additional advantages in the form of more preparation periods, freedom from secretarial tasks, freedom from nonteaching duties, and the ability to hold conferences during school hours. The Union regarded itself as the real architect of the fundamental design of the plan. It had looked upon the plan as the best "school-by-school approach to the problem of providing schools which can really educate children in spite of any environmental handicaps they may bring to school with them."[72] It also viewed the plan as a model for other city school systems faced with the challenge of achieving academic and social progress for their children. As noted above, the Union had in 1963 insisted upon placing its proposals for the improvement of "difficult" schools on the bargaining table.[73] The Board's position at that time was that the subject was not within the ambit of collective bargaining. The parties resolved the dispute through the mechanism of a "Preamble" to the agreement which provided for regular joint consultation sessions between the Union and the Superintendent of Schools. The MES program grew out of those joint consultations.

Twenty-one MES program schools were in operation when the parties began their negotiations for a fourth agreement. Now the Union asked that "every elementary school located in a ghetto or disadvantaged area of the City shall be made a More Effective School." This would mean the reorganization of about 300 elementary schools in accordance with the MES plan. The Union also sought from the Board a definite contractual commitment in behalf of the expanded program, together with assurances that the Board would not modify the elements of the program without the concurrence of the Union. While not unaware of the substantial improvements in working conditions that would inure to teachers from expansion of the plan, the Board saw the fundamental issue as one of educational policy affecting children—an area of decision-making in which parents and the community had the greater stake. The Board consequently took the position that the bargaining process was not the appropriate technique for formulating educational programs of this type, and that a collective bargaining agreement was not the suitable medium for recording them. Moreover, although cognizant of the Union's commitment to MES as its special professional contribution in the search for an answer to the ghetto school problem, the Board was not convinced that the twenty-one-school experiment was demonstrating its cost effectiveness. In the Board's view, other Board-instituted programs aimed at developing the learning abilities of children in the early school years held greater promise for a larger number of children at a lower comparative cost. As the negotiations ground through the second mediation phase, the Board indicated its willingness to assure the Union that it would not reduce the number of schools then involved in the MES program, and that it would not modify the elements of the existing programs without prior consultation with the Union.

A special mediation panel named by Mayor Lindsay[74] attempted from mid-August to one week before the opening of school in September to provide a basis for a peaceful resolution of the critical public-interest issues still in dispute: teaching time, preparation time and its use, teacher training, absence allowances, the disruptive pupil, and MES. In its report to the Mayor on September 4, 1967, the panel made the following recommendations as to all matters other than the disruptive pupil and MES:

(1) The number of preparation and other nonteaching professional periods should remain unchanged.

(2) The assignment of a teacher to "cover" a teacherless class should be recognized as a proper "emergency" measure provided that compensatory time be given for preparation periods (beyond a stated minimum) lost by reason of such assignment.

(3) Preparation time and other professional nonteaching time should be subject generally to the teacher's control, except that a new teacher without prior professional experience could be directed during his first year of employment to devote "a reasonable number of his preparation periods, not to exceed twenty, to observing classes conducted by more experienced teachers or to consulting others familiar with classroom problems."

(4) The existing sick leave provisions should remain in effect pending agreement on a new kind of leave plan proposed in the report. This new plan, the panel suggested, would not only reduce the opportunity for abuse and encourage the provident utilization of paid leave allowances, but would also eliminate a physician's authenticating certificate in most instances.

(5) A new teacher without prior professional experience could be favored in classroom assignments and could be directed by the Superintendent of Schools to participate in an afterschool training program for a specified number of hours during the year.

(6) The teacher-transfer plan should be revised to take into account a better distribution of the more experienced teachers.

As to the disruptive pupil and MES, the mediation panel reported that, because of the complexity of the issues and the unusual and serious social considerations involved, it would be unwise to attempt to resolve the disputes "as part of crisis negotiations over the more conventional terms of a labor contract." The panel proposed, therefore, that each of the issues be settled on an interim procedural basis which, without prejudicing the rights of either party, would allow for continued study over a period of time by experts as well as by such interested persons as parents and other groups who "cannot share in labor negotiations." The mediators contemplated as an interim procedural device the establishment of two separate special advisory committees composed of representatives of the Union, the Board, and the Mayor. These special committees would study separately the disruptive pupil and MES problems, consult with interested persons, and from time to time make recommendations to the Board. The panel noted that under this kind of interim disposition, the Union would not surrender any collective bargaining rights if, in the end, it were dissatisfied with the committees' proposals as to either of the matters under study.

On September 6, 1967, the Board accepted the mediators' report and prepared, as its last offer, a proposed new agreement incorporating the panel's recommendations. On September 10, the eve of the scheduled opening of schools, the Union membership rejected the Boards offer after the Union's officials had also turned it down. From September 11 to September 28, when the membership ratified the final proposed agreement, the City experienced the longest teacher strike in its history as of that time.[75] During the strike, the parties conducted further negotiations within the framework of the mediation panel's recommendations and under the watchful eye of the Mayor and two other mediators designated by him. The number of public-interest issues was reduced somewhat by agreement or by modification or withdrawal. The Union's position had now hardened around the following last-ditch residue of its earlier demands: (1) an additional preparation period per week in the special service elementary schools; (2) additional sick leave allowances and elimination of the need for a physician's authentication; (3) utilization of the nonteaching professional period in the junior high and high schools at the teacher's discretion; (4) specified procedures for handling the "disruptive" pupil; and (5) expansion of the MES program by contractual commitment.

In the end, a settlement was reached in which the Union achieved most of its final substantive demands directly affecting teacher working conditions, and the Board abandoned or modified its original stance in those areas. Thus, the Union won its fifth preparation period in the special service elementary schools, effective as of the second year of the agreement. But it yielded to the Board's insistence on using preparation periods and after-school time for training new teachers. The negotiators devised a new sick-leave plan under which a physician's certificate was required only after ten days absence for illness in any school year, as contrasted with the previous four-day limit. Nonteaching "professional" periods in the secondary schools were to be used at the teacher's discretion, but with certain exceptions.

The Board salvaged its position on the disruptive pupil when the Union agreed that the specific procedures both sides had worked out in the negotiations be drawn up as a "Special Circular" of the Board to be appended to, but not made a part of, the contract. The special procedures agreed upon granted the teacher the right to initiate a complaint regarding a "disruptive" student with the principal of his school. Thereafter, the teacher could appeal unsatisfactory action to successively higher levels of administrative authority and to a specially constituted panel of Union, Board, and community representatives. But the final disposition of the case was to be made by the Superintendent of Schools. At the same time, however, the Board committed itself by way of a specific undertaking in the agreement not to change the procedures or policies set forth in the Special Circular without the consent of the Union. The Board also agreed that the circular would be subject to the grievance procedure and to arbitration only for the purpose of resolving complaints of failure to comply with the procedures prescribed in the circular—not to review the substance of a decision as to any individual pupil.

The parties resolved the MES issue by incorporating three paragraphs in the Preamble of the agreement. Essentially, these paragraphs declared that the Board would continue various specified intensive experimental programs for educational excellence, including MES, and that it would set aside a fund of 10 million dollars for the 1968-1969 school year "for the purpose of making further progress in the development of new programs for the elementary schools."[76] Moreover, a work group headed by an outside eminent educator selected by the Superintendent and composed of representatives of both sides and of parent or community groups would make recommendations to the Board and the Superintendent of Schools for the utilization of the special fund. However, not less than half the fund was to be used by the Board "for intensive programs for the reorganization and improvement of additional schools."[77]

On this basis the Union and the Board concluded the final agreement, and the teachers returned to their classrooms on September 29 for the commencement of the 1967-1968 school year. The parties and the public then settled down to what they expected to be a two-year period of quiet enjoyment of the fruits of the bargaining and the new phase of the bargaining relationship. As is well known, however, before that first year was over, warning signals were up for the most serious crisis in the history of the school system and the city community. That account must be left to another kind of chronicle or perhaps to the next chapter of this history, to be written when the fifth collective bargaining agreement has been concluded.

VI. CONCLUSIONS AND FUTURE DIRECTIONS

The history of collective bargaining between the New York City Board of Education and the United Federation of Teachers has brought into sharp focus the special problems inherent in any effort to adapt established industrial relations models to the public education enterprise. These problems are compounded when that enterprise is a vast urban school system comprised of large numbers of children in need of intensive instructional services. Essentially, two main types of problems and their attendant dilemmas have characterized this particular bargaining history: problems arising out of demands for so-called "bread and butter" economic items of primary benefit to the teachers—including salaries, fringe benefits, and improved working conditions; and problems arising out of demands for bilateral formulation of policies and standards relating directly to the education of children—ranging all the way from teacher qualifications for particular assignments, to placement of difficult children, to the expenditure of Board funds for experimental educational programs.[78]

[75] Six United Federation of Teachers units of pedagogical employees other than classroom teachers were also involved in the negotiations and in the strike. They were school secretaries, guidance counselors, psychologists and social workers, attendance teachers, laboratory assistants and auxiliary (bi-lingual) teachers. Because each of these units had its own special interests, separate negotiations were conducted for each of them. This Article has considered only the classroom teacher unit.

The dilemma presented by the first type of problem has been how to satisfy teachers' demands for increased salaries while at the same time meeting other educational and operating school system needs within budgetary limitations. The solution has often necessitated the reordering of priorities and the diversion of funds intended for other important educational services to teachers' salaries. While such a course may serve well the expedience of the moment, it places a progressively heavy strain on the Board's ability to fulfill its fundamental commitment to educational improvement.

The dilemma presented by the second type of problem has been how to retain in the Board the essential aspects of its public trust and mission to serve the legitimate interests of the community, while at the same time satisfying the Union's demands in order to avoid a deferred commencement of the school year. In this area, the solutions have been altogether pragmatic, dictated by the relative force of countervailing pressures at the moment. The result has been a progressive expansion of the process of joint decision-making to the point where the Union enjoys equal status with the Board in the formulation of those aspects of educational management having any impact, however slight, on teacher welfare or Union prestige. This has been the outcome even as to policy matters plainly outside the realm of collective bargaining; as to these matters, there has often been full bilateral negotiation and agreement even though the final accord has not actually been incorporated within the physical framework of the contract.

The emergence of these significant characteristics of the relationship between the Board and the Union raises two questions of overriding importance: (1) whether government as an employer can protect its exclusive policy terrain against invasion by the collective bargaining process once that process has been set in motion by a powerful employee representative; and (2) whether the resolution of public-interest issues in serious collective bargaining clashes can in fact be guided by the just and proper needs of the public and the community. These are challenges not only for the New York City Board of Education, but also for governmental employers generally—particularly those entrusted with functions in an area of great social concern.

INDIANA

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE STRIKES RULED UNLAWFUL

Declaring that "the overwhelming weight of authority in the United States is that government employees may not engage in a strike for any purpose," the Indiana Supreme Court ruled that strikes by state public employees are illegal. The high court's narrow 3-2 decision upheld a contempt of court order issued by the Superior Court of Madison County against the Anderson Federation of Teachers, Local 519, for violation of a temporary restraining order.

Some Anderson teachers went on strike and picketed various city schools on May 1, 1969, because of dissatisfaction with salary schedule negotiations for the following year. A temporary restraining order issued by the superior court on May 2 was disregarded by the strikers. This led to the trial court's judgment after a May 6 hearing that Local 519 was in contempt of court for violating the restraining order. The Indiana Supreme Court ruled that the trial court "was in all things correct in its finding and judgment of contempt of court."

In rejecting a contention by Local 519 that Indiana's anti-injunction statute was applicable to the case, the court said the Supreme Court of the United States "clearly enunciated the proposition that public employees did not have a right to strike and that the injunctive processes might properly be used to prevent or halt such strikes in the case of United States v. United Mine Workers. . . . This case has never been overruled or modified." The court further maintained that portions of the federal Norris-LaGuardia Act (as interpreted by the Supreme Court) are fully applicable to the Indiana anti-injunction statute:

"The purpose of the [Norris-LaGuardia] Act is said to be to contribute to the worker's 'full freedom of association, self-organization and designation of representatives of his own choosing, to negotiate the terms and conditions of his employment, and that he shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives. . . for the purpose of collective bargaining. . . .' These considerations, on their face, obviously do not apply to the Government as an employer or to relations between the Government and its employees." We are in total accord with the above language and hold that it is equally applicable to the Indiana statute.

This same proposition has been followed generally in most of the other state jurisdictions where it has been repeatedly held that strikes by public employees are or should be prohibited and that injunctions should be granted to halt or prevent them.

In a vigorous and lengthy dissent, however, Indiana Supreme Court Justice C. J. DeBruler argued:

This teachers' strike was completely peaceful and minimally disruptive of the public service rendered by the schools. Only a small percentage of the public school teachers participated in the strike, [and] the schools were never closed by the strike. . . .The non-striking teachers and the students entered and left the building freely.

In spite of this the majority labels this strike "illegal" and states that, therefore, the injunctive process may be used to halt it. The strike is called illegal because it is in violation of an alleged public policy of this State against all strikes by public employees. [emphasis added]

However, there has never been such a public policy in this State and there was none in May, 1968, when the teachers in this case went on strike.

Justice DeBruler contended that none of the cases cited by the majority supported "a per se rule against strikes by public employees," and emphasized that to avoid being in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution the dichotomy between public and private employees must have a rational basis in light of the purpose of the no-strike prohibition. . . . To justify such a prohibition against every strike by any public employees the results of a strike by such employees must be different from and more disruptive than a strike by private employees. . . . It is naive to think that every strike by any public employees will upset the whole operation of government.

The minority concluded:

Indiana needs a comprehensive labor relations act which would provide a mechanism to help settle labor disputes involving both public and private employees, without recourse to a strike. It is obvious the courts cannot create this machinery. It is equally obvious that the Court should not create an apparent substitute in the form of a per se rule against peaceful strikes by public employees regardless of the impact of the strike. . . . I believe that until the Legislature acts further, the Court should apply the anti-injunction act in cases of strikes by public employees and not a judicial version of martial law. . . . To prohibit a strike in a context where this amounts to ending any pressure on the employer to bargain in good faith with representatives of the employees. . .may do long lasting damage to the community.

MICHIGAN

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF HUTCHINSON ACT AFFIRMED

The Michigan Court of Appeals affirmed the constitutionality of the state's Hutchinson Act in a decision which found that the Board of Control of Eastern Michigan University is a public employer and its employees are public employees within the meaning of the act. The appeals court stated that the Hutchinson Act is "within the authority granted by the constitution and it promotes the general welfare of the people of the State of Michigan by attempting to resolve labor disputes of public employees."

The board of control, plaintiff in the case, is granted power to supervise and control the university by Art. 8, §6 of the 1963 state constitution:

Other institutions of higher education established by law having authority to grant baccalaureate degrees shall each be governed by a board of control which shall be a body corporate. The board shall have general supervision of the institution and the control and direction of all expenditures from the institution's funds.

Defendant was the Michigan Labor Mediation Board (MLMB) which previously had ruled that the board of control was a public employer under the Hutchinson Act and fell within its jurisdiction. The MLMB's ruling resulted from a petition by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, Local 1666, for certification as the exclusive bargaining representative of non-teaching, physical plant employees of the university.

Objecting to the MLMB's assumption of jurisdiction and subsequent ruling in the certification matter, the board of control sought a declaratory judgment to the effect that it was not a public employer within the meaning of the act, and that application of the act to the board was a violation of Art. 8, §6. Plaintiff argued that the constitutional provision "prohibits the legislature from passing any act which in any way interferes with plaintiff's general supervision of the university," and alleged that the Hutchinson Act violated the constitutional rights of the board and university employees.

Following a trial court ruling that the act could be applied to plaintiff and that university employees are public employees, the board of control appealed the matter. In upholding the trial court's decision, the appeals court cited an opinion issued in a similar case involving the University of Michigan:

It is the opinion of this Court that the legislature can validly exercise its police power for the welfare of the people of this State, and a constitutional corporation such as the board of regents of the University of Michigan can lawfully be affected thereby. The University of Michigan is an independent branch of the government of the State of Michigan, but it is not an island. Within the confines of the operation and the allocation of funds of the University, it is supreme. Without these confines, however, there is no reason to allow the regents to use their independence to thwart the clearly established public policy of the people of Michigan.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

WRIT OF PROHIBITION DENIED TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The Supreme Court of New Hampshire denied a petition by the Manchester Education Association and others for a writ of prohibition enjoining enforcement of a temporary injunction issued by the Hillsborough County Superior Court. Citing an earlier decision reached in County of Hillsborough v. Superior Court, the high court ruled:

"Prohibition is an extraordinary writ, the purpose of which is to prevent subordinate courts or other tribunals, officers or persons from usurping or exercising jurisdiction with which they are not vested. The grant of such a writ is within the discretion of this court and should be used with caution and forbearance and then only when the right to relief is clear.". . . Without passing on the contentions of any of the parties to the controversy we hold that a writ of prohibition should not issue in this case.

A temporary injunction order was issued by the superior court on September 2, 1969, on petition from the city of Manchester, which claimed that Association members were public employees who had voted to strike. Following a brief, non-evidentiary hearing, the lower court held that a public employee strike was illegal and properly enjoinable by the court. It therefore enjoined all public-school teachers in the city from participating in or supporting a work stoppage, and directed Association officers to instruct their members to report for work on the specified date. A full hearing on the matter was scheduled for September 15.

In seeking appeal of the temporary injunction, the Association entered a petition with the state supreme court, claiming that "petitioners' bargaining position with the City would be completely destroyed by this order and any opportunity for negotiations terminated." The Association argued that the trial court had exceeded and abused its jurisdiction by issuing a temporary restraining order without an evidentiary hearing, without inquiring into the irreparable injury claimed by the city, and without allowing petitioners due process of law. Moreover, the Association contended that its members had no contractual obligations to the city, were not city employees, and could not be guilty of a work stoppage because the 1969-70 school year had not yet begun.

The state supreme court, however, denied the petition, observing that the temporary injunction instructed Association members "to report for work on [a] specified date that was less than two weeks away from [a] hearing on [the] merits of petition for injunction."
(Manchester Education Association, et al. v. Superior Court, et al., Supreme Court of New Hampshire, September 3, 1969).

NEW YORK

GRIEVANCE ARBITRATION LEGAL IN PUBLIC SECTOR

In denying a school district's motion for a stay of arbitration in a dispute with teachers associations, the New York Supreme Court for the County of Onondaga ruled that "once a valid agreement has been entered into providing for arbitration, any controversy arising between the parties to the contract which is within the compass of those provisions must go to arbitration." The agreement between the parties to this case provided that an arbitrator's decision "shall be final and binding."

The court handed down its decision on a dispute over a contract provision on "teacher load" between the East Syracuse-Minoa Teachers Associations and Central School District No. 1. The contract stipulated that "the Board of Education shall make every effort to maintain the 1968-69 teacher specialist-pupil ratio," but this ratio increased during the 1969-70 school year when the number of nurse-teachers was reduced, and dental hygienists were eliminated. Claiming that the district failed to comply with this contract provision, the Associations unsuccessfully attempted to initiate grievance proceedings and then arbitrate the matter; the school system sought a court stay of arbitration.

Noting that "there exists a dispute between the parties to this contract under which respondents make a reasonable claim of arbitrability," the court explained that the school system could not contest the claim:

> It is for the arbitrator to interpret the contract and to determine whether or not the dispute is arbitrable. It is the national public policy, recognized by this state, that labor disputes under collective bargaining contracts are presumptively arbitrable and it is for the arbitrators to determine the procedural and substantive issues of arbitrability. . . . The court's function is limited to finding that a dispute of some kind under a valid contract does, in fact, exist. If the contracting parties would avoid this presumption, then they must use carefully drafted words of exclusion.
> It is said that rules developed in the private sector, in this case, the presumption of arbitrability, are not and should not automatically be adopted for public employer-employee relations. That is the broad statement of Civil Service Employees Association v. Helsby. . . . It has been codified by the legislature in Civil Service Law Section 209-a(3). But that decision referred to and the statute deals with unfair labor practices. . . . It would fly in the face of the state policy of the legislature found in Civil Service Law Section 200 which encourages grievance and arbitration procedures to hold that the ruling of Long Island Lumber Company v. Martin, supra, was limited to the private sector.

The court stressed that "if the issue involved is solely one of construction or interpretation, it is for the arbitrators to decide the meaning of the contract." Moreover, it pointed out that "the only exceptions in which a court will enjoin arbitration are: (1) where there is fraud or duress, (2) where there is no bona fide dispute between the parties, (3) where the performance which is the subject for the demand for arbitration is prohibited, or (4) where a condition precedent to arbitration under the contract has not been fulfilled."

The school system had argued that the contract deprived an arbitrator of jurisdiction, and that no valid contract existed because the agreement delegated non-delegable duties to an arbitrator. In rejecting the first argument, the court held that contract provisions defining an arbitrator's authority merely "limit the arbitrator's power and do no more than state his legal duty." The school system's second argument also was rejected on grounds that "the courts have recognized the authority of governmental units to bind themselves to commercial arbitration," and that "the exercise of sovereignty includes the power to contract and to contract to arbitrate disputes."

Board Findings and Rulings

MARYLAND

NEGOTIATED SALARIES NOT TO BE ARBITRARILY REDUCED

Local school boards cannot reduce negotiated teacher salaries when fiscal officials allocate enough money to meet salary requirements outlined in negotiated agreements, according to a decision by the Maryland State Board of Education. In so ruling, the board recommended that future "negotiated agreements as to salary set forth the number of professional positions upon which negotiated salary base is predicated, so that, in the event of a budget cut, the parties can renegotiate in a clearly delineated frame of reference."

The case before the state board involved a contention by the Teachers' Association of Anne Arundel County (TAAAC) that officials of the county board of education were legally obligated to provide the $6,800 salary base negotiated in a March 1968 agreement. In the agreement no mention was made of the contemplated number of teachers to be hired during the 1969-70 school year. When the board submitted its 1969-70 budget, the county executive made significant reductions in the proposed monetary amount, and the number of professional, secretarial, and clerical positions. Moreover, the county council expressed its "intention" that the board reduce the salary base to $6,600.

Although the county council appropriated enough money for the board to provide the $6,800 salary base and still increase its staffing ratio over the previous year, the board proceeded to implement the $6,600 salary base. TAAAC filed suit in the Circuit Court for Anne Arundel County in an attempt to enforce the negotiated $6,800 salary base, but the court denied relief, saying that TAAAC had not exhausted all administrative solutions before the state board.

Despite complications in the case which resulted from July 1969 changes in state school law, the state board ruled that > the Board should have implemented the negotiated $6,800 salary base, since this would still have permitted an increased staffing ratio of at least 1.7 over the previous year. We are also cognizant that at the present time it may be financially impossible to restore fully the $6,800 salary base for the current fiscal year. . . . However, the Board has stated that not all of the contemplated 3,574.5 positions have been filled. . . . We are of the opinion, therefore, and hereby direct the Board to utilize all surplus funds in the total budgeted category of Instructional Salaries toward the immediate implementation of so much of the $6,800 salary base as is possible.

The state board parenthetically noted that, according to a previous decision, "it is incumbent upon the local school board to negotiate such reallocations with the exclusive bargaining agent insofar as the reallocations relate to 'salaries, wages, hours and other working conditions.' "
(Teachers' Association of Anne Arundel County v. Board of Education of Anne Arundel County, Maryland State Board of Education, November 13, 1969).

MASSACHUSETTS

SEPARATE ACADEMIC AND NONACADEMIC BARGAINING UNITS ESTABLISHED

The Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission ruled that separate collective bargaining units should represent the academic and nonacademic professional employees of Boston State College. In rejecting the single, over-all unit proposed by the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Local 1943, and supported by the college's faculty senate, the commission explained:

> We do not approve of unnecessary fragmentation of employees into a multitude of bargaining units. However, in the case before us and from the evidence in the record, it is apparent that the differences between the Academic personnel and the Non-Academic professional personnel warrant their separation into separate bargaining units. The community of interest and harmony of relationship would be more consistent than an overall inclusion. The trend in education of the future is to expand further the number of non-academic, full time personnel to carry out the business and administration of these multi-million dollar education institutions. The day of the combination Professor-Business Manager is over. Therefore we find the two (2) UNITS as suggested by the State Agency Employer (the College) to be the most appropriate.

Unit I consists of teaching faculty and professional personnel holding the titles of professor, associate professor, assistant professor, instructor and associate dean, and 10-month librarians having academic rank. The commission noted that all employees included in Unit I have academic rank and can achieve tenure, serve students in an instructional capacity, work an academic week averaging 12 hours plus some designated office hours but are otherwise free to engage in other activity, and work a 10-month year normally running from September 1 to June 30 with the exclusion of several weeks during which classes are not scheduled.

Unit II employees, however, do not have academic rank and cannot obtain tenure, perform noninstructional functions and render service to the entire college community, work a 40-hour week, and are classified as 12-month employees. Nonteaching, professional service personnel holding the following titles are included in Unit II: state college librarian, assistant librarian-cataloger, library reference assistant, senior library assistant bursar, assistant or associate registrar, associate admissions director, chief accountant, superintendent of buildings and grounds, college counselor, financial aid director, computer programmer, nurse, and laboratory technicians with a bachelor's degree.

The commission directed that a secret ballot election be held to determine whether a majority of employees in each unit wished to have Local 1943, the faculty senate, or neither organization serve as that unit's collective bargaining representative. (Boston State College of the Division of State Colleges and Boston State College Faculty Federation (AFT Local 1943) and The Faculty Senate of Boston State College, Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission, October 10, 1969).

MICHIGAN

DISMISSAL FOR UNION ACTIVITY PROHIBITED

A probationary teacher whose contract was terminated for "rather vague" reasons was awarded reinstatement and full compensation for lost back pay in a Michigan Employment Relations Commission decision which held that "a reason (and perhaps the reason)" for the teacher's discharge "was his aggressiveness as a representative of the labor organization which bargained for the teachers."

In overturning the trial examiner's decision, the commission ruled that the Summerfield School District's termination of a probationary teacher's employment "interfered with, restrained and coerced him in the exercise of his rights guaranteed by Section 9 of the Public Employment Relations Act in breach of Section 10(a)." Section 9 guarantees public employees the right to join and participate in the activities of labor organizations for collective bargaining purposes; Section 10(a) prohibits public employers from abridging the rights guaranteed public employees in Section 9.

Citing National Labor Relations Board v. Vail Manufacturing Company, the commission also held that "it may not be an unreasonable inference from the discharge to hold that other teachers 'would have every good reason to fear the same treatment meted out to [the teacher] if they were aggressive in their work with the union.' "

The probationary teacher was discharged by the Summerfield Board of Education on March 12, 1968, although his retention as a teacher had been recommended by both his principal and the school superintendent. The commission found that "on no other occasion during the five-year tenure of the Superintendent had the board of education ever overruled his recommendation on retention or termination of a teacher." Moreover, in this case, the superintendent's recommendation was overruled by a unanimous decision, and no reasons for the board's action were given publicly or to the Summerfield Education Association.

In examining three school-board members' reasons for the teacher's discharge, the commission found the testimony to be "so 'vague' as to be not credible." The board members testified that the teacher's employment was terminated because of "the way the classes were conducted; the way people felt about him, the way the public felt about him—everything in general of the district." They did not tell how the classes were conducted, little information about public opinion of the teacher was presented, and the commission found no evidence that any board member had ever observed the teacher in the classroom. Citing Wilson v. Flint Board of Education as evidence that the board's dismissal of the teacher violated the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act, the commission said:

> The thrust of the [Wilson] decision is that there are situations where due process requires notice, even though a statute does not specifically require it. We are of the opinion that due process required more information for Wadsworth than the school board afforded him.

One board member testified that he voted to terminate the probationary teacher's employment because in 1967 the teacher had not notified the superintendent that he was returning for the 1967-68 school year. The teacher maintained that he could not submit the contract because of pending collective bargaining. The commission ruled that "aside from the fact that grievant's failure to return a contract in 1967 would not appear to be a basis for termination in 1968, the omission may, it can be urged, be a protected activity under Section 9."

During a discussion the teacher had with the superintendent about his dismissal, the superintendent said, "I don't believe you are getting the message." The commission was > convinced that the "message" was that grievant had irritated members of the board by his aggressive representation of the teachers. Because of his representational activities, he was discharged.

In this context, the discharge interfered with, restrained and coerced [the teacher] in the exercise of his responsibilities as an Education Association representative.
(In the Matter of Summerfield School District and Summerfield Education Association, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, August 21, 1969).

NEW YORK

CHECK-OFF SUSPENSION IMPOSED UPON STRIKING TEACHERS ORGANIZATION

The New York Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) imposed a three-month dues deduction forfeiture on the Island Trees Teachers Association (ITTA) for a two-day strike in June 1968. In doing so, it took exception to the hearing officer's conclusion as to the major cause of the strike, and extended the hearing officer's recommended two-day check-off interruption.

After considering seven charges leveled by the ITTA against the school board as evidence that "extreme provocation by the district" caused the strike, the hearing officer ruled that only one charge—the board's six-month inaction on a Professional Employment Agreement—had actual merit:

On the basis of the record, considered as a whole, therefore, I find and conclude that the public employer in this instance engaged in extremely provocative conduct in refusing to sign the Professional Employees Agreement without giving a reason, without actually rejecting the agreement, and without offering any real explanation for the six-month delay. I further find that this refusal was a major precipitating cause of the strike, because the issue remained a live and principal one through the fact-finding procedure, up to the very eve of the strike, and in the settlement itself. And I think it fair to conclude that this particular type of conduct should be deemed extremely provocative because it cannot help but undermine the confidence of the parties in the kind of peaceful collective bargaining which the Taylor Law seeks to foster; for how can the parties hope to achieve agreement when, once their negotiators agree upon the terms, their principals refuse either to sign or react at all? Certainly nothing could be more likely to induce the use of force, and that appears to be just what happened in this case.

The PERB affirmed the hearing officer's finding that only one ITTA claim provided possible evidence of extreme provocation by the school board, but it disagreed that the board's six-month delay in considering the agreement was the major cause of the strike. Instead, the PERB ruled that the delay merely had "some bearing" on the work stoppage, and that "it was the refusal of the employer to accept the recommendations of the fact-finders that precipitated the strike. Clearly such refusal under the circumstances of this case does not constitute extreme provocation."

As such, the PERB concluded:

The fact that strikes by public employees are prohibited does not give a license to public employers to be intransigent in negotiating with their employees or to frustrate the negotiating process by refusing to sign an agreement negotiated by the parties. Rather, this prohibition would appear to impose a higher duty of good faith negotiating on the part of public employers than employers in the private sector.

In the light of all the factors in this case, we accept the finding of the hearing office that the existence of extreme provocation was such as to mitigate the penalty that would otherwise be imposed for such a strike. We do not agree, however, with the recommendation of a two-day dues deduction forfeiture. Rather, we conclude that the dues check-off privileges of the respondent Association should be suspended for the period of three months.
(In the Matter of Island Trees Teachers Association, New York Public Employment Relations Board, September 23, 1969).

NEW YORK

FIREMEN NOT PENALIZED FOR STRIKE

For the first time in its two-year history, the New York Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) declined to order suspension of check-off privileges for a public employee strike, ruling that the public employer's lack of good faith bargaining constituted extreme provocation.

A four-hour work stoppage called by the City of Troy Uniformed Firemen's Association on November 22, 1969, violated the Taylor Act's anti-strike provision. But a hearing officer found that the association's request for negotiations with the city in late August 1969 was not met until late September, and that the city manager offered an economic package in early October saying, "This is it. I'm not going to make any other offers. I'm not listening to any counter-proposals. This is what I can pay, and I won't pay anything else. Take it or leave it."

The impasse was submitted to fact-finding and resulted in a report which the city manager promised to "follow and adopt" but then rejected. From late October through mid-November the association was unable to arrange a meeting with the city, called the PERB daily for assistance, and received another promise that the report would be adopted. The strike was called following a November meeting in which the city again delayed its response; it ended after four hours in compliance with an injunction issued by the state supreme court.

The PERB ruled that public employers of this State are mandated by the State Legislature to negotiate in good faith with representatives of their employees. On the record before us, we find that the public employer herein has not discharged this responsibility. We do find that the public employer herein did engage in acts of extreme provocation so as to detract from the responsibility of the respondent for the strike.

Although noting that the brevity of the strike "does not of itself remove the presence of peril and danger to the citizens of this municipality," the PERB concluded that the peril was eliminated because "all of the firemen who left their posts stayed nearby their posts listening to radio monitors and, in the event of any alarm, would have responded." The record therefore justified no forfeiture of check-off privileges. WISCONSIN

ADVISORY ARBITRATION OF GRIEVANCES TERMED "AN EXERCISE IN FUTILITY"

In delivering an advisory opinion on a complicated case between the Superior Board of Education and the Superior Federation of Teachers, an independent arbitrator strongly criticized advisory arbitration:

> Nothing has been accomplished other than to deepen frustrations and do violence to the collective bargaining relationship. So-called "Advisory Arbitration" is, in the opinion of the undersigned, an exercise in futility. It has the potential to become, in and of itself a part of the problem that final and binding arbitration is designed to mitigate.

The case before the arbitrator involved four disputes; the arbitrator sustained the board in two and the federation in two, even though "the parties. . .indicated no intent whatsoever to either accept or reject the opinion of the arbitrator."

The initial dispute concerned conflicting contract provisions which stated first that previous teaching experience "shall be considered as experience within the district on a year for year basis to a maximum of five (5) years," and second that "newly employed teachers shall be placed on the salary schedule according to degrees held and credits earned and given full year for year credit for actual teachers." Five teachers who were employed at the beginning of the school year after teaching outside the district for a half-year contended that their salaries should be based upon a full year's teaching experience. They referred to a third contract provision which held that "one-half year of experience shall be considered a full year of experience in determining position on the salary schedule." The arbitrator upheld the teachers and the federation by deciding that the third provision determined the salaries of teachers hired at the start of the agreement, while the other two provisions applied only to teachers hired during the course of the agreement.

In the second dispute, however, the arbitrator sustained the board in its denial of reimbursement for a third day of personal leave when the contract specified only two days' personal leave each school year. A teacher had taken a third day of personal leave to attend the federation's state convention, and the union claimed that because leave always had been granted for the convention, the two days' leave provided in the contract were additional days. Explaining that personal leave is a negotiable item, the arbitrator found that the contract provided no reopener on any negotiable items discussed in the process of negotiating the agreement.

The third dispute involved a union request for above-scale pay for a teacher of visually handicapped students. An agreement had been reached with a previous superintendent, but the board then rescinded the agreement. Finding that the contract provides higher pay for specialized instructors, the arbitrator sustained the union's claim.

In the fourth issue, the arbitrator sustained the board in finding no contract support for the union's claim that veterans of less than 24 months' military service be credited with such service for purposes of pay and experience. But he suggested that the board and the federation clarify future agreement provisions applying to military veterans with previous teaching experience.

In concluding his opinion, the arbitrator discussed advisory arbitration, stating that his observations were intended "to be neither facetious nor offensive":

> As the parties hereto surely understand, final and binding arbitration is a mutually-embraced, orderly and expeditious process for the disposition of issues arising during the term of their agreement. It is a creature of their contract. As such it is not an adversary proceeding in the commonly accepted sense. What does it do? It settles disputes at least for the life of the contract. It provides immediate guidance to the parties and it may also define and clarify issues for future negotiations. A panacea it is not. No one, least of all the undersigned, would proclaim it a cure-all; however, it is no longer seriously argued that final and binding arbitration is not a desirable substitute for "trial-by-combat" in the troublesome arena of labor relations.
>
> What about "Advisory Arbitration?" What does it do? The more kindly disposed among us might say that it is a step in the right direction and that it can pin-point issues to be resolved at some future date. The undersigned, however, is persuaded that its inherent shortcomings far outweigh any benefits inuring to parties who would indulge in the proceeding. Why? The submitted issues, as in the instant case where the parties have indicated no intent whatsoever to either accept or reject the opinion of the arbitrator, are not settled. Furthermore, the grievants involved, having had their day in court, are nonetheless denied relief. Neither party—winner or loser—is able to "breathe easier," so to speak, because nothing has been determined.

Negotiation Notes

DELAWARE

TEACHER NEGOTIATION LAW GREETED WITH DISPLEASURE

Delaware's new "Professional Negotiations and Relations" law, enacted on October 31, 1969, prompted a Delaware State Education Association vote to impose sanctions on the state while meeting on November 3. A "sanctions alert" had been in effect since February because of the state's failure to pass a bargaining law.

Teacher discontent reportedly focused on the law's anti-strike provisions, which declare it "unlawful for any public school employee to engage in any tactic which circumvents any provision of his teaching contract." The act states that "the word 'strike' shall be deemed an unexcused absence" and specifically provides that "no public school employee shall strike while in the performance of his official duties." Although no penalty fines are established, the act holds that any exclusive negotiating representative which violates the provisions forfeits its status as exclusive representative for two years and loses its privileges of dues check-off for one year.

The act stipulates that any contracts or agreements reached are in effect for a minimum period of two years with no reopener. And it limits negotiable subjects to "all matters relating to salaries, employee benefits, and working conditions." Salaries are defined as "direct compensation of the employee for his (her) professional services;" employee benefits are "those items contributing to the employee's welfare, paid by the local school district and . . . not subject to income taxation of the employee," and include "a 'dues check-off' system;" and working conditions refer to "physical conditions of facilities in the school district building such as, but not limited to heat, lighting, sanitation and food processing."

Moreover, the act provides that > no contract or agreement executed between the two parties shall specify directly or indirectly binding arbitration or decision-making by a third party or parties. The rights of the public through their legally elected or appointed Board of Education in final policy making is not subject to negotiation.

In the event of an unsettled dispute, either party may request mediation by any method mutually agreed upon, or through a three-member mediation committee whereby each party selects a representative and the third must be "selected by mutual agreement of both parties." And if fact-finding is requested by either party, a fact-finding committee is to be selected by the same method.

Supervisory and staff personnel are excluded from the bargaining unit, for the act defines a public school employee as "any certificated non-administrative employee employed by a school district." In addition, strict requirements are placed upon labor organizations seeking certification as the exclusive bargaining representative: to be certified, an organization must receive "an affirmative vote by a majority of the total number of public school employees eligible to vote in [an] election." Organizations wishing to intervene in a representation election must have a certified membership enrollment "of at least 30 percent of the total members of public school employees of the school district."

The act allows teachers complete freedom to join or refrain from joining a labor organization, and states that "membership in any specific organization shall not be required as a condition of employment." It further declares that "nothing in this Act shall prohibit any certificated employee from appearing in his own behalf on matters relating to his employment relations with the school district."

FLORIDA

EXCLUSION OF ADMINISTRATORS FROM TEACHERS ORGANIZATIONS RULED UNCONSTITUTIONAL

A decision handed down by the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida ruled unconstitutional a Florida law which prohibited administrative and supervisory personnel of the Palm Beach County school system from membership in organizations whose activities included "the collective representation of members of the teaching profession with regard to terms, tenure or conditions of employment."

The law defined an administrator or supervisor as "all principals and assistant principals," and "all persons employed in [a] non-teaching capacity except librarians, coaches, clerks, maintenance personnel, custodial personnel, and food services personnel." It provided that any administrator or supervisor violating the law would be subject to dismissal by the superintendent of schools.

The court held that the law, which affected only Palm Beach County educators, violated the First and Fourteenth Amendments by denying administrators and supervisors the right freely to join associations of their own choosing.

FLORIDA

PROFESSIONAL NEGOTIATION LAW ENACTED FOR ONE COUNTY

The Florida state legislature enacted a Teachers Professional Negotiations Law applicable only to counties with a population of 390,000 to 450,000. As such, Hillsborough County alone will be affected by the new law, which provides that > teachers have the right to negotiate professionally with the board and to be represented by a professional association in such professional negotiations as to salaries, hours, wages, rates of benefits and other terms of employment, curriculum, student discipline, personnel policies and all other items that affect rights and responsibilities of teachers.

The act empowers a school board to "recognize the Professional Association elected by a majority of the teachers in the County as the sole and exclusive negotiating agent for all the teachers of the County," and mandates the board to "meet and confer in good faith" with the exclusive negotiation representatives.

It further provides for arbitration in the event of an unsettled dispute; each party to the dispute is to select its own arbitrator, and then the two arbitrators are to select and agree upon a third arbitrator to serve as chairman of the arbitration board. If the two arbitrators are unable to agree upon a third, either the negotiating agent or the board may request that the American Arbitration Association select the third arbitrator. All written findings and opinions reached by the arbitrators in an informal hearing are to be advisory.

The new law holds that "any professional negotiating agreement negotiated under the terms and provisions of this act shall specifically provide that the teachers who are subject to its terms shall have no right to engage in any work stoppage or strike, the consideration for such provisions being the right to a resolution of disputed questions."

LOUISIANA

BARGAINING BY POLICE OFFICERS LEGAL

An opinion issued by the Louisiana attorney general affirmed the right of ranking police department members to join unions for the purpose of negotiating agreements, but held that a strike or slow-down called by a union of police officers "would be a willful neglect of duty and would subject the officers, who participated in the strike or slow-down, to removal from office or other disciplinary action by the appointing authority."

Stating that there is "substantial authority in Louisiana which indicates that police officers or other municipal employees may become members of a labor union," the attorney general held that there is "no reason to distinguish between higher ranking members of the police and patrolmen. All are employees of the city and would be free to become members of the union."

The opinion was issued in reply to a number of questions submitted by the public safety commissioner and police chief of Bogalusa. In reply to an inquiry about union authority "to usurp the authority and power" of civil service or departmental rules and regulations, the attorney general referred to an earlier opinion which held that "in any collective bargaining contract between a public agency and a labor organization, such contracts must contain a clause recognizing the rights of municipal employees under civil service."

A full-text presentation of the attorney general's opinion appears in the "Texts" section of this issue of the DIGEST.

NEBRASKA

TEACHER SALARIES NOT TO BE SET BY COURT

Nebraska's Court of Industrial Relations will not set teacher salaries in the state "as a matter of good judgment," according to a judge of the court. Speaking before the Nebraska State School Boards Association, the judge explained that the court is empowered to fix teacher salaries at rates comparable to "persons in similar situations," but it would prefer to see teachers engage in the collective bargaining rights granted them by the Nebraska Teachers' Professional Negotiations Act.

The Nebraska court consists of five judges appointed by the governor, and has full power to conduct hearings and trials relevant to public employee bargaining under the rules of evidence used in state civil trials. It has no jurisdiction "over any persons, organizations, or school districts subject to the provisions of the Nebraska Teachers' Professional Negotiations Act. . . until all provisions of such act have been exhausted without resolution of the dispute involved." The state's professional negotiations act states that once a school board recognizes a teachers organization, it shall engage in "good faith negotiations" with that organization. The act also provides for fact-finding procedures in the event of an unsettled dispute.

Objections to court intervention in the determination of teacher salaries had been voiced by both school-board representatives and the state education association, as both preferred that teachers bargain for agreements on wages and working conditions without third party aid. The judge emphasized that the court's existence is important to teachers only as a means of prodding stubborn school boards to review their labor-management position and dealings. But in the event of an unsettled dispute in which all provisions of the act have been exhausted, he said the court could declare an industrial dispute and order the resumption of good faith bargaining, or decide the matter itself.

NEW JERSEY

GREATER VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT EFFORTS NEEDED

In reviewing the activities of the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) since its December 1968 initiation, its executive director asked public employers and employee organizations to settle their disputes voluntarily so that the need for PERC intervention would diminish.

Stating that the commission is staffed by only five professional and six clerical employees, the executive director said that by mid-October 1969 the PERC had "docketed a total of 156 requests for mediators, 32 requests for fact-finders, 154 representation matters, 22 charges alleging violations of the [New Jersey Public Employee Relations Act of 1968], and three requests for the submission of lists of names of arbitrators." He explained that the heavy work load resulted from "a substantial influx of mediation cases in school districts throughout the state which were affected by a February budget deadline."

The PERC had reached 19 decisions by mid-October, and the director felt that "the fact that only six work disruptions occurred in cases in which the commission was involved speaks well of its early success in administering a new law."

OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING SETTLEMENTS INCREASING

The Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) reported that during the first nine months of 1969, major collective bargaining settlements affected more than two million workers and showed a considerable increase over the corresponding period in 1968.

Average annual increases in wage rates for the duration of a contract were 6.6 percent of straight-time average hourly earnings, as compared with 5.2 percent for the full year 1968. Wage increases, particularly in the nonmanufacturing sector, continued to accelerate, and the median first-year negotiated wage increase stood at 10.4 percent. In manufacturing industries, the first-year increase amounted to 6.9 percent.

BLS noted, however, that if the construction industry was excluded from computations of first-year wage-rate increases, the figures would decline to 7.3 percent for all industries, and 8.0 percent for the nonmanufacturing sector. Likewise, wage changes averaged over the life of a contract would drop to 6.1 percent for all industries, and 7.2 percent for nonmanufacturing.

Initial estimates indicated that median wage and benefit packages negotiated during the first nine months of 1969 showed an increase of 7.4 percent a year, compared with 6.0 percent for the full year 1968. If the actual timing of wage and benefit changes was considered, BLS said the median increase would amount to 8.1 percent.

Statistics

NEGOTIATION AGREEMENTS, 1968-69

Analysis of 2,605 negotiation agreements filed in the NEA Research Division's depository of agreements has been completed for the 1968-69 school year. These agreements, which cover only classroom teachers, were validated or effective during 1968-69, and represent an increase of 393 agreements over the previous year. In addition, over 100 administrator and supervisor or paraprofessional agreements were reported, but these have not been included in the 1968-69 edition of the Negotiation Agreement Provisions. All data were derived from the NEA Research Division's negotiation survey of school systems enrolling 1,000 or more pupils during the 1968-69 school year.

Two basic types of agreements, procedural and comprehensive, were analyzed and coded. Procedural agreements contain combinations of three elements: (a) recognition of an organization or elected committee which represents a unit of employees for negotiation purposes, (b) procedures for negotiation, and (c) procedures providing for the resolution of impasse. Comprehensive agreements may include some or all of the provisions found in procedural agreements, but they also contain specific items relating to personnel and conditions of employment which are negotiated and agreed upon by the parties involved.

Of the 2,605 agreements analyzed, 1,627 (62.5 percent) were procedural, and 978 (37.5 percent) were comprehensive. In 1966-67, comparable figures were 1,142 procedural agreements (74.6 percent), and 389 comprehensive agreements (25.4 percent) representing classroom teachers. Over the two-year period, the percent of comprehensive agreements rose, while the percent of procedural agreements fell. Comprehensive agreements increased by 151.4 percent. Eight new states—Arizona, Arkansas, California, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Utah, and Wyoming—reported at least one comprehensive agreement during the 1968-69 school year.

The tables summarize on a state-by-state basis the number of personnel represented by types of agreements (Table A-1), and the number of agreements analyzed (Table 2-A). In addition, both tables provide the appropriate data by type of affiliation, enrollment stratum, and region.

Table A-1 shows that 75.1 percent of all classroom teachers represented in recorded agreements are affiliated with the NEA, 17.4 percent are affiliated with the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), and 7.5 percent are affiliated with "other" independent organizations. Of the total number of classroom teachers covered by comprehensive agreements, 60.8 percent are represented by the NEA, 39.0 percent by the AFT, and 0.2 percent by other organizations.

Table 2-A indicates that 93.5 percent of all agreements analyzed were negotiated by NEA affiliates, 3.2 percent by AFT affiliates, and 3.3 percent by other representatives. Of the 978 comprehensive agreements recorded in 1968-69, 91.3 percent are attributed to the NEA, 8.0 percent to the AFT, and 0.7 percent to other organizations. This table also shows that the greatest increase in comprehensive agreements occurred in the East Coast region where 291 more agreements were reported in 1968-69 than the previous year. New York State was mainly responsible for this increase.

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX, NOVEMBER 1969

Data published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) indicate that the November 1969 Consumer Price Index (CPI) all items figure showed an 0.5 percent rise over the previous month. The November index reached 130.5, as compared to an October index of 129.8 (1957-59=100). Increases in nearly all kinds of consumer services and higher food and apparel prices accounted for most of the rise in the November index, which stood 5.8 percent higher than a year ago.

The CPI is designed to measure "average changes in prices of goods and services usually bought by urban wage earners and clerical workers, both families and single persons living alone." Prices of some 400 items which represent the price movements of all goods and services purchased by wage earners and clerical workers regularly are obtained in urban portions of 39 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas (SMSA) and 17 selected small cities. Price changes used in calculating the CPI are averaged and then weighted according to their importance in spending. In the total index, all SMSA and city data are combined and weighted according to the 1960 populations of SMSA's and the cities they represent. Index numbers are computed on the base 1957-59=100, and the CPI is rounded to one decimal point.

BLS estimates that approximately 161,000 workers will receive cost-of-living pay increases based upon the November CPI. Hourly pay increases ranging from 6 to 9 cents and based upon the May to November rise in the national CPI will affect some 86,500 workers, primarily those in the meatpacking industry; 55,000 workers will receive hourly increases of 1 to 5 cents according to the increase in the national index since August. And about 11,400 employees of various industries will receive hourly pay raises of 7 or 8 cents resulting from the change in the CPI since October 1968.

BLS noted that food prices, which usually decline slightly in November, rose 0.7 percent from October primarily because of significant increases in the prices of fresh vegetables and eggs. Most types of services rose during November with the greatest increases occurring in services connected with home-ownership. Medical care services registered a "relatively moderate advance" over October, according to BLS, and a significant rise in transportation services mainly was attributed to auto insurance rates and repair costs.

November prices of nondurable commodities, excluding food, rose 0.3 percent over the previous month, as the costs of feminine apparel, cigarettes, and alcoholic beverages jumped significantly. BLS noted, however, that these November increases partially were offset by a drop in gasoline prices in some areas. Consumer durables experienced a less than seasonal rise during November, and BLS said this reflected a decline in used car prices.

The tables provide a comparative study of the CPI all items index for 25 selected SMSA's or cities from 1959 to 1968 (Table 1), and for the first 11 months of 1969 (Table 2).

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE STATE OF DELAWARE:

Section 1.

Title 14, Delaware Code, is amended by adding a new chapter thereto as follows:

(b) "School district" means any school district or reorganized school district of the State.

(c) "Public school employee" means any certificated nonadministrative employee employed by a school district. Supervisory or staff personnel shall not be included within the meaning of the term "public school employee" as used herein.

§ 4002. Purpose

The purpose of this Act is to promote the improvement of personnel management and employer-employee relationships within the public school system by recognizing the right of the public employees to join organizations of their own choice and to be represented by such organizations in their professional and employment relationships with Boards of Education. (c) Dues shall be deducted by the employer for organizations representing employees only with the request and assent of the employee in writing.

§ 4004. Certification of Exclusive Negotiating Representative

(a) Any employee organization may petition the Board of Education for certification as the exclusive negotiating representative of the public school employees of a school district. Any such petition shall be dated and shall have annexed to it a list of the current members of said employee organization, certified as correct by an officer of said employee organization authorized to make such certification, and delivered to the Secretary of the Board of Education. Copies of such petition (but not of the list of members) shall be posted on the door of every school house in the district and in one other prominent place inside each school house in the district. The original petition, including list of members, shall be filed with the Secretary of the Board of Education for permanent record. ing negotiations, as prescribed by Section 4003 (b) hereof.

(b) In the event the Board of Education determines that a majority of its public school employees are listed as members of said organization, and the majority of such members have indicated a desire to be represented by the employee organization in collective bargaining negotiations as prescribed by Section 4003 (b) hereof, the Board of Education shall certify in writing not less than thirty days and not later than forty-five days after the filing and posting of said petition, that said organization is the exclusive negotiating representative of the public school employees of the school district, unless within said thirty day period a petition requesting the holding of an election is filed as hereinafter provided.

(c) If within 30 days after the filing and posting of said petition at least 30 percent of the total number of the public school employees of the school district file with the Secretary of the Board of Education a petition requesting that an election be held to determine the exclusive negotiating representative, such election shall be held not less than 30 days of receipt of the petition by the Secretary of the Board of Education, between the dates of September 1 and June 15.

(d) The local Board of Education may order an election to determine the exclusive negotiating representative.

(e) In the event that the Board of Education determines in good faith that an organization does not have the requisite membership for certification, or that an organization does not have the right to an election under Section 4004 (c), the organization shall have the right to appeal within thirty (30) days to the State Board of Education.

§ 4005. Conduct of Election

The ballot shall also contain an appropriate space for the public school employee to indicate "No negotiating unit desired."

(c) When an election is held the exclusive negotiating representative shall not be certified which does not receive an affirmative vote by a majority of the total number of public school employees eligible to vote in the election.

(d) An employee organization denied certification in an election as the exclusive negotiating representative of the public school employees of a school district under the provisions of this section shall be ineligible to petition said school district under Section 4004 for a period of one year from the date of such denial.

§ 4009. Rights guaranteed

The Board of Education and/or its designated representative(s) shall not interfere, restrain or coerce employees in the right to organize guaranteed by this Act, and in the absence of any certification as the exclusive bargaining representative all organizations seeking to represent public school employees shall be accorded equal treatment with respect to access to such employees.

No representative of any employee organization shall be permitted to solicit membership therein, or to solicit petitions or votes for the purpose of obtaining a collective bargaining agreement, on school property at any time, unless he shall be a bona fide employee of the particular school district involved and a member of the local employee organization whom he purports to represent. All election campaigning on school property during school hours shall be restricted to those areas reserved exclusively for teacher use.

§ 4010. Submission to an Impartial Committee

Whenever it appears to the Board of Education or the exclusive negotiating representative that a persistent disagreement exists with respect to salaries, employee benefits and working conditions as defined in Section 4006 (a-1) concerning which the parties have been negotiating, either the Board of Education or the exclusive negotiating representative may request mediation by any method mutually agreed upon. In the absence of such an agreement and within 10 days, the Board of Education and the exclusive negotiating representative should select a mediator by mutual agreement. In the absence of such agreement, and within another 10 days, a mediation committee, which shall consist of three persons, one selected by the exclusive negotiating representative, one selected by the Board of Education, and a third person selected by mutual agreement of both parties, shall be formed. The third person mentioned above will serve as chairman of the mediation committee.

In the event that fact-finding is requested by either party a fact finding committee will be selected by the method described above for mediation.

Within 21 calendar days of its existence, the mediation committee will issue a report setting forth the circumstances of the impasse and their recommendations for settling the dispute.

Any costs involved in resolving such an impasse shall be divided equally between the parties.

§ 4011. Observance of teaching contract

If any employee organization violates the provisions hereof, the public school employer shall refrain from making payroll deductions for that organization's dues for a period of one (1) year thereafter.

(c) No public school employee shall strike while in the performance of his official duties. For purposes of this section, the word 'strike' shall be deemed an unexcused absence.

§ 4012. Existing agreements

Nothing herein shall be deemed as a termination or invalidation of existing agreements between a Board of Education and an organization of public school employees, except to the extent that they are in conflict with provisions of this chapter.

§ 4013. Other statutes

The Act is intended to be in addition and supplementary to other laws of the State and shall not be construed to repeal any of the other provisions of Title 14, Delaware Code. If there is a conflict between any agreement arising under the provisions of this Act and a provision arising under any other Chapter of this Title, the provision arising under any other Chapter of the Title shall prevail.

LOUISIANA ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINION

Honorable Elmer G. Smith, Commissioner
Department of Public Safety
Bogalusa, Louisiana 70427

Honorable Thomas J. Mixon
Chief of Police
Bogalusa, Louisiana 70427

Gentlemen:

I have your letter of October 14, 1969, in which you request our opinion on the following questions which are quoted from your letter:

"1. Do police officers working for a municipality under Civil Service have any authority to join a labor union?

2. Are ranking members of the police department, which are considered part of management, entitled to join a labor union?

3. Does a labor union, at any time, have the authority to usurp the authority and power of a) the Municipal Fire and Police Civil Service Rules and Regulations, b) Departmental Orders and Rules and Regulations of the Police Department?

4. Could the union in which police officers here are members call a slow-down, picket line, or strike by police officers? Is this not expressly prohibited by law?

5. If in this State police officers are prohibited from being members or a part of any labor-union organization, then any contract signed between the Union and the City would be null and void, is this not right?"

There is substantial authority in Louisiana which indicates that police officers or other municipal employees may become members of a labor union. For example the case, New Orleans Fire Fighters Association Local 632, AFL-CIO and Oliver Bayard v. City of New Orleans, (1967) 204 So. 2d 690 upheld the validity of a contract entered into between the Association and the City of New Orleans, which contract pertained to the maximum hours of work of the firemen. Furthermore, R.S. 42:457 authorizes the state, parishes, and municipalities to deduct union dues from the pay of an employee when requested by the employee. This statute is legislative recognition of the right of public employees to belong to labor organizations. Therefore, the first question is answered in the affirmative.

The second question, likewise, is answered in the affirmative. We see no reason to distinguish between higher ranking members of the police and patrolmen. All are employees of the city and would be free to become members of the union.

A labor union cannot legally usurp the authority and power of either the Municipal Fire and Police Civil Service Board nor can a union legally usurp the powers of a Police Department regarding the making of rules and regulations. In a recent opinion of this office to Mr. M. J. Israel, Superintendent, Bogalusa City Schools, it was our conclusion that in any collective bargaining contract between a public agency and a labor organization, such contracts must contain a clause recognizing the rights of municipal employees under civil service. The clause should state that the contract is not detrimental to the rights of such employees, which rights are protected by Civil Service statutes or constitutional amendments. The third question is answered in the negative.

In answer to the fourth question, it is our conclusion that if a labor union of police officers called a strike or slow-down, this would be a wilful neglect of duty and would subject the officers, who participated in the strike or slow-down, to removal from office or other disciplinary action by the appointing authority (Constitution, Article XIV, Section 15.1 [30]. The tenure of permanent police employees under the Constitution is "during good behavior" and the refusal of a police officer to be present for duty at the proper time would be a violation of the following provisions of the Constitutional Amendment.

"(1) Unwillingness or failure to perform the duties of his position in a satisfactory manner.

(2) The deliberate omission of any act that it was his duty to perform.

(3) The commission or omission of any act to the prejudice of the departmental service or contrary to the public interest or policy.

(4) Insubordination."

In reply to the final question, since, as above indicated, a collective bargaining contract between a labor union and a city is legal, it is unnecessary to answer this question.

I trust that the above will sufficiently answer your inquiries, and I am Very truly yours,

/s/ JACK P. F. GREMILLION
Attorney General

MICHIGAN

AGENCY SHOP PROVISION IN PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT UPHELD

The Michigan Court of Appeals denied four Wayne County General Hospital nurses leave to appeal a circuit court decision which upheld the validity of agency shop provisions in public employee contracts. The Wayne County Circuit Court had refused to enjoin the discharge of nurses unwilling to comply with an agency shop provision found in a contract between Wayne County and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, District Council 23. And the appellate court refused to grant an appeal on grounds that "plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate an abuse of discretion by the trial court." (Barbara Pullen, et al. v. County of Wayne, Michigan, and American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, District Council 23, Michigan Court of Appeals, December 2, 1969.)

NEW JERSEY

SCHOOL BOARD'S UNILATERAL ADOPTION OF NEW PROMOTION POLICY DEEMED LAWFUL

Ruling on an appeal of a New Jersey Board of Education decision, the Appellate Division of New Jersey Superior Court held that the Newark education board's unilateral adoption of a promotion policy differing from one contained in a negotiated agreement constituted "a lawful exercise of discretionary authority." In so ruling, the court affirmed the state board's opinion that the Newark board properly "made its decision in terms of its overriding obligation to serve the needs of the children and the community."

In earlier district court litigation 10 white Newark teachers who stood at the head of promotion eligibility lists had contested the Newark board's change in promotion procedures after they had been bypassed for promotion to elementary-school principalships and vice-principalships. The teachers contended that procedural changes were instituted for the purpose of promoting more Negroes to positions for which they otherwise would not have been qualified, and that appointments made subsequent to the changes were based solely on race.

The district court ruled on August 14, 1969, that the Newark board did not discriminate against white teachers by suspending its competitive examinations and appointing more Negroes under the new procedure, which placed final promotion decisions in the hands of the Newark superintendent. (See page 5 of the November 1969 NRD for a summary of the district court's ruling.)

During the district court proceeding, the teachers also alleged that the board's unilateral adoption of a promotion policy which modified the terms of an outstanding agreement with the Newark Teachers Association (NTA) constituted a breach of contract. The superior court addressed itself to this allegation, ruling that "there can be no doubt" as to the enforceable nature of the NTA's contract, even though the New Jersey Employer-Employee Relations Act was enacted after the signing of the contract. It cited with approval the state education board's decision that "the law is not to be construed to imply that a board of education is not legally and morally bound to comply in good faith with the terms of any agreement consummated with its employees." Moreover, the superior court emphasized the state board's finding that "drastic, unilateral action can be sustained only in the face of a real threat or obstacle [emphasis added] to the proper operation of the school system, or in an emergency of equal importance."

While not contesting the enforceability of the contract, the Newark board maintained that its statutory authority to make and amend its rules applying to teachers empowered it to unilaterally change procedures. The board justified its action "on the grounds of statutory authority and educational necessity." As such, the superior court held that "the critical issue before us is whether the Newark Board had the right to adopt unilaterally an educational policy relating to promotions which was inconsistent with the procedure contemplated by an agreement voluntarily entered into with its employees."

In considering this issue, the court found it "significant that the challenged action of defendants eventuated after the period between July 13 and 17, 1967, when the city of Newark was violently shaken by widespread civil disorders." The court thus held it "only reasonable to assume that the city and state school authorities were seriously concerned about the impact of such disturbances upon the students and their parents, the community at large, and the general administration of the school system throughout the city." In so deciding, the court focused on the fact that since 72.5 percent of Newark's students are Negroes, "sound educational policy, philosophy and procedure requires minority group representation on the administrative policy-making level," and that "in order to appoint qualified Negroes, it was necessary to suspend the promotional lists."

In its conclusion, however, the superior court based its decision on the law of contracts, citing the state education board's ruling that the negotiated agreement "could not constitute a surrender by the Newark Board of its responsibility under the law to conduct the schools under its charge 'in the best interests of the children to be served' ":

> We endorse the principle. . . "that faculty selection must remain for the broad and sensitive expertise of the School Board and its officials," and this we do notwithstanding an existing employment agreement where subsequent conditions make impossible a literal performance of all of its terms. The essence of the modern defense of impossibility is that the promised performance was at the making of the contract, or thereafter became, impracticable owing to some extreme or unreasonable difficulty or the like "rather than that it is scientifically or actually impossible." . . .
> A fortiori, the concept of impossibility should prevail where a particular provision in a school contract is rendered impracticable by subsequent events demanding changes in an educational program in order to give meaningful effect to an overriding public policy. Moreover, it is well settled that specific performance will not be decreed if the performance to be compelled is contrary to public welfare.
>
> Implicit in the agency's decision here under review are findings that the Newark Board was in fact faced with "a real threat or obstacle" to the proper administration of its school system. The record before us, and the attendant public events that may be judicially noticed, support the findings of the Commissioner that the ex parte adoption of new promotional rules by the Newark Board, notwithstanding lack of approval by a majority of the NTA, was "warranted and appropriate."

PENNSYLVANIA

ARBITRATORS' FINAL AND BINDING AWARD JUDGED IN EXCESS OF ARBITRATION POWERS

An arbitrators' award which required the third-class city of Washington, Pa., to provide hospitalization coverage for families of city police department members at a rate "equal to the coverage now provided . . . for the member himself" was ruled an excessive exercise of adjudicatory power and vacated by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Although the Pennsylvania policemen and firemen collective bargaining act holds that an arbitrators' decision "shall be final on the issue or issues in dispute and shall be binding upon the public employer and the policemen . . . involved," the court emphasized that arbitration panels "may not mandate that a governing body carry out an illegal act."

When no voluntary agreement could be reached between the city of Washington in negotiation with its policemen, arbitration was entered into, and the award handed down on December 11, 1968. No procedural irregularities occurred in the arbitration process, but the city argued that the award was illegal and entered an appeals action in the Court of Common Pleas of Washington County. The trial court ruled that the city had no right to appeal the award.

The city then filed an appeal of the trial court's decision, and simultaneously petitioned the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to allow a direct appeal of the arbitration award under Rule 68½. It urged that the alleged illegal portion of the arbitration award be vacated on grounds that the arbitrators engaged in an excessive exercise of power.

The high court initially ruled that the "Court of Common Pleas of Washington County had no jurisdiction to hear this cause," because of the state statute authorizing final and binding arbitration on issues involving policemen and a public employer. Moreover, the court rejected the city's contention that Article V, Section 9 of the Pennsylvania Constitution allowed the city the right of appeal, saying that the constitutional provision was "inapplicable to the case at hand [because] an arbitration panel is neither a court nor an administrative agency."

But the state supreme court decided to hear the city's petition under Rule 68½ which states:

> If an appeal is prohibited by an Act, or the decision of the Agency is stated to be final or conclusive, the law is well settled that an appeal will lie to the Courts in the nature of a narrow certiorari, and this Court will review only (1) the question of jurisdiction; (2) the regularity of the proceedings before the agency; (3) questions of excess in exercise of powers; (4) constitutional questions.

In attempting to determine the limitations on an arbitration panel's adjudicatory power, the court found that "the enabling legislation which created the arbitration system here in question contains no explicit reference to the scope of the arbitrator's power." But the court decided:

> In spite of the fact that neither the relevant constitutional provision [Article III, Section 31, which provides in part that arbitration panel findings be "in accordance with law"] nor the enabling legislation clearly delineates the power of the arbitration panels, we are of the opinion that such panels may not mandate that a governing body carry out an illegal act. We reach this result by quite frankly reading into the enabling legislation the requirement that the scope of the submission to the arbitrators be limited to conflicts over legitimate terms and conditions of employment. . . . The essence of our decision is that an arbitration award may only require a public employer to do that which it could do voluntarily.

In addition, the court noted that third-class cities are non-sovereign bodies whose only powers are those expressly delegated by the legislature:

[A third class city may] make contracts of insurance . . . insuring its elected or appointed officers, officials and employees, or any class or classes thereof, under a policy or policies of group insurance covering . . . hospitalization [P.L. 927, 53 P.S. §37403-53].

As such, the high court ruled that the plain meaning of 53 P.S. §37403-53 makes it illegal for the city to comply fully with the arbitration award. We therefore hold that the panel committed an excess in exercise of power and we vacate that portion of the award directing the city to pay hospitalization insurance premiums for members of the policemen's families.

U.S. GOVERNMENT OVERSEAS TEACHERS' BACK PAY CLAIM REJECTED

In a decision adhering closely to legislative and judicial precedent, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia rejected a back pay claim filed by overseas teachers employed by the Department of Defense (DOD). The teachers had contended that the 1966 amendment and clarification of compensation provisions contained in the Overseas Teachers Pay and Personnel Practices Act of 1959 entitled them to reimbursement for alleged differences in pay from 1959 to 1966. But the court held that Congressional appropriation measures were meant to limit the expenditures of DOD's overseas dependents' school systems, rather than make overseas teachers' pay equal to stateside teachers' pay through the act.

Essential to the case was the court's interpretation of the 1959 act (Public Law 86-91), which authorized the Defense Secretary to issue implementing regulations governing "the fixing of the rates of basic compensation for teaching positions in relation to [emphasis added] the rates of basic compensation for similar positions in the United States" (5 U.S.C. §2352(2).

When originally issued, DOD's implementing regulations provided for an annual review of compensation schedules in comparison to rates of compensation in U.S. urban school jurisdictions with a school population of 100,000 or more. Then in 1966 PL 86-91 was amended to provide that overseas teachers' salaries "be equal to" comparable teacher salaries in U.S. school districts having a population of 100,000 or more.

Funds for the operation of overseas schools are allocated in DOD budgets on the basis of a "per pupil limitation," which is obtained by multiplying the aggregate expense per pupil by the total number of pupils. Teacher salaries are among the many costs chargeable to this limitation. Since 1960, DOD has asked Congress to increase the limitation, thus providing salary increases for teachers, but the court found that only in fiscal 1960-61 were sufficient funds appropriated to allow the Defense Secretary to pay salaries according to the act's implementing regulations. As such, the court emphasized that appropriations for DOD's overseas school systems seldom provide enough money to pay overseas teachers' salaries equivalent to those paid in U.S. urban school districts, once all other program expenses are paid.

The court also relied heavily upon a decision rendered by the U.S. Court of Claims in the case of Crawford, et al. v. United States (March 17, 1967). In this case, 2,975 teachers sought back pay from 1959 to 1966, contending that the 1959 act required "the secretary of each military department to fix the salaries of teachers in his department so that they would be equal to the salaries paid to teachers in similar positions in schools located in the District of Columbia." Moreover, they claimed that the "Secretary of Defense had no discretion except to pay the salaries as fixed by the Congress in the Act, and that continuing readjustment was mandatory without regard to the per pupil limitation contained in the appropriation acts of the Congress during the years that are relevant here."

In dismissing the case the Court of Claims rejected the teachers' argument that the words "in relation to" in the act actually meant "equal to," explaining:

It is a cardinal principle of statutory construction to give effect to every clause, sentence and word of a statute, if possible, rather than to distort the language so as to defeat the plain intent of the Congress. . . . When this is done with respect to Public Law 86-91, it is clear that it nowhere fixes [emphasis added] the salaries of overseas teachers equal to the salaries of teachers occupying comparable positions in the District of Columbia. To place such a construction upon the Act, we would be required to read into it words which are not there.

The court noted that Congress "merely set the boundaries of the program allowing the Secretary of Defense to fill in the details," and that Congress neither set salaries in PL 86-91 nor defined "the positions which were to be looked into in the United States as similar to those occupied by the overseas teachers." The Defense Secretary therefore exercised his "discretionary powers" in establishing salary procedures.

As to the teachers' claim that their salaries continually should have been adjusted, the Court of Claims said the act's legislative history provides no support for this argument, because appropriation guidelines made salaries subject to the per-pupil limitation, and Congress was aware of the Defense Secretary's interpretation of the act in appropriation hearings. Finally, the court rejected the argument that DOD had "unobligated funds" available for salary increases:

> Since we have recognized that increments to teachers salaries were limited by the congressional appropriations as set forth each year in the per pupil limitation, suffice it to say that the Department of Defense would have no authority to expend funds except for the purposes for which an appropriation was made....

In subsequent litigation, the Court of Claims' Crawford ruling was sustained by a federal appeals court, and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Teachers involved in the present case (those whose claims were not considered in Crawford) charged that the 1966 amendment to PL 86-91 merely restated salary obligations retroactive to 1959, i.e., that overseas teachers' pay should be equal to that of comparable teachers in U.S. school districts with a school population of 100,000 or more. The district court disagreed, saying, "Such is not the law. The views of a subsequent Congress do not provide any basis for inferring the intent of an earlier one."

In addition, the court rejected the argument that equal salaries (within the per-pupil limitation) could have been paid if the Defense Secretary had cut other nonsalary expenses. It cited the Court of Claims' ruling that such a determination is left to the "sound discretion" of the Defense Secretary and should not be overruled. Finally, the court rejected the teachers' last objection, explaining, "The fact that tuition fees paid in the Canal Zone are higher than the per pupil limitation does not alter the decision here made.... The per pupil limitation is only an average amount that can be spent for each pupil—not a limitation applicable to every area or school." (Homezell Chambers, et al. v. United States, U.S. District Court, Eastern District of Virginia, November 21, 1969.)

U.S. SUPREME COURT CRIMINAL CONTEMPT PROCEEDING DISMISSED

An appeal of a $250 fine and 15-day jail sentence levied against the president of the United Federation of Teachers (UFT) for his activity in the seven-week New York City teachers' strike of 1968 was dismissed "for want of a substantial federal question" by the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court's December 8 decision came on an appeal of a New York Court of Appeals ruling which upheld a criminal contempt conviction levied against the UFT president in February 1969 for violation of a court injunction against the strike.

In his appeal the UFT official argued that the New York state statutes, which have been interpreted to hold that public employees have no right to a jury trial in contempt of court proceedings, unconstitutionally denied him due process and equal protection of the laws. He accordingly urged the high court to overturn the New York statutes.

The Supreme Court issued only a per curiam decision granting the motion for dismissal, although two of the high court's judges were "of the opinion that probable jurisdiction should be noted." (Shanker, et al. v. Rankin, U.S. Supreme Court, December 8, 1969.)

Board Findings and Rulings

MASSACHUSETTS

ASSISTANT PRINCIPALS' BARGAINING UNIT RULED APPROPRIATE

The Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission (MLRC) ruled that a bargaining unit consisting only of assistant principals and excluding all other employees of the Boston School Committee was appropriate. In so deciding, the MLRC found that an existing contract did not bar a petition for election by the Assistant Principals Association of the Boston Public Schools.

In considering this representation question, the MLRC noted that the Boston School Committee had recognized and negotiated with an employee unit comprising assistant principals, department heads, division foremen, division heads, guidance counselors, and others. But the MLRC ruled this unit inappropriate, finding that assistant principals primarily are involved in administrative duties, while other unit employees are not. Moreover, assistant principals alone are eligible for promotion to principal.

The MLRC therefore held that a proposed bargaining unit composed of approximately 250 assistant principals employed by the school committee was appropriate. (Matter of City of Boston School Committee and Assistant Principals Association, Boston Public Schools, et al., Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission, October 24, 1969.)

DECERTIFICATION PETITION FILED BEFORE END OF CERTIFICATION YEAR FOUND TIMELY

A decertification petition filed before the end of a certification year during which a short-term contract had expired was ruled timely by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC). Although the contract between the International Union of Operating Engineers, AFL-CIO, Local 547, and the Lakeville Community Schools had been reopened for modification, no complete and legally enforceable written contract had been reached by the parties prior to the filing of the petition. The MERC therefore held that the permissible date for filing a decertification petition was governed by the expiration date of the short-term contract, rather than the certification year bar doctrine.

The case before the MERC involved a Lakeville Schools employee who was represented by Local 547 and had filed a decertification petition indicating that 30 employees did not want to be in the bargaining unit. An elections officer determined that sufficient interest in the matter had been shown to require a formal hearing.

When a question arose as to whether the petition was premature, the employee filed a second decertification petition on July 14, 1969, showing that 33 employees did not want to be represented in the bargaining unit. An informal election conference was held to consider the second petition, and Local 547 contended that the elections officer failed to check the showing of interest attending the second petition, even though the number of unit employees had been reestimated. The MERC rejected the union's argument, saying that once the showing of interest had been administratively determined, it was not open to a redetermination. Moreover, the second petition was filed within two weeks of the first, and the change in the bargaining unit's size was so little as to make it unnecessary for the MERC to recheck the showing of interest.

Although Local 547 had informed the Lakeville Schools that it wished to reopen the contract to negotiate some changes, the MERC found that the contract was in force only until June 30, 1969, and that the contract did not name that date. Both petitions consequently were timely, because they were filed after the expiration date of the contract, and no other written contract had been reached between the parties before the petitions were filed. In addition, the MERC found no evidence that Local 547 reopened the contract merely to extend its duration to the three-year limit allowed by the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act.

The union argued that it had no protection against a public employer who stalled negotiations until a contract expired, because public employees are prohibited from striking. But the MERC held that the remedy for such a situation is to file an unfair labor practices charge. (Matter of Lakeville Community Schools and Marjorie M. Walker, et al., Michigan Employment Relations Commission, November 7, 1969.)

NURSES INCLUDED IN TEACHER BARGAINING UNIT

The Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) decided that a bargaining unit composed of teachers also should include four school nurses in order to avoid unnecessary fragmentation of negotiation units. In so ruling, the MERC combined two employee units which formerly had been represented separately by the Taylor Federation of Teachers.

Finding that school nurses work closely with classroom teachers and perform duties which are an integral part of the educational program, the MERC determined that the appropriate single bargaining unit is the largest unit compatible with law and comprising all similar functions. (Matter of Taylor Township School District Board of Education and Taylor Federation of Teachers, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, December 2, 1969.)

PUBLIC EMPLOYER'S REFUSAL TO BARGAIN UPHELD

A school board's refusal to bargain when an impasse resulted in the negotiation of salary, calendar, and probationary period for school nurses was judged lawful by the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC). The MERC found no evidence that the Taylor Township Board of Education displayed a lack of good faith bargaining in negotiation with the Taylor Federation of Teachers (TFT), because neither party to the dispute was obliged to make concessions or agree to a proposal.

The TFT, representative of Taylor Township School District nurses, contended that the board refused to schedule bargaining meetings, failed to introduce counterproposals to the union's demands, and refused to bargain on the matter of wages for time worked. However, during the first year the TFT represented the nurses, no contract covering the nurses was negotiated with the board. When negotiation ensued the following year, some 100 issues were submitted and resolved through bargaining; three issues—salary, calendar, and probationary period—remained outstanding.

Although the board offered to pay school nurses on the basis of teacher salary schedules (as it had the previous year), a dispute arose regarding time worked. Nurses were required to work a 210-day year, as compared to the teachers' 184-day work year, and the board refused to adjust the nurses' pay schedule so they would be paid at a proportionate daily rate for all days worked in excess of 184. An impasse resulted. In regard to the probation issue, the board requested a two-year probationary period which the TFT reportedly agreed to. But, the TFT also asked that nurses be granted tenure following the probationary period.

A meeting between the board and the TFT was arranged in an attempt to resolve the three outstanding issues. At that time the board continued to propose the 210-day work year for nurses, and offered the nurses a salary schedule identical to that of district teachers. The proposed two-year probationary period was not altered.

As such, the MERC ruled that an impasse on three outstanding issues had developed, and that the board had not unlawfully refused to bargain. (Matter of Taylor Township School District Board of Education and School Nurses Division of Taylor Federation of Teachers, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, December 3, 1969.)

NEW JERSEY

BOARD TO FURNISH EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVES WITH VOTER INFORMATION

A New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) decision required the Newark Board of Education to furnish employee representatives with the names and addresses of eligible voters prior to the date of a representation election. The PERB also directed that a secret ballot election be conducted among the appropriate units of board employees.

The dispute before the PERC concerned a question of public employee representation in which the Newark Teachers' Union, American Federation of Teachers, Local 481, had filed a petition for certification, and the Newark board had refused to recognize the union as exclusive representative of certain teachers employed by the board. (Matter of Newark Board of Education and Newark Teachers' Union, Local 481, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission, October 21, 1969.)

NOTE: In an election held on November 18, 1969, Local 481 received 2,020 votes, the Newark Teachers Association received 571 votes, and 428 votes were cast for an organization of Negro educators.

NEW YORK

ELECTION DIRECTED IN MULTI-CAMPUS EMPLOYEE UNIT

The New York Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) affirmed the August 12 ruling of its director of representation by directing that an election be held in a multi-campus unit of faculty and professional personnel employed by the State University of New York (SUNY). In overruling an argument advanced by the State University Federation of Teachers (SUFT), the director had held that a single, state-wide unit of SUNY employees was appropriate for purposes of bargaining. The SUFT had urged creation of a "dual unit" so local issues could be negotiated separately at each campus, while issues common to all campuses could be negotiated jointly.

In rejecting the SUFT's objections to the director's unit determination, the PERB nevertheless agreed "with the argument advanced by the Federation in support of its contention for a 'dual unit' that in the course of negotiations there will evolve statewide issues and local or campus issues." But the PERB held that "it does not follow .... that the dual unit structure of bargaining sought by the Federation is a necessary or even a desirable approach":

> Rather the route urged upon us by the Federation would seem to lack the stability and responsibility necessary in the negotiating relationship. We feel on the record before us that a single state unit can provide meaningful and effective representation for the employees involved on both statewide and local issues.

The unit determined by the PERB's director includes more than 11,000 faculty and 3,554 non-teaching professionals at four state university centers, 11 four-year colleges, two medical centers, the College of Forestry at Syracuse, the Maritime College at Fort Schuyler, and six two-year agricultural and technical colleges. Excluded from the unit are community colleges, four Cornell University contract colleges, and the Alfred University contract college of ceramics.

The case before the PERB was complicated by confusion as to whether a representation or improper practices proceeding was involved. For, a major reason for the SUFT's appeal of the director's ruling was its objection to a decision that the SUNY's Faculty Senate and the Civil Service Employees Association appear jointly on the ballot and be certified jointly as unit representative if successful in the election. The SUFT contended that the Faculty Senate is a "creature of the employer," its operations are financed by the employer, and its constitution is part of the official policies of SUNY's Board of Trustees thus making any constitutional changes subject to employer approval.

Stating that the SUFT's whole argument "actually involves two questions," the PERB held that only "the first question is properly raised" in representation proceedings under the 1969 amendments to the Civil Service Law:

> (1) Is the Senate an employee organization within the meaning of Section 201.6 of the Act?
>
> (2) Has the Employer dominated or interfered with the formation or administration of the Senate?

The PERB explained:

> We do not believe that the question of employer domination or interference is properly raised in this proceeding.
>
> This conclusion is at variance with prior decisions of this Board wherein we did consider the issue of employer domination on the question of the qualification of an employee organization to participate in a representation proceeding.
> We feel that this change in Board policy is mandated by the legislative policy enunciated in the 1969 amendments to the Act effective September 1, 1969, relating to improper practices on the part of public employers and employee organizations.... Accordingly, it would appear to be the intent of the legislature that charges of improper practices be handled in a proceeding separate and apart from a representation proceeding.

In conclusion the PERB found that "an employer's domination or interference with an employee organization so as to deprive public employees of the free exercise of the rights granted to them by the Act is specifically proscribed by the legislature as an improper practice." Any such charges therefore should be brought in an improper practice proceeding over which the PERB has jurisdiction, according to the 1969 amendments. WISCONSIN

SCHOOL BOARD MUST PROVIDE EQUAL POSTING PRIVILEGES

The Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission (WERC) ruled that a school board may not grant a majority teachers organization exclusive use of bulletin boards and mailboxes for the purpose of posting and distributing information dealing only with organizational business. A prohibited practice complaint filed by the Milwaukee Teachers Union (MTU) against the Milwaukee Board of School Directors resulted in the decision.

In its complaint the MTU contended that its organizational rights had been violated by the Milwaukee board's enforcement of a contract provision negotiated between the board and the Milwaukee Teachers Education Association (MTEA). According to the contract, the MTEA was allowed to post and distribute materials relevant to its organizational matters, such as membership applications, promotional material, insurance information, and meeting notices. The MTU, however, alleged that its representatives were prohibited from distributing similar materials.

In ordering the Milwaukee board to discontinue enforcement of the contested contract provision, the WERC explained:

> The materials posted and distributed by the MTEA . . . did not pertain to its function as the exclusive bargaining representative of the teachers employed in the bargaining unit. . . but, rather, related to organizational and internal affairs of the MTEA; and that by permitting the MTEA to post said materials on the bulletin boards and to distribute said materials to the teachers through the use of teacher mailboxes, while denying to the Complainant the same opportunity to post and distribute the printed matter. . . the Respondent, by its agents, aided and assisted the MTEA and thus interfered with the rights of its teachers to engage in concerted activity and membership, in and on behalf of the Complainant.

The WERC ordered the board to "permit Milwaukee Federation of Teachers, Local 252 to post on bulletin boards and to distribute in teacher mailboxes, for a period of one week, within thirty (30) days from the date hereof, printed fliers with respect to its insurance programs, and with respect to benefits secured through its membership, and at least one notice of a meeting of said organization." Negotiation Notes

EMPLOYEE RELATIONS BOARD PROPOSED FOR LOS ANGELES

A draft ordinance submitted to the Los Angeles City Council on November 12, 1969, proposed the adoption of policies for formal recognition of employee organizations, and recommended that a three-member Los Angeles City Employee Relations Board be created to oversee implementation of a local labor relations program complying with the state's meet and confer statute. Members of the board would be appointed by the mayor from a list of seven names submitted by a nominating committee and confirmed by the council. Each member would be required to have "broad experience" in employee relations and to "represent neither a city management nor employee point of view."

The city ordinance, similar to one adopted by Los Angeles County in 1968, constituted phase two of a three-phase program which would affect some 18,000 city employees in departments directly controlled by the council and the mayor, and also could be extended to independent and semi-independent departments. Under phase one, which began in 1968, city employee organizations were granted "informal acknowledgment" and interim consultation privileges.

According to the state's public employee bargaining act,

"Meet and confer in good faith" means that a public agency, or such representatives as it designates and representatives of recognized employee organizations, shall have the mutual obligation personally to meet and confer in order to exchange freely information, opinions, and proposals, and to endeavor to reach agreement on matters within the scope of representation.

The proposed city ordinance grants the board power to designate meet- and-confer employee representatives, but city representation would occur on two levels: the city council would act on city-wide issues, while a departmental level decision would rest with the body involved or its manager. Other functions of the proposed board include holding hearings, making findings and issuing unit determination orders, ensuring fair secret ballot elections, investigating charges of unfair labor practices, and furnishing the names of third parties to aid in impasse resolution.

The proposed ordinance provides for mediation as the first step in the resolution of impasse. Should mediation prove unsuccessful, the parties involved may turn to fact-finding or "other appropriate measures" short of binding arbitration, but mutual agreement of the parties is required to involve a third party.

Employee organizations seeking formal recognition under the draft ordinance would be required to submit written proof that they represent "at least 30 percent of the regular employees in the proposed unit." And the board is directed to consider the following points in determining employee representatives:

1. The community of interest of employees.
2. The history of employee representation in the unit, among other employees of the City and in similar employment.
3. The effect of the unit on the efficient operation of the City and sound employee relations.
4. The extent to which employees have common skills, working conditions, job duties or similar educational requirements.
5. The effect on the City's classification and compensation system so that, to the extent feasible, no class is included in more than one representation unit.
6. The right of professional employees to be represented separately from nonprofessional employees.
7. That management, confidential or supervisory employees shall not be included in the same unit with other employees.

Once the board selects a representation unit, the ordinance requires a secret ballot election in which the unit must obtain a majority of the votes cast, provided that at least 60 percent of all eligible voters cast ballots. If less than 60 percent of the voters cast ballots, a majority of eligible voters would be required for the unit to be accorded formal recognition.

The proposed ordinance specifically provides that city employees have the right to "form, join and participate in the activities of employee organizations of their own choosing," but also may "refuse to join or participate in the activities of employee organizations," or may "represent themselves individually in their employment relations with the City."

LOS ANGELES COUNTY PROFESSIONALS FAVOR ASSOCIATION IN BARGAINING

Results of a series of representation elections conducted in professional and other white-collar employee units in Los Angeles County indicate strong support for collective bargaining, with most units choosing independent associations as their representatives. Announcement of the results was made by the Los Angeles County Employee Relations Commission, created in 1968 by an ordinance granting bargaining rights to county employees.

The Los Angeles County Employees Association (LACEA) was elected representative of one unit of librarians, and a unit of supervisory deputy probation officers through affiliation with the Supervising Deputy Probation Officers Association. These victories added 592 names to the LACEA roster, and combined the voting strengths of the LACEA and the association.

In other elections the California Association of Professional Employees (CAPE) gained four units covering 3,136 engineering and technical personnel, and the California Nurses Association (CNA) was granted bargaining rights for two of the country's largest nursing units which comprise 2,739 employees.

MINNESOTA

PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT RELATIONS COUNCIL CREATED

Announcement of a newly created Advisory Council on Public Employment Relations was made by the governor of Minnesota on November 23, 1969. The council will "examine the techniques and structures of wage and working condition negotiations between governmental agencies" and public employees, the governor said. In addition, it will submit recommendations for legislative and executive action to the governor, and state and local government agencies.

The governor explained that "the main thrust of council work during the next few months will be directed at existing shortcomings in the Public Employees Labor Relations Act and the Teacher-School Board Negotiations Law, plus extra-legal improvements in the standards of negotiations in school districts" and other governmental units.

MISSOURI

LIMITED PUBLIC EMPLOYEE BARGAINING LAW ENACTED

A 1969 amendment to the Missouri Revised Statutes excludes teachers from certain classes of public employees granted the right to organize and bargain collectively, and specifically prohibits public employee strikes. The act provides:

> Employees, except police deputy sheriffs, Missouri State Highway Patrolmen, Missouri National Guard, all teachers of all Missouri schools, colleges and universities, of any public body shall have the right to form and join labor organizations and to present proposals to any public body relative to salaries and other conditions of employment through the representative of their own choosing.

An exclusive bargaining representative is defined by the act as "an organization which has been designated or selected by majority of employees in an appropriate unit as the representative of such employees in such unit for purposes of collective bargaining." And the act holds that a public agency or its designated representative "shall meet, confer and discuss such proposals relative to salaries and other conditions of employment of the employees of the public body with the labor organization which is the exclusive bargaining representative of its employees in a unit appropriate." Discussion results are to be submitted in writing to the proper governing body "for adoption, modification or rejection."

The act further provides that unit determination and majority representative questions be resolved by the State Board of Mediation, with state circuit courts hearing appeals of board decisions.

NEW JERSEY

CONTRACT NEGOTIATED UNDER STATE PUBLIC EMPLOYEE ACT ENFORCED

A November 10 decision by the New Jersey Commissioner of Education enforced a contract negotiated under the state's Employer-Employee Relations Act by ordering the Trenton City Council to restore more than half of the $1.3 million it cut from the city's 1969-70 school budget. Among the budget items now to be restored are $328,545 for salary adjustments and $20,000 for major medical insurance premiums, both of which were negotiated last winter by the Trenton Education Association (TEA).

The commissioner's ruling resulted from an April 1969 Trenton school-board appeal of the budget cut, which was imposed by the city council in February. When the council instituted the cut, it reportedly was concerned about board approval of $400 across-the-board raises for Trenton teachers following a one-day teachers' strike on February 14.

In the appeal before a State Department of Education examiner, the city council alleged that "it was not consulted with respect to the negotiated [TEA] agreement, and is not therefore bound by it." The examiner said he found "no need to make a finding or recommendation on this contention," and ruled:

Testimony of witnesses and evidence stipulated by counsel . . . clearly demonstrate that the salary schedule provided by the Board is no more than competitive with those of four other school districts in the Mercer County area. It is the conclusion of the hearing examiner that the funds provided by the Board in its budget for salary adjustments are essential to enable the Board to compete for teachers as an urban district and to retain its experienced staff. The hearing examiner recommends the restoration of $348,545 for salary adjustments.

The examiner used the same "competitive position" argument in his recommendation that the major medical insurance funds also be restored. But this argument worked to the benefit of the council as well, for the examiner recommended that the council's cut of $30,000 for reimbursing teachers for graduate courses be sustained. The commissioner affirmed this finding.

RHODE ISLAND

ARBITRATION AWARD IN PROVIDENCE ACCEPTED AFTER STRIKE AND COURT PROCEEDINGS

A 12-day teachers' strike which began November 24 and affected 26,000 students in the Providence school system ended December 11 when the Providence Teachers Union (PTU), American Federation of Teachers, Local 958, accepted an estimated $1.9 million package contracted through August 31, 1971. Some 1,400 PTU members originally voted to "withhold services" following the Providence School Committee's request for a third extension of the 1968-69 contract, and its refusal to accept the award of a three-man arbitration panel which was announced publicly on November 19.

The arbitration panel, which is prohibited from making binding decisions on economic matters by state statute, had recommended a salary schedule for teachers with bachelors degrees progressing from $6,850 to $10,600 in 11 steps. It also recommended adoption of a two-year contract with a reopener on wages and other economic matters during the second year. The PTU accepted the award, but the city turned it down saying there were insufficient funds to finance the increase.

In the panel's report, the head of the arbitration panel, asked:

What is to be said of the fact that, in advance of submission of the matter to arbitration, the city "locked up" its budget so that, whether the effect was intended or not, the hands of the arbitration board might be effectively tied if it accepted this city's contention that it had no money to pay salary increases in the budget? Were that principle to be accepted, the Teacher Arbitration Act, and indeed any related measure, would soon cease to be of service.

He concluded that "it would seem that it would set a very bad precedent indeed if this board were to agree that its award should be governed by a claim that a budget was closed."

On December 2 the PTU issued an ultimatum calling for school committee concurrence with the findings of the arbitration panel, and stating that the PTU would demand its original salary proposal of a nine-step bachelors scale for 1969-70 proceeding from $8,500 to $17,300 if the arbitrators' award was not accepted. The ultimatum followed a Providence School Committee offer of a two-year salary package providing increases in the 1969-70 and 1970-71 school years. Although this offer represented an improvement over the committee's original proposal for a one-year extension of the 1968-69 contract, it was rejected by the PTU. On December 7, negotiations between the committee and the PTU were revived when a mediation panel appointed by the governor entered the dispute.

However, the city filed a court complaint against the PTU and its leaders which resulted in the December 4 issuance of a temporary restraining order enjoining any further strike activity by a superior court judge. The union and its leaders refused to comply with the order. On December 9 the city petitioned the court for a preliminary injunction against the strike. In granting the preliminary injunction, the judge held that nothing in the state Teachers' Arbitration Act should be construed to give teachers the right to strike. Again, however, teachers represented by the PTU voted to continue "withholding services."

Then on December 10 the judge issued a bench decision finding the PTU president and local treasurer (chairman of the PTU negotiating committee) guilty of civil contempt:

The Supreme Court of Rhode Island has twice declared unequivocally and clearly that governmental employees, in general and municipal school teachers, in particular, do not have the right to enforce their demands for increased salaries and better working conditions by the ultimate weapon of a strike. The legislature of this state has confirmed and republished this principle as recently as 1966 in the Teachers' Arbitration Act. There can be no doubt that under the present state of the law a strike by such municipal employees is illegal. . . . Their [the union leaders] conduct is worthy of the most severe and unequivocal condemnation. Let there be no mistaken belief that the members of the Providence Teachers' Union are battling for altruistic principle. They have in effect declared war upon the basic principle of our society—that the rule of law must govern. . . . The aspirations and aims and personal desires of segments of our society, however powerful or influential they may be, or however numerous they may be, cannot be permitted to impede or override the exercises of the judicial function.

The judge placed the two union officials in custody of the court, but later released them after they apologized to the court and expressed their determination to seek an end to the strike.

The settlement finally agreed upon on December 11 will implement the arbitrators' pay scale on January 22. Teachers also received assurances that there would be no reprisals for the walkout, and that they would be able to make up all lost time during the remainder of the school year.

NLRB ASSERTS JURISDICTION OVER PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL

The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) issued an opinion on December 15, 1969, to the effect that professional baseball is subject to NLRB jurisdiction under the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA). Citing lengthy Congressional and U.S. Supreme Court precedents, the NLRB held that "the effect on interstate commerce of a labor dispute involving professional baseball is not so insubstantial as to require withholding assertion of the Board's jurisdiction, under Section 14(c) of the [NLRA], over Employers in that industry, as a class."

The NLRB's opinion resulted from a dispute between the Association of National Baseball League Umpires and the American League of Professional Baseball Clubs in which the association sought an election in a unit of umpires employed by the league. The league, a nonprofit employer comprising 12 member clubs in 10 states and the District of Columbia, contended that application of the NLRA to it violated national labor policy because baseball's internal self-regulation is sanctioned by Congress, and any labor dispute occurring in such a self-regulated field is unlikely to have a substantial effect on interstate commerce. In addition, the league asserted that the association was not a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2(5) of the NLRA, and sought dismissal of the petition on grounds that the umpires seeking representation were supervisors as defined in Section 2(11) of the NLRA.

In denying the league's motion for dismissal, the NLRB found that "it will best effectuate the mandates of the Act, as well as national labor policy, to assert jurisdiction over this Employer":

> Baseball's system for internal self-regulation of disputes involving umpires . . . appears to have been designed almost entirely by employers and owners, and the final arbiter of internal disputes does not appear to be a neutral third party freely chosen by both sides, but rather an individual appointed solely by the member club owners themselves. We do not believe that such a system is likely either to prevent labor disputes from arising in the future, or, having once arisen, to resolve them in a manner susceptible or conducive to voluntary compliance by all parties involved. Moreover, it is patently contrary to the letter and spirit of the Act for the Board to defer its undoubted jurisdiction to decide unfair labor practices to a disputes settlement system established unilaterally by an employer or group of employers. Finally, although the instant case involves only umpires employed by the League, professional baseball clubs employ, in addition to players, [numerous other categories of employees] . . . . As to these other categories, there is no "self-regulation" at all. This consideration is of all the more consequence for . . . those [other] employees in professional baseball whose interests are likely to call the Board's processes into play . . . .

In addition, the board found "persuasive reason to believe that future labor disputes—should they arise in this industry—will be national in scope," because millions of dollars of interstate commerce are involved in the normal business operations of professional baseball, and the industry relies upon interstate travel.

The board also ruled that the association "is a labor organization within the meaning of Section 2(5) of the Act," and that baseball umpires are not supervisors:

> The record indicates that an umpire's basic responsibility is to insure that each baseball game is played in conformance with the predetermined rules of the game. . . . It is the manager and not the umpire who directs the employees in their pursuit of victory.
>
> Accordingly, we find that the umpires are not supervisors, and . . . we further find that the following employees of the Employer constitute a unit appropriate for the purposes of collective bargaining within the meaning of Section 9(b) of the Act:
>
> All persons employed as umpires in the American League of Professional Baseball Clubs, but excluding all other employees, office clerical employees, guards, professional employees and supervisors as defined in the Act.

The NLRB consequently directed that a secret ballot election be conducted among employees in the appropriate unit "as early as possible."

WHAT ARE TEACHERS NEGOTIATING?

The NEA Research Division's biennial analysis of teacher/board negotiation agreement provisions has been completed, and yields extensive data about classroom teacher agreements effective during the 1968-69 school year. Data for the 1968-69 analysis were compiled from documents in the NEA Research Division's depository of agreements with the aid and cooperation of local school systems and state NEA affiliates. A large portion of the classroom teacher agreements in the state of New York were analyzed by the New York State Teachers Association.

Of the 7,161 school systems with enrollments of 1,000 or more surveyed during the 1968-69 school year, 2,624 returned the survey questionnaire and validated negotiations with a copy of an agreement. Only those responding systems which filed a copy of their 1968-69 agreement were included in this analysis. In addition, only those agreements covering classroom teacher units were included in this report; administrator and paraprofessional agreements will be analyzed separately. Of the 2,605 classroom teacher agreements analyzed, 37.5 percent (978) were comprehensive. These comprehensive agreements covered 43.5 percent (420,118) of all teachers employed in school systems with negotiation agreements.

A comparison with similar data compiled in the 1966-67 analysis[1] reveals that the number of 1968-69 classroom teacher agreements increased 70.2 percent over the 1,531 agreements in the earlier survey. In addition, the number of 1968-69 comprehensive agreements covering classroom teacher units increased 151.4 percent over the 389 comprehensives surveyed in 1966-67. While only 13 states reported comprehensive agreements in 1966-67, 24 states and the District of Columbia reported comprehensives in the 1968-69 survey.

To date, the full impact of professional negotiation laws passed in eight states during the 1967-68 and 1968-69 school years probably has not been felt. New Jersey and Maryland were experiencing their first year under mandatory negotiation laws during the 1968-69 school year. Delaware, Maine, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Vermont passed professional negotiation laws as the 1968-69 analysis was being compiled. Since the 1966-67 analysis the total number of professional negotiation laws has increased from 15 to 23.

In the 1966-67 analysis, agreements were coded for approximately 150 content items. The 1968-69 analysis, however, coded over 300 content items. More than 48 of these items are new provision categories, while others are details of items included under broad topics in the earlier analysis. In addition, the 1968-69 analysis provides detailed information concerning leaves, salaries, insurance policies, committees, and grievance and negotiation procedures as they appeared in the various agreements. The exact number of leave days is given, as well as an indication of the rate of compensation. On the salary schedule certain benchmarks are recorded in figures rounded off to the nearest $10. The nature of board participation is indicated under insurance policies. For grievance and negotiation procedures, the arbitrator's decision is listed as either binding or advisory. For all joint committees the specific area of study is given.

In addition to this new information, the 1968-69 analysis provides (as did the former analysis) the name of each school system, the name and affiliation of each teachers organization, the number of personnel, the agreement's effective, reopener, and termination dates, and the page number in the agreement on which each provision is found.

It must be emphasized that if an item is not included in an agreement, it may be included in a state statute, or may be specifically excluded by a court ruling, state statute, or for some other reason. Certain items which have not been negotiated or changed by negotiation may continue in effect and be found in a given school system's policies. As such, this analysis is only a listing of provisions contained in 1968-69 negotiation agreements, not an all-inclusive listing of school system policies and practices.

The tables summarize the data contained in 1968-69 comprehensive agreements covering classroom teacher units. The number of comprehensive agreements and the number of agreements containing an indicated provision are presented on a state-by-state basis. A complete analysis is available in the three-volume Negotiation Agreement Provisions, 1968-69 Edition (for NEA affiliated associations, Stock No. 841-24058; for others, Stock No. 841-24056).

MICHIGAN

STATE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION CANNOT REVOKE CHECK-OFF FOR STRIKE

A Michigan Civil Service Commission (CSC) order which revoked dues deduction privileges of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, Local 1342, following a strike was vacated by the Wayne County Circuit Court on grounds that the order was an "arbitrary exercise of power." A bench decision issued by the court held that the CSC's order was "invalid" because CSC rules, regulations, and policies contained no provision for such a penalty.

In the first public employee strike defying Michigan's bargaining law (Hutchinson Act), a majority of the 80 order fillers and checkers at the Lincoln Park Liquor Control Commission warehouse participated in a 12-day walkout during September 1968. The strike ended when members of Local 1342 agreed to comply with a CSC back-to-work order which offered amnesty to the strikers, but threatened to fire any employees refusing to return.

Then the CSC issued a June 27, 1969, order which revoked the union's dues deduction privileges, rather than rescinding recognition of the union, because the commission found that all strikers had been suspended without pay or fringe benefits for the duration of the strike.

During the court proceeding the CSC argued that revocation of check-off privileges was a penalty implicit in a section of the commission's December 1, 1964, State Employee Relations Policy, which states:

> The Civil Service Commission is a public agency charged by the Constitution with the regulation of all conditions of employment with responsibility for the public interest of all citizens equally, granting recognition to employee organizations coming within the definition stated within this policy, and submitting to the Civil Service Commission: (1) a written request for recognition; (2) a roster of its officers and official representatives; (3) a copy of its objectives, its constitution and by-laws accepting the responsibilities set forth in this statement. Recognition shall continue so long as such organization satisfies the criteria for such recognition. Recognition will only be extended to those organizations which have a substantial and stable membership of employees of the agency.

But the court disagreed, finding that "under such statement of policy the only sanction that may be imposed by the Commission is the cessation of recognition of the particular employee organization, which organization was previously recognized under the policy." The court therefore concluded that the CSC order was invalid, explaining that > it imposes a penalty against a labor organization which is not expressly or impliedly provided for by the State Civil Service Commission in any of its rules, regulations, or policies.

> It appears to the Court that there is a hiatus or omission in the rules, regulations and policies of the State Civil Service Commission, insofar as penalizing labor organizations or employee organizations and that the State Civil Service Commission simply promulgated a decision imposing a penalty to meet the exigencies of the particular situation before it.

In vacating the CSC order, the court noted that its order could "only be prospective in action" because the check-off revocation had been in effect some six months prior to the court's ruling. (Michigan Civil Service Commission v. AFSCME Local 1342, Wayne County Circuit Court, December 8, 1969.)

NEW YORK

NEGOTIATED PROCEDURE WITH FINAL GRIEVANCE DECISION BY SCHOOL BOARD UPHELD

In dismissing a petition filed by six members of the Baldwin Faculty Association for additional compensation for extra work, the New York Supreme Court for Nassau County upheld a negotiated grievance procedure providing that a decision by the Baldwin Board of Education (USFD No. 10) "shall be final and binding upon the grievant, the administration, and the Association."

The case arose when six Association members who were guidance counselors employed by the board asked that they be reimbursed for collectively performing the work of an absent colleague. Contending that an agreement negotiated between the board and the Association entitled them to compensation for additional duties performed, they entered a claim on November 18, 1968. This claim was denied. Then they initiated a grievance according to the negotiated procedure by filing a memorandum with the Baldwin superintendent; the grievance was dismissed by the superintendent on December 30, 1968. Finally, the six members appealed the grievance to the board, which affirmed the superintendent's decision on February 21, 1969.

Claiming that the board's decision was "totally unsupported by a fair reading of the. . .agreement," the grievants entered a court petition. But the court dismissed the petition as "insufficient in law," explaining:

> The petitioner has moved to obtain rights which derive solely from the agreement between the parties, and it is doubtful that an Article 78 proceeding lies. In any event, however, the basis for such a proceeding here would have to be that the acts of the Board were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Although the petitioner has not claimed this in haec verba, this appears to be implicit in its petition. . . . In such posture, the Court cannot disturb the Board's finding unless it find[s] that there is no reasonable basis for it. . . . The Court determines that under the circumstances shown in this proceeding, it cannot find that the Board acted unreasonably, and the petition is to be dismissed.

Although the court dismissed the Article 78 proceeding, it acknowledged that "the grievants may have individual causes of action based on a breach of their employment agreement." But the court held that the present petition could not be treated as a suit for breach of contract. (Baldwin Faculty Association, et al. v. Board of Education, Union Free School District No. 10, et al., New York Supreme Court for Nassau County, September 30, 1969.)

PENNSYLVANIA

COURT UPHOLDS SCHOOL BOARD'S ACTION IN INTEGRATING FACULTY

Ruling that school officials are immune from civil liability when executing their official duties, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania upheld the Philadelphia education board's denial of a white teacher's request for transfer from a predominately black school to a predominately white school. In so deciding, the court granted a motion for summary judgment to the Philadelphia board and superintendent, and rejected a $4 million suit brought by the teacher for alleged violation of his Fourteenth Amendment rights of due process and equal protection.

The teacher, a physical education instructor at a predominately black Philadelphia high school, had requested a transfer to a similar, vacant position at another area high school on February 11, 1969. His application was rejected "because he is Caucasian," and because the faculty at the second high school was more than 90 percent white at the time. Arguing that "the Fourteenth Amendment precludes any and all state action predicated on race," the teacher filed suit seeking $1 million in compensatory damages and $3 million in punitive damages.

During litigation the Philadelphia board and superintendent contended that "their action was mandated by an order of the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission and by the terms of the 1968 Collective Bargaining Agreement between the Board and the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers." The court found that a complaint filed by the commission on October 19, 1967, alleged that transfer provisions contained in a 1966 contract between the Federation and the Philadelphia board "perpetuated racially imbalanced faculties." Prior to the commission's final decision, however, the 1968 Philadelphia contract was negotiated, providing for transfers to achieve faculty racial balance.

According to the 1968 agreement, first-year teachers could be transferred by the board without their consent, and starting teachers would be assigned in a manner compatible with achieving the maximum faculty racial balance possible. As a result of these provisions, the court found that "the Commission decided not to require any immediate action concerning the 1968 agreement."

But the court emphasized that the commission issued two conclusions of law which were binding on the board:

> 5. The provisions. . . [of] the Pennsylvania Human Relations Act require the respondent, School District of Philadelphia, to take affirmative steps to achieve racial balance of public school facilities.
> 6. The provisions of the collective bargaining agreement between the respondent, School District of Philadelphia, and the respondent, Philadelphia Federation of Teachers . . . may not provide procedures or rules governing the transfer of teachers where such procedures or rules prevent the effective achievement of racial balance in the public school faculties within a reasonable time.

The court accordingly concluded that "there is no doubt that the Board's action was mandated by the decision of the Commission," explaining:

> Under the statutory scheme, the Commission's orders are binding upon the parties to the adjudication. Enforcement thereof merely adds the possible sanction of contempt proceedings for violation of the enforcing court's decree, while at the same time insuring the respondent in the litigation an opportunity for judicial review before enforcement.

But the court was dissatisfied with the arguments advanced by both the Philadelphia board and the plaintiff teacher. Acknowledging that the board provided a reason for its denial of the teacher's request for transfer, the court nevertheless held that "the Board has not seen fit to articulate in this Court the precise legal significance of this fact." The plaintiff's Fourteenth Amendment argument also was problematic, because the court found that a corollary to this argument "would seem to be that state action designed to eradicate or alleviate existing de facto segregation or related conditions by affirmative measures which require consideration of race in their implementation are unconstitutional."

As a result, the court applied the doctrine of immunity to this case, declaring that "the law is now clear that when immunity is properly invoked, it constitutes a defense to an action for damages" such as those brought by the teacher. Moreover, the court held that "it is also clear that a person or entity acting pursuant to a court order is clothed with immunity derivatively." The court consequently found it "simply inconceivable that a municipal entity and its chief executive officer could be held liable in damages for actions which the Commission's decision required them to take." (Vincent J. DeFelice, Jr. v. Philadelphia Board of Education and Mark R. Shedd, Superintendent, U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, December 18, 1969.)

WISCONSIN

AMNESTY CLAUSE PREVENTS DISCIPLINARY ACTION AGAINST STRIKERS

A strike-ending amnesty agreement negotiated under Wisconsin's collective bargaining statute barred the Madison Board of Police and Fire Commissioners from taking disciplinary action against striking firemen, according to a decision of the Circuit Court for Dane County. Although the board previously had unlimited statutory authority to discipline strikers, the court held that "the good-faith promises of the City—whether rightfully or wrongfully made and contained in the amnesty clause—cannot and should not be permitted to be rendered meaningless by the Board."

The court's decision came on an appeal of a board order to suspend a fire captain said to have engaged in "contumacious conduct endangering the public safety" during a three-day strike which began March 27, 1969. Although the board originally chose not to bring charges against any of the strikers, it took disciplinary action when a city elector filed a formal complaint against the fire captain on June 30.

Local 311, International Association of Fire Fighters, appealed the suspension order on grounds that it violated the amnesty clause contained in the strike-ending agreement negotiated with the Madison Common Council:

> It is agreed that all legal proceedings commenced by the City presently pending against the Union and its members shall be dismissed with prejudice and without costs. It is further agreed that all causes of action whatsoever by the City which may arise or have arisen as a result of the negotiation and the strike by Union members in March, 1969, are hereby waived.
> Consistent with appropriate Wisconsin Statutes, it is the express policy of the City that it will not directly or indirectly commence an action that will in any way discipline any member of the Union or any employee represented by the Union for having participated in the events leading to the said strike or the participation therein or for any conduct in connection therewith.

During the court proceedings the union argued that the amnesty clause was binding, while the board contended that "the city had no authority to agree to such a clause and, in any event, it could not deprive the Board of its disciplinary powers under section 62.13, Wisconsin Statutes." The court rejected the board's argument, noting that previous decisions made it "quite clear that section 111.70, Wisconsin Statutes, authorizing collective bargaining, sanctions such an agreement."

Explaining that the state bargaining statute is to be "harmonized by construction" with earlier conflicting statutes, the court found that "it follows that the contract here is a valid one, even though its effect is to tie the hands of the City for a period of time in the proper exercise of certain governmental functions." The court therefore ruled that the board's previous statutory disciplinary authority must "yield to the power and responsibility of the City Council," according to the bargaining statute "which has been more recently enacted."

But the Court commented that "the more crucial question" was the effect the amnesty clause would have upon the "powers of the respondent herein":

> It must be borne in mind in resolving this question that the Common Council of the City possesses broad powers to act for the health, safety and welfare of its citizens. . . . In order to restore the fire protection and to provide for the public safety in the face of the firemen's strike, a settlement was finally negotiated. . . . As a concession to achieve an end to the dispute, the Council made a policy decision that it would not be in the public interest to take disciplinary action of any kind against the men who engaged in the strike.
>
> The decisions embodied in the agreement were made during mediation sessions while the strike progressed, and their obvious intent and purpose was to re-establish peaceful labor relations between the parties without revenge or recrimination. . . . In our increasingly complex society, the law should recognize and encourage the peaceful solution of any strike, whether it is in the arena of labor relations or elsewhere.

(Edward D. Durkin v. Board of Police and Fire Commissioners, City of Madison, Wisconsin Circuit Court for Dane County, December 15, 1969.)

Board Findings and Rulings

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

BUILDING SENIORITY UPHELD IN PARKING SPACE ASSIGNMENT

An arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association denied a grievance entered by a Washington, D.C., Negro teacher who contended that building seniority policies at Woodrow Wilson High School resulted in the racially discriminatory assignment of parking spaces on school property. Explaining that the principle of seniority "has been found to serve a useful and salutary purpose by giving priority in status or opportunity to employees with longer years of service," the arbitrator held that the high school's use of seniority to determine teachers' parking spaces "has not been shown to be an unfair practice under existing laws or Board of Education rules and regulations."

Wilson High School was an all-white school until 1967, so the grievant argued that the school's assignment of parking spaces on the basis of building seniority resulted in a racially discriminatory system. Moreover, she emphasized that 33 of the 37 parking spaces on school grounds were held by white teachers, that 15 of the white teachers with parking spaces had less system-wide seniority than she, and that 14 of those 15 teachers came to Wilson prior to 1967.

As Wilson teachers had voted for the building seniority system as a means of determining parking space allocations, the principal suggested that the grievant poll or petition the faculty for a change in the system before entering a grievance. Declining to do so, the teacher entered a grievance and was represented by her own counsel, because the Washington Teachers Union chose not to associate itself with the grievance.

In determining whether "the Board of Education [should] be required to overturn a parking assignment plan which satisfies all the teachers at Wilson, except one, and satisfies their union as well," the arbitrator explained that seniority is a "universally recognized" principle of labor-management relations. He also observed that the seniority rule "was adopted many years ago by the democratic process of voting by Wilson faculty members themselves, and. . .was re-confirmed by the faculty members between 1955 and 1967."

As to the racial discrimination issue, the arbitrator acknowledged that the figures presented by the grievant "are indeed striking," but held that > they do not establish that a discriminatory pattern was intended by the Board of Education, which . . . did not dictate or establish the building seniority system used at Wilson and six other senior high schools, as well as at some eight junior high schools. Nor is there any basis in the evidence for holding that there is a "discriminatory pattern" in the system voted by the teachers themselves and approved over the years, and acquiesced in by all the teachers, of both races, except the grievant. It can surely not be called a scheme or tactic to perpetuate an objectionable system, since it has been and is open to them to change or abolish it by their votes. Indeed it was open to [the grievant] to initiate such a move, and, as has been already stated, she was twice invited to do so . . . and she twice declined to do so, for the stated reason that she did not have the time.

>
> The assignment of parking spaces to teachers based on seniority at Woodrow Wilson High School has not been shown to be an unfair practice under existing laws or Board of Education rules and regulations, and the grievance . . . must be denied.

(Woodson and District of Columbia Board of Education, American Arbitration Association, March 5, 1969.)

MICHIGAN

SCHOOL BOARD'S FAILURE IMMEDIATELY TO REPORT BUDGET ERROR CONSTITUTES LACK OF GOOD-FAITH BARGAINING

The Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) found that a school board's refusal to acknowledge, communicate, and assume responsibility for a negotiation error constituted a refusal to bargain in good faith. Noting, however, that the school-board members who testified before the commission exhibited a genuine inexperience in collective bargaining, the MERC declined posting a notice, and ordered the parties to return to the bargaining table.

The case arose when the Big Bay De Noc Education Association charged the local school district with an unfair labor practice after the district refused to implement an agreement agreed upon by the parties. At a certain bargaining meeting, the school board president had introduced monetary figures which he indicated were the substance of a board offer to the Association. These figures were put into writing, and the resultant document was signed by both parties. Then on the same day, school-board members discovered that the offer was erroneous, because the salaries of the high school principal and the superintendent of schools mistakenly were included in the base figure offered and agreed upon.

Four days after the bargaining meeting the board president told Association negotiators that the proposal agreed upon had been rejected by the board. Two days later the proposed economic agreement was accepted by district teachers, and the superintendent informed the teachers that the agreement had been rejected by the board.

The MERC accordingly concluded that the board's failure immediately to notify the Association of the error, its rejection of the proposed agreement, and its attempt to shift the blame from its own error to the Association constituted a lack of good-faith bargaining. (Matter of Big Bay De Noc School District and Big Bay De Noc Education Association, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, December 16, 1969.)

STUDENT EMPLOYEE GROUP CONSTITUTES A LABOR ORGANIZATION

In deciding that an ad hoc group is eligible for recognition as a labor organization, the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) assumed jurisdiction over an organization of student employees at Wayne State University which sought a representation election. The MERC explained that, although the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act does not define a labor organization, the definition contained in the Michigan Labor Mediation Act has consistently been applied:

> The term "labor organization" means any organization of any kind, or any agency or employee representation committee or plan, in which employees participate and which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of dealing with employers concerning grievances, labor disputes, wages, rates of pay, hours of employment, or conditions of work.

Members of the Wayne State University Board of Governors had contended that the University Workers Organization Committee is not a labor organization because it is "composed entirely of students and would not have the permanence, experience, or strength necessary." The MERC rejected this objection, saying that "the fact that Petitioner has an informal structure is irrelevant." Moreover, the MERC determined that the committee is a "labor organization within the meaning of the statute," because "the Petitioner is an employee representation committee or plan in which employees of the Employer participate and which exists for the purpose of dealing with the Employer concerning wages, hours, and working conditions."

But the MERC dismissed the committee's petition for a representation election in ruling that the appropriate unit had not been determined. The committee had sought an election among a unit of student assistants and technicians employed by the university press, the mail room, the receiving department, and the printing and addressograph department. During the hearing, it revised its petition to include all 54 student assistants working in the university's general services division on grounds that this constituted an appropriate "residual" bargaining unit.

The university, however, argued that the division-wide unit was inappropriate since it would be composed entirely of students, and that the requested unit was only a fragment of an appropriate, single, all-student bargaining unit. Declining to rule on the university's first argument, the MERC determined that the appropriate unit is one of all student assistants employed by Wayne State, because "all of the student assistants and technicians employed by the University are under the same general policy . . . and they work under similar working conditions and rates of pay."

In so ruling, the MERC explained that the 1,500 to 1,700 student assistants and technicians employed in the university's 12 divisions assist regular full-time employees, work fewer hours and earn less than regular employees, receive none of the normal employment benefits, do not expect full-time employment, and work an average of two academic quarters in the same job.

The MERC therefore concluded that "to establish the appropriateness of the unit it seeks, Petitioner herein must show that there is a community of interest among the employees in the sought-for unit, and that the community of interest of these employees is different from those in the unit proposed by the Employer." NEW JERSEY

DIRECT DISCRIMINATORY EVIDENCE LACKING IN UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE CHARGE

An unfair labor practice charge brought by a teacher whose contract was not renewed was dismissed by the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) on grounds that "the Complainant has failed to meet its burden proving the allegations of the charge by a preponderance of the evidence." A majority of the commission's members ruled that "the [school board's] failure to explain its refusal to grant [the teacher] a contract, despite favorable recommendations and absent unfavorable comments, may not, standing alone, be viewed as conclusive evidence that the [New Jersey Employer-Employee] Act has been violated."

The teacher, an employee of the West Deptford Township Board of Education, was denied a teaching contract for a fourth, tenure-conferring year, although her principal and the superintendent had recommended that she be rehired. She accordingly charged that she was a victim of reprisal because her husband, president and chief negotiator for the West Deptford Education Association, was involved in difficult contract negotiations at the time.

During the PERC hearing, testimony on the teacher's behalf alleged that three board members had shown antagonism toward the teacher's husband in negotiation, that an acting principal and former teacher believed reprisal was evident in the teacher's dismissal, and that the school board had not allowed the teacher to resign, although it had done so with three other teachers. The PERC, however, rejected this testimony as inconclusive, explaining:

> The statements made in this case, which were ambiguous at best and uttered in the context of negotiation sessions, are not found to be violations of the Act nor are they found to be antithetical to the purposes of the Act. Similarly, these remarks do not warrant an assumption that the Board exhibited an animus toward the Association or [the teacher's husband] so as to justify a presumption that action against [the teacher] was an act of reprisal predicated upon her husband's activities. Furthermore, none of the statements expressly or impliedly indicate a threat or suggestion of reprisal against [the teacher] or any adherent of the Association.

Noting that only one of the three board members who participated in negotiations and allegedly displayed antagonism toward the teacher's husband actually vetoed renewal of the teacher's contract, the PERC held that "there is no evidence in the record that any of the other three Board members who voted against renewing [the teacher's] contract exhibited a predilection to engage in reprisals against any employee because of his activities on behalf of an employee organization." Although the PERC found that the board's failure to explain its dismissal action "may be viewed with suspicion," it ruled that > this does not warrant a finding that it was violative, per se. However, the Commission believes that it would have been better practice for the Board to have set forth its reasons. Its failure to do so, though not condoned, does not require a finding that the Board's action constitutes an act of reprisal. . .because of her husband's activities on behalf of the Association.

The PERC also dismissed the acting principal's testimony because it did "not warrant a finding that she spoke for the Board in this instance." And in considering the allegation that the board did not allow the teacher to resign, the PERC held that "the record. . .does not reveal that [the teacher] sought this opportunity or that others were given this right in similar circumstances without their making such a request." As such, the commission concluded that "the evidence on this point does not establish that [the teacher] was treated in a discriminatory fashion because of her husband's activity." Moreover, the PERC noted that the board "did, in fact, renew [the contract of the teacher's husband] and did, in fact, execute a collective negotiation agreement."

Two PERC members, however, dissented from the majority opinion, stating that they did "not believe that the Commission should insist upon evidence of a direct nature and reject evidence from which inference may be drawn." Arguing that "to do so would be to deny employees the basic protection" against unfair practices provided by the state's bargaining act, they commented:

> In the instant matter, the undisputed evidence presented to the Hearing Officer leaves no doubt that [the teacher] was an excellent and able teacher and that her supervisors recommended that her employment be continued. It is also clear from the uncontested evidence that [the teacher's] husband did engage in negotiations with the Board on behalf of the Association which was the majority representative of the unit of its employees representing its teachers during which strong feelings were aroused.
>
> There is some evidence to show that the failure to retain this excellent teacher was because of her husband's activities on behalf of the Association to which she also belonged. The Board had every opportunity to refute this by showing its reasons or those of its members.
>
> Its failure to do so lends credence to the conclusion that it was because of Associational Membership and activities and therefore in violation of . . . the law.

LENGTHY NEWARK SALARY IMPASSE JEOPARDIZES SCHOOLS

The Newark education board's refusal to accept a report submitted by a New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) fact-finder on March 25, 1969, prolonged a salary impasse between the board and the Newark Teachers Association (NTA), and caused the PERC to conclude after a second fact-finding inquiry on June 20, 1969, that > the duty and obligation of the Board is to maintain, operate and supervise an adequate public school system for some 74,000 children. The Board's concern for the financial condition of the City, while commendable, was beyond the scope and authority of the Board. The Board should not be concerned about the source of revenue, the allocation of funds by the City or the possible difficulty in levying taxes to meet the City's obligations. . . . The people, the school children and the teachers in Newark should have assurance that the schools will be open this fall and that the teachers will be paid salaries which are fair, reasonable and competitive with the surrounding communities. It is the duty and obligation of the Board of Education to do this and it is the duty and obligation of the City Council to provide the funds to accomplish this result through a non-political re-examination of all of its administrative costs and the elimination of all non-essential services, plus convincing appeals to the state and federal authorities for assistance in providing all essential services to avoid the interruption or breakdown of the Newark public school system. Neither the City of Newark nor the State of New Jersey can afford to let this happen.

On June 19, 1967, the Newark board and the NTA entered into a written agreement covering the period from February 1, 1967, to February 1, 1970, and providing a reopener after December 1 of each year on "all budget items concerning teachers' salaries, fringe benefits, working conditions and related matters in the school budget for the following fiscal year." The contract further stipulated that negotiation on such items terminate on February 1 of each year—"the statutory date for submission of the budget to the Board of School Estimate"—and that either party might request appointment of a mediator in the event of impasse.

Four negotiation meetings dealing with salary schedule and other items accordingly were held in December 1968 and January 1969, but no agreement was reached. Pursuant to provisions in the negotiated agreement, the NTA notified the PERC on January 30, 1969, that an impasse had been reached, and requested appointment of a mediator. Then on February 4, the Newark board submitted a budget totaling $65,287,000, but providing no salary increases for teachers, to the Board of School Estimate. On the same date a mediator was appointed by the PERC.

The Board of School Estimate approved a budget of $63,287,000—$2 million less than the requested amount—on February 11. Meanwhile, mediation proved unsuccessful, and the PERC appointed a fact-finder on February 28. Then on March 10 the Newark City Council reduced the board's budget by an additional $2 million to $61,287,000. Eight days later the PERC fact-finder submitted a report finding that the parties "disagree on the items that are properly in these negotiations," and suggesting that "our recommendations be confined to the salary schedules for teachers, cafeteria managers, school clerk stenographers and recreation directors at this time on the assumption that the resolution of these issues will enable the parties to negotiate a settlement of all the other issues as well."

In considering the salary schedule data submitted by the NTA and the Newark board, the fact-finder noted the "evident need of the Newark school system to remain competitive with other communities," and the city's particular financial difficulties. He accordingly recommended a salary schedule (effective September 1, 1969) which "would represent a fair and equitable basis for settlement of the salary schedule, a basis that meets the teachers' legitimate salary needs, is within the fiscal limits of the City's capability, and is adequate to permit the effective continuation of public education in Newark":

- $700 increase at each step of the B.A. schedule
- $800 increase at each step of the B.A. plus 32 hours' schedule
- $900 increase at each step of the M.A. plus 32 hours' schedule
- Differential for recreation directors of $40 per month ($400 per year) above maximum when reached
- $400 increase at each step of the school clerk stenographers' schedule
- $400 increase at each step of the cafeteria managers' schedule.

The NTA accepted the fact-finder's report on March 11. That same day, a public hearing on the school budget was held, and the president of the Newark board said that "the only reason the Board has not negotiated an increase in salaries for its staff is its acute sensitivity to Newark's financial crisis."

Following the public hearing, the Newark City Council restored $2 million to the school budget, raising the total to $63,287,000. But the Newark board rejected the fact-finder's recommendations on March 25 pleading "a lack of funds." As a result, the PERC reconvened the fact-finding inquiry on June 20. Subsequent to this inquiry, the second fact-finder determined:

The record supports the fact that the [original] Fact Finders' recommendations are reasonable and in line with surrounding communities. The Board contends that the Fact Finders' recommendations are erroneous in stating that the recommendations are within the fiscal limits of the City's capabilities. The Board admits salary increases are justified and that the salaries paid to teachers in Newark should be higher than surrounding communities to attract qualified teachers.

The Board could have adopted a salary policy, including salary schedules, for all full-time members of its teaching staff in an amount sufficient to assure quality education in the Newark public schools. Such a policy, when adopted, would have been binding for a period of two years. Every school budget thereafter approved by the Board, the voters of the district, the Board of School Estimate, the City Council or the Commissioner of Education, as the case may be, would have to contain amounts of money necessary to implement the salary policy. This procedure would have assured the Board of the necessary funds and it could have entered into agreements with the teachers. Thus this impasse would have been resolved.

The fact-finder outlined a five-point recommendation in his report, which was adopted by the entire PERC on July 24:

- Appointment of "a little Hoover commission" composed of leading Newark businessmen and city administration experts for the purpose of investigating and studying "all items in the expense budget of the City and [reporting] to the people with all deliberate speed"
- Reconsideration and adoption of the fact-finder's recommendations by the Newark board
- Board review of its budget "in order to see if there are any items which can be cut down, cut out, deferred or delayed," followed by the preparation and submission of a new budget to the Board of Estimates if the present budget was found to be inadequate
- NTA reaffirmation of its acceptance of the fact-finder's recommendations
- In the event the city cannot balance its budget after implementing the fact-finder's recommendations, then extensive appeals should be made to the state and federal governments for the necessary funds.

The education board, however, again rejected the fact-finder's recommendations, and the 1969-70 school year opened with no salary increases. Then on November 18 the Newark Teachers' Union, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Local 481, won a local representation election. (Matter of Board of Education of the City of Newark and Newark Teachers' Association, New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission, July 24, 1969.)

NOTE: A similar situation faces the Jersey City public schools, for city officials reportedly have taken action to suspend all future funds for the city's schools in an effort to force the state to finance public education. The Jersey City Board of Estimates, supported by the mayor and the city council, rejected the education board's proposed budget of $28,670,227, and the mayor announced that he would file suit in Hudson County Superior Court "to require the state to live up to what we believe to be its constitutional obligation to support public education in this state."

Negotiation Notes

COLORADO

SCHOOL BOARDS MAY NOT ENGAGE IN COLLECTIVE BARGAINING ACCORDING TO ATTORNEY GENERAL

An opinion issued by the Colorado attorney general on November 17, 1969, held that state school boards may not negotiate with employee organizations "if the process results in the surrender of any of the discretionary authority of the board of education." In response to a series of five questions raised by the state commissioner of education, the attorney general explained that > when we discuss "bargaining" and "negotiating" we mean a procedure whereby the parties attempt to reach an agreement on points of mutual interest which will be binding on both sides and which by its very nature will allow or require a school board to act contrary to its free choice, or to otherwise surrender any of its lawful duties, responsibilities, or authority.

Noting that "local school boards. . .are subdivisions of state government created for the purpose of carrying out the educational policies of the state," the attorney general emphasized that "school boards have only those powers expressly conferred by the Constitution or statutes of the state." And he specifically stated that "there is no [state] statute granting school boards the power or duty to recognize groups of employees for collective bargaining purposes, or to engage in such bargaining."

The opinion also cited a Colorado Supreme Court decision in Fellows v. LaTronica which held that "a proper exercise of the legislative function (of fixing standards of qualifications, tenure, compensation, and working conditions) might well involve consultation and negotiation with spokesmen for public employees, but the ultimate responsibility [emphasis added] rests with the legislative body and, under the record here presented, that responsibility cannot be contracted away." As such, the attorney general determined that > a local school board may, in the exercise of its authority to set standards of employment, entertain the suggestions of any person, group, or organization, relating to the content of next year's teachers' contracts. Moreover, the board may properly adopt any or all of such suggestions, and incorporate them into the teacher contracts, so long as the board does so through the unfettered exercise of its own discretion. However, because there is no statutory authority, no person, group, or organization has the right to tell the board how, and to what limits, it will exercise its legislative function. Nor can the board be made to listen to, or accept, the suggestions, advice, or demands of any person, group, or organization which the board does not wish to hear or to accept.

The attorney general further held that "absent specific statutory authority, a school board may not negotiate or bargain with representative groups concerning the employment or discharge of teachers." Citing a Colorado court decision reached in Snider v. Kit Carson School District, he said the "power to employ or discharge teachers is exclusively vested in the school board and [can] not be delegated to any other body or official."

CONNECTICUT

TEACHERS FOUND INELIGIBLE FOR UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION DURING SUMMER

The Connecticut attorney general ruled that since teachers are employees of school boards, rather than municipalities, they are ineligible for unemployment compensation benefits during their jobless summer months. Explaining that school boards are legally "creatures of the state," the attorney general overruled arguments dealing with the duration of teachers' contracts:

> Because the contract of employment between the public school teachers and the boards of education is a continuing contract and because the teachers are subject to the control of the boards of education during the various periods of the year in which the schools are not in session, the teachers are on vacation as a matter of law and hence disqualified from receiving unemployment compensation benefits in respect to such absences from their regular employment.

The attorney general's opinion responded to an inquiry from the Connecticut Labor Commissioner as to whether legislation which extended unemployment compensation benefits to employees of state political subdivisions could also be applied to teachers during the summer months.

DELAWARE

LAW REVOKING SCHOOL ADMINISTRATORS' TENURE IS INTERPRETED

An opinion issued by the Delaware attorney general's office concluded that a recently enacted law which amends the Delaware Code and redefines "teacher" by excluding school administrators "removes from the Teacher's Tenure Law school administrators who had acquired tenure at the time of the passage of this Act as well as school administrators employed after the passage of the Act."

Ruling that the administrative personnel excluded from the law "will not acquire tenure as long as they remain in the administrative position category," the opinion explained that the act "gives to any administrator who has or shall acquire the equivalent of tenure the right to be assigned as a teacher in the employ of the Board, and also the right to negotiate with the State for a term contract up to five years."

The controversial law (House Bill 318) amends Section 1401, Title 14, Delaware Code to read:

> "Teacher" means and includes all persons certified to teach and who are employed by a Board as a teacher. It shall not include persons employed as assistant principal, principal, supervisor, administrative assistant, director, assistant superintendent, or superintendent; except that any such person who has completed three years of service in the State, two years of which shall have been in the employ of the same Board, may at his option elect and he shall be granted the right to be assigned as a teacher in the employ of said Board.

In addition, H.B. 318 amends Chapter 13, Title 14, Delaware Code by inserting a new Section 1328, which provides that "nothing in this title shall be construed as prohibiting the Board and any assistant principal, principal, supervisor, administrative assistant, director, assistant superintendent, or superintendent from entering into an employment contract for a period of up to five years."

In response to an inquiry made by an official in the Dover Department of Public Instruction, the attorney general's office explained that the new act contains two provisions indicating that it "was intended to have a retrospective application." These provisions are the alternatives available to administrative personnel excluded from the act: (a) the right to be assigned as a teacher, and (b) the right to enter into an employment contract with the state for up to five years. As such, the opinion held that > these two exceptions in the Act. . .indicate a legislative intent to afford some protection to those who lose tenure rights by the Act and to those who therefore may acquire the equivalent of tenure rights. In our opinion it appears from the Act in its entirety that the Legislature intended to take away any tenure rights that the specified persons have already obtained and to reclassify such persons so as to exclude them from tenure rights afforded a "teacher" as newly defined.

Given the retrospective application of the law to administrative personnel who had acquired tenure prior to its enactment, the opinion then determined that tenure rights can be withdrawn by statute:

> We believe that the Delaware tenure statute and similar statutes in other states set up tenure as a status rather than as a contractual right and thus create a policy which can be withdrawn. The Delaware tenure statute contains no reference to any contract or contractual right.
>
> A teacher's tenure statute of New Jersey similar in principle to the Delaware teacher's tenure statute was held by the United States Supreme Court in Phelps v. Board of Education . . . not to be violated by a late amendment removing rights that had been acquired under the statute to which it was an amendment. According to the court, the teacher's tenure statute "established a legislative status for teachers" but not a contractual one that the Legislature might not modify or abolish, [although] the Delaware teacher's tenure statute like the New Jersey statute before the Court in Phelps . . . sets up a policy whereby a teacher who acquires tenure status shall be given certain rights before his services can be terminated.

Delaware teachers reportedly are alarmed by the opinion because they fear their own tenure may be subject to revocation or modification if the legislature can revoke the tenure of administrators by altering the definition of "teacher."

IOWA

NO-STRIKE CLAUSE IN DRAFT BARGAINING BILL VOTED DOWN

In drafting a bargaining bill to be considered by the 1970 state legislature, an Iowa committee of legislators and laymen voted on December 12 to exclude a strike ban from its proposal. The 8-5 vote upheld the committee's present proposal which grants the right to strike to all public employees except policemen, firemen, peace officers, security police at state institutions, and other employees whose work is "necessary for the public health, safety, and welfare."

As the committee still is attempting to define which jobs are essential to the public health, safety, and welfare, it has yet to determine the status of the state's 33,073 classroom teachers. In its present form, the committee's proposal would permit strikes only if all negotiation and mediation efforts fail, and wildcat walkouts would be prohibited.

Moreover, the present proposal would not allow state employees to bargain until one year after the measure's effective date, so that the difficulties of coordinating public employee bargaining with the state's merit system could be resolved.

NEW JERSEY

VOLUNTARY DISPUTE SETTLEMENT URGED

The executive director of the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC) emphasized the "tremendous need for public employers, public employees and employees organizations to educate themselves as to the procedures available to them to resolve disputes." Speaking before a conference of the New Jersey State League of Municipalities, he said that the PERC > is one government agency which would be happy to grow no larger and would be most pleased to return money to the Treasury .... An agreement of the parties, bilaterally achieved, is more beneficial in the long run than any solution of a third party. We therefore implore all parties to exercise good faith and an honest desire to achieve agreement and thereby stop our growth.

In reviewing the activities of the PERC during its first year of operation, the director discussed procedures for resolving unit determination disputes. Stating that the PERC "is charged with giving due regard to the community of interest among the employees concerned," he explained:

> Thousands of decisions have been written in the public and private sector dealing with community of interest. A listing of the factors would at best be incomplete.... Some factors which have been utilized by some public employee labor relations agencies [include]: (1) similarity of duties, (2) skills and working conditions, (3) job classifications, (4) employee benefits, (5) the amount of interchange or transfer of employees, (6) the integration of the employer's physical operations, (7) the centralization of administrative and managerial functions, (8) the degree of central control of operations, including labor relations, (9) promotional ladders used by employees, (10) supervisory hierarchy, (11) common supervision. The parties should, therefore, be prepared to present evidence bearing on these factors, among others. The parties should also be prepared to fully set forth their respective positions and arguments in support of such positions.

While noting that the commission provides other dispute settlement avenues such as mediation and fact-finding, the PERC director emphasized that confidential mediation costs are borne by the PERC, but public fact-finding efforts must be paid for by the parties involved. He added that if "the parties continue to fail to reach an agreement, the Commission may then take whatever steps it deems appropriate to effect a joint settlement, including a public inquiry."

The PERC director also summarized four of the Commission's important decisions:

- In a ruling on state colleges, the PERC deemed appropriate separate bargaining units at each of the six colleges. "This decision was predicated upon a finding that the employees looked to the individual college for their day-to-day supervision, each college affected the tenure of its staff and governed its working conditions, and there was a measure of local autonomy in each of the State Colleges," the director said.
- The PERC also found appropriate an employee unit at the Orange, N.J., Department of Public Works, because "the employees in that Department did not interchange with employees in another department, they had their own supervisor and they were not functionally related to the employees in the other departments of the City."
- In a case involving the Middlesex Welfare Board, the PERC decided that casework supervisors "were not supervisors within the meaning of the [New Jersey Employer-Employee Act] where the authority possessed by these individuals did not comport with the definition contained in the Act, and that the title of supervisor did not impart authority standing alone."
- Finally, the PERC ruled that "where the Act specifically excluded the superintendent of a Board of Education as being a managerial executive, somebody acting as a coordinator of elementary education was not a superintendent of schools or his equivalent and was, therefore, not precluded from being represented by an employee organization."

NEW YORK

CATHOLIC LAY TEACHERS NEGOTIATE FIRST CONTRACT

A newly organized Catholic Lay Teachers Group, Inc., certified by the state labor relations commission in October 1969, approved on January 19 a contract covering 2,500 lay teachers in the New York City Catholic schools. The two-year contract reportedly represents the first contract providing for both elementary and secondary teachers in Catholic schools. The Archdiocesan Association of Parish Elementary and Parish Secondary Schools, an organization of 301 schools conducted by parishes and religious orders in New York City and seven upstate counties, is the second party to the agreement.

Salary scales for elementary teachers will rise from the current scale of $5,000-$8,000 to $5,800-$8,800, according to the new agreement, which is retroactive to September 1, 1969. In addition, the contract provides for a second-year pay increase of $500 for elementary teachers. Secondary-school teachers' salaries will rise from the current $5,300-$11,300 to $6,800-$12,800 per year, and a $400 increase is provided during the second year of the contract.

The contract further provides for employee-paid Blue Cross-Blue Shield medical coverage for dependents, major medical coverage, and $2,000 of life insurance coverage. Leave days consist of eight days' sick leave, and two "personal days" per year, with a possible accumulation of 45 days. Moreover, teachers may accumulate a sick leave bank at the rate of three days per year with a maximum accumulation of 75 days after 25 years' service.

A grievance procedure ending in arbitration also is contained in the contract. And, as of 1971, tenure will be granted to all teachers with three or more years of experience.

U.S. GOVERNMENT

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF LABOR RELATIONS COUNCIL APPOINTED

M. Vernon Gill has been named executive director of the Federal Labor Relations Council (FLRC) created by Executive Order 11491. According to the FLRC chairman, Gill will serve as staff director and chief operating officer for the FLRC.

A federal employee for more than 30 years, Gill has been acting as assistant to the Civil Service Commission chairman for labor-management relations, and chairman of the National Wage Policy Committee. He also served as an alternate to the 1969 study committee which produced recommendations resulting in Executive Order 11491. Prior to this he served on a 1967-68 Johnson administration committee studying the government's labor relations program, and on a 1961 task force which provided the foundation for President Kennedy's Executive Order 10988, predecessor of the new order.

OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX, DECEMBER 1969

Figures released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) indicate that the Consumer Price Index all items figure for December rose 0.6 percent over the previous month to 131.3 (1957-59=100). The December 1969 all items index stood 6.1 percent higher than a year ago. BLS attributed about one-half of the December increase to higher food prices (particularly eggs and fresh vegetables), while increases in services were responsible for the remainder of the rise.

BLS estimates that approximately 134,000 workers will receive cost-of-living increases based upon the December index. Some 85,000 workers will receive pay increases based upon the rise in the national index since December 1968, and another 24,000 workers will receive hourly wage increases of 3 to 5 cents based upon the rise in the national index from September to December 1969.

As of December, the purchasing power of the consumer dollar stood at $0.762 (1957-59=100), according to BLS computations.

NEW PUBLICATION ANNOUNCED

Arbitration in the Schools, a new monthly publication which first appeared in February 1970, provides brief summaries of numerous grievance arbitration awards and fact-finding recommendations handed down throughout the country. The eight-page report is published by the American Arbitration Association (AAA) in cooperation with the National Education Association, the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, and the National School Boards Association.

Each issue also contains a listing of the cases and arbitrators reported. And each summary is coded according to the subject matter of the arbitration case. Periodic indexes will be published according to subject matter and arbitrator.

The full texts of all awards reported in Arbitration in the Schools are kept on file at the AAA, and photo copies may be obtained from the AAA at 30 cents per page.

POLL SHOWS RISE IN MEDIAN MINIMUM SALARY FOR POLICE PRIVATES

A survey conducted by the Washington, D.C., Personnel Office found that the median minimum salary for police privates in cities with a population of over 500,000 was $617 higher than 1968 salaries. The median figure for 1969 was $7,722; for 1968, $7,105. In addition, median maximum pay for privates increased from $8,700 in 1968 to $9,213 in 1969, a rise of $513.

The survey, similar to one conducted in 1968, studied salary trends, fringe benefits, recruitment, and promotion policies in 23 U.S. cities with a population of over 500,000, and six suburban jurisdictions in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area. Noting that 16 of the 23 cities gave salary increases in 1969, and that six of the remaining seven cities are considering granting pay raises soon, the survey report concluded that the "vigorous upward movement of police salaries" is the result of a "continuous reexamination of police salaries by jurisdictions."

Median starting salaries for higher police positions showed bigger increases in the cities than in previous years. In the suburban jurisdictions surveyed, salaries for higher police jobs were found to be competitive with or a little higher than salaries in comparable city jobs, except in the highest classifications.

Five of the six D.C. surburban areas surveyed granted raises in 1969, but the median starting salary for police privates in those suburbs did not increase as much as the salary of privates in the cities. However, median maximum pay for privates in the suburbs climbed over $1,200—from $8,758 in 1968, to $9,993 in 1969—and now stands more than $700 higher than salaries in comparable city jobs.

The 1969 survey again pointed to regional disparities in police salaries, with far western cities paying the highest salaries, southern cities the lowest, and midwestern and eastern cities ranging in between. Starting salaries for police privates in the Far West ranged from $8,340 to $9,936, while maximum salaries ran from $9,600 to $10,668. In the Midwest and the East, starting pay for privates ranged from $6,384 to $9,499, and maximum salaries varied between $8,148 and $11,004. Starting salaries for police privates in southern cities ran from $6,227 to $7,200, and maximum salaries varied between $7,080 and $9,660. In the suburbs surveyed, the pay range was much narrower, with starting pay ranging from $7,696 to $8,112, and maximum pay varying between $9,852 and $10,316.

ERRATUM: The November 1969 DIGEST printed a summary of an Illinois circuit court decision which ruled legal a local school board's granting of personal leave days "for teachers represented by the bargaining unit." This is erroneous, for the court carefully stipulated that its order pertained only to "the class of employees represented by the plaintiffs." Plaintiffs in the case were custodial employees, not teachers. Moreover, an Illinois education official states that "it is still the opinion of the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Illinois that this ruling does not apply to teachers and, since the jurisdiction of the court rendering the opinion is rather limited, this would not apply to other than teaching personnel in most of [the] state."

JOINT COMMITTEES ESTABLISHED IN COMPREHENSIVE CLASSROOM TEACHER AGREEMENTS

Joint committees comprised of classroom teachers, administrators and/or school-board members frequently are established in teacher-board negotiation agreements. The NEA Research Division's analysis of 1968-69 negotiation agreements effective in school systems with 1,000 or more enrollment reveals that, of the 978 comprehensive classroom teacher agreements, 513 (52.45 percent) contain provisions establishing at least one joint committee.[a]

Three different types of joint committees have been identified according to the purpose for which they were created. The first committee is one meeting regularly for the purpose of dissolving potential areas of conflict through continuous discussion between teachers or their representatives and the school board. The second type of committee is a general study committee usually designed to engage in continuing or long-range investigations of a wide variety of subjects affecting the teacher-board relationship, of the school system itself.

The third classification is that of specific joint committees. These consist of teacher-administrator-board committees which are established to study or plan within specific, narrowly defined areas. For example, teacher and school-board negotiators may decide to negotiate a provision concerning the development of special education programs, but find they are unable to determine the exact nature of the program, the amount of money needed to run it, or the type of personnel needed to staff it. Instead of postponing the problem, they negotiate a provision for a specific joint committee. Two purposes thereby are accomplished: an agreement provision which can be developed in future negotiation sessions is established, and a vehicle for planning the program with joint cooperation and a free exchange of ideas is created.

Other types of joint committees may be established when the specific area of concern is expected to be a continuing one. For instance, joint committees to review applicants for sabbatical leave commonly appear to be ongoing committees which apply staff expertise to a specific problem requiring continuous evaluation and administration. Inasmuch as these committees have an administrative function, they were not recorded as committees in the 1966-67 or 1968-69 analyses of negotiation agreements. They were recorded as regular provisions.[b]

Of the 513 comprehensive classroom teacher agreements providing for at least one joint committee, some have one committee fitting only one of the three categories of committees. Others have many committees which fit more than one category. Each agreement was analyzed for only one committee which meets regularly, and only one general or professional study committee. Thus, the number of agreements with these two types of committees is identical to the total number of these committees established. In addition, each agreement was analyzed for a total of eight different specific joint committees, consequently making the number of agreements with this type of committee and the total number of these committees different. The above table shows the relationship between the number of agreements and the number of committees established.

The two-year comparison (1966-67 and 1968-69) in Table 1 shows the number of comprehensive classroom teacher agreements establishing committees. Table 2 presents a slightly different perspective on the two-year comparison by indicating the number of committees of each type as a percentage of the total number of committees established by agreements. General or professional study committees constitute a smaller percentage of the total number of committees established in 1968-69, than in 1966-67. However, committees which meet regularly and specific joint committees have increased as a percentage of the total number of committees.

Table 3 gives the number of 1968-69 agreements in each state with the various types of committees, and the percentage of comprehensive agreements in each state which provide for the various types of committees. The categories established in this table are not mutually exclusive.

[b]These figures indicate the total number of agreements with each type of committee as a percentage of all comprehensive agreements (978) effective for the 1968-69 school year.

Table 4 shows the area of study or planning for all specific joint committees established in agreements effective for the 1966-67 and 1968-69 school years. This table indicates that the number of different areas of study or planning has increased from 30 in 1966-67, to 57 in 1968-69. In both school years the greatest number of specific joint committees was established in the areas of instructional program, and personnel policies and practices. In 1968-69, the number of committees in these two areas rose slightly more than 14 percent above the number in 1966-67, and comprised nearly 90 percent of all specific joint committees established.

Provisions from agreements which establish various types of committees are reprinted here. These provisions represent a sample selected on the following bases: variation in approach, extent of detail concerning structure or guidelines, types of committees, and geographical distribution. All provision sections dealing directly or indirectly with the committee established are reproduced in full.

Article V—Teacher/Administration Liaison

A. 1. The Association shall select a Building Committee of no less than two teachers per school, and no more than one teacher per twenty teachers from each school, which shall be responsible for liaison with the principal in the implementation of this Agreement within the school.

2. The principal and the Building Committee shall meet regularly once a month and at such other times as may be mutually agreeable, and, if held during the school day shall not be scheduled during class time, and shall not interfere with instruction. The meetings shall be for the purpose of reviewing and discussing local school problems and practices, and matters relating to the implementation of this Agreement.

3. The principal shall provide ten (10) minutes of time at all building faculty meetings for the Association to report on matters involving representation of the teachers by the Association.

4. Members of the Building Committee who are free from assigned duties shall be permitted to meet with teachers at times and places in the school mutually convenient, provided such meetings do not impair or curtail the instructional responsibilities to the pupils of any teacher. The Association and its officers recognize and agree that this privilege shall not be abused.

B. 1. The Association shall select a Central Committee of not more than six (6) members which shall meet with the Superintendent and other such administrators as he may designate regularly once a month and at such other times as may be mutually agreeable to review and discuss current school problems and matters concerning implementation of this Agreement.

2. When it is necessary for the President of the Association or his designee to engage in Association activities directly relating to the Association's duties as representative of the teachers which cannot be performed other than during school hours, upon approval of the Superintendent or his designated representative upon reasonable notice, he shall be given such time, without loss of pay, as is necessary to perform any such activities. The President of the Association or his representative shall be allowed to visit schools to investigate terms and conditions of employment relating to this contract. Upon the arrival of the President or his representative at any school, the principal, or in his absence, his representative, shall confer with the President in order to facilitate the purpose of the visit. Whenever possible, the President shall give advance notice of his visit and, on his arrival, report his presence to the office. The teaching schedule of the President of the Association shall be so arranged as to give him the last period free to conduct Association business when necessary. The Association and its officers recognize and agree that this privilege shall not be abused.

C. 1. The Association shall be provided with copies of the agenda for Board meetings and copies of the tentative budget at the same time as they are transmitted to Board members. The Association shall be provided with five (5) copies of the minutes of Board meetings as soon as they are available after such meetings.

2. The Association shall have the right to have two (2) members present at all regular Board and Committee-of-the-Whole meetings.

GENERAL OR PROFESSIONAL STUDY COMMITTEE

Quincy School District, Quincy, Massachusetts

Article VII—Conditions of Professional Service

The Committee and the Association have deliberately agreed not to include provisions in this Contract respecting some of the conditions affecting the performance by members of their professional duties. Such omitted matters include, by way of illustration and not of limitation, the teaching loads of individual teachers and the basis upon which parent-teacher conferences, professional workshops and curriculum planning sessions may be held in the light of regulations promulgated by the state Board of Education regarding the length of school day. Such matters are omitted not because the parties regard them as unimportant but because the parties believe that they require further careful joint study since they are affected by the rapid pace of change in educational technology and theory and, in part, are subject to rules and regulations promulgated by agencies of the Commonwealth. In addition to such conditions, the Committee and the Association consider that there are a number of areas affecting the performance by members of their professional duties, as to which practices not now in effect in the Quincy school system and practices not yet developed by any public school system may make great contributions toward improving not only the quality but also the efficiency of the educational process in the Quincy public school system. Such areas include, by way of illustration and not of limitation, the use of nonprofessionally trained personnel to perform pupil supervision tasks outside the classroom, clerical tasks, the reproduction of instructional materials, and the like. They also include the possibility of measuring the obligatory portion of a teacher's work day in terms of the time required to perform professional functions rather than a stated number of hours, the possibility of a separate contract year and separate compensation arrangements different from the academic year and compensation related thereto for volunteer professionals who might undertake special professional leadership and development assignments, the possibility of so reorganizing the classroom teaching function as to permit more effective use of superior classroom teachers and the possibility of identifying and describing characteristics of professional performance so as to permit more meaningful evaluation thereof.

Accordingly the parties agree that a Professional Conditions Committee (PCC) shall be established to consist of twelve members of whom six shall be designated by the Association and six by the Committee and of which there shall be co-chairmen, one chosen by the Association designees and the other by the Committee designees. The PCC shall establish its own times of meeting and rules and procedure and shall have the right to meet with the Committee at reasonable times, not more often than once every two months unless by mutual agreement. The PCC may establish sub-committees to consider particular matters and particular matters within the jurisdiction of the PCC may be considered by others, but all proposals respecting such matters shall come to the PCC for consideration and presentation to the Committee and the Association. The PCC shall consider as priority matters cited above by way of illustration but shall have the power to consider, and to make recommendations to the Committee respecting, any matter relating to the hours and conditions of employment of members. The Committee and the Association shall give serious consideration to the recommendations of the PCC and shall discuss the same as they may mutually find appropriate.

Except in case of emergency or order from superior authority or as permitted by Article VIII, the Committee shall not make any change in the length of the school day or in any policy or practice, not the subject of specific agreement in this Contract, relating to the conditions of employment of members unless the same shall first have been referred to the PCC with a reasonable time for consideration and report thereon by said Committee.

GENERAL OR PROFESSIONAL STUDY COMMITTEE/SPECIFIC JOINT COMMITTEES

Saginaw School District, Saginaw, Michigan

Article XXV—Professional Study Committees

The Board of Education and the Saginaw Education Association agree that there are many parts of the educational program which require study and improvement. The Board and the Association will give every consideration to the recommendations of these committees with the intent of improving the educational program as rapidly and as judiciously as possible.

A. A Professional Study Committee consisting of three (3) members selected by the Board and three (3) members selected by the Association shall be established. This shall be a continuing committee which shall meet on a regular basis to consider problems of mutual concern and to recommend methods of improving the Saginaw educational program. Among other things, the committee shall consider federal grants to be requested by the Board.

B. Joint committees consisting of three representatives of the administration and three representatives chosen by the Association shall be established. Function and powers of each committee shall be as specified.

4. Curriculum. This committee shall study and make recommendations concerning curriculum development and improvement. It shall serve as a clearing house for ongoing projects which have significance throughout the district. It shall assist the Superintendent and/or his agents in district-wide curriculum planning. Sub-committees may be appointed by this committee as needed.
5. Class Size. The Board and the Association agree that further reductions in class size limitations set forth in Article VI are desirable. This committee will consider priorities in class size reduction and make recommendations concerning such reduction.
6. Job Description and Compensation. This committee will study the prerequisites, duties, possible functions, responsibilities, monetary and released time compensation of such activities as secondary department heads; industrial, commercial and vocational teachers; special teachers such as art, music and reading; and coaching of athletics. This committee will make recommendations concerning job descriptions and compensation.
7. Non-teaching and Co-curricular Activities. This on-going committee shall be empowered to recommend for immediate implementation actions which will reduce non-teaching functions required of teachers. It shall also review co-curricular activities and recommend means of recognizing their value to the district on an equitable basis.
8. Teacher Evaluation. This committee shall study the procedure and forms for teacher evaluation as presently in use here and in other districts, as well as other professional improvement procedures and make recommendations for a program.

9. Teacher Recognition. This committee shall explore means, such as those used in other systems, to reward outstanding service.

SPECIFIC JOINT COMMITTEES

Curriculum Review

Airport Community Schools, Carleton, Michigan

A. At the request of the Board or the Association, a curriculum review committee may be established. Its membership shall be composed of teachers concerned with the topic under review and administrators concerned. No committee will be concerned with more than one topic. The goals and objectives of the committee will be set forth in writing. When the committee report is completed, the report will be presented to that group of teachers and administrators concerned, for discussion, by the committee chairman. Thereafter, a final report, in the form of a recommendation, will be made to the Board of Education, by the chairman.

B. A half day will be used during the first week of October, for a general meeting of all teachers. From this meeting shall come suggestions of "topics for review." A committee of the administration and the Association shall pick out the most urgent topics and form committees of study.

C. One half day will be used during the first week of April, for a general meeting of all teachers. At this meeting a report will be given to all the teachers, by each committee chairman.

D. During the school year, committees will meet whenever their time allows them. Special requests may be made to the superintendent, for released time of committee members, for the purpose of completing committee assignments.

Hiring of Specialists

Foster-Glocester Regional Schools, North Scituate, Rhode Island

Article IX—Specialists

A. The Committee and the Association recognize that an adequate number of competent specialists is essential to the operation of an effective educational program. The parties agree to establish a joint committee to study the needs for specialists in the school system and to report their findings and recommendations to the Superintendent when complete.

San Diego Unified School District, San Diego, California

Article III—Tax and Bond Elections

Therefore, whenever the Board of Education begins planning for a tax or bond election, the Board representative shall invite the Negotiating Council to participate with the district in a joint study on the subject.

Section 2: The San Diego Certified Employee Negotiating Council and the Superintendent shall authorize establishment of a joint study dealing with plans for a school district bond election. The scope of the study shall include, but not be limited to, the following provisions:

A. The amount of the bond issue and the extent to which it should provide for:
   1. Room darkening facilities in each classroom so as to permit adequate use of audio-visual equipment.
   2. Water in all portable elementary classrooms.
   3. Adequate student restroom facilities at all sites and Children's Centers.

Textbook Selection

Akron Public Schools, Akron, Ohio

Article III, Section 3.51—Facilities

The Board of Education is desirous of providing each student with an individual copy of all textbooks which, in the judgment of the professional staff, the student will need in the courses to which he is assigned. Questions about the desirability of individual texts shall be submitted to an advisory committee of six teachers appointed by the Assistant Superintendent of Curriculum and Instruction and the President of the [Akron Education Association], each to appoint three. The Assistant Superintendent shall serve as chairman of committees and shall render the final decision.

Class Size

Highland School District, Highland, Indiana

Article XX, Section 20.1—Teaching Conditions and Facilities

The Board, through its Administration, will sincerely foster the dedication expected of the teachers by planning constructively to provide the best possible teaching conditions and teacher facilities attainable within the limits of educationally sound expenditures.

Class size is an important aspect of an effective educational program and is directly related to the volume of a teacher's work. It is agreed that class size should be lowered whenever possible to reasonable standards.

The Board and the Association agree to establish a joint committee to study and make recommendations as to the appropriate number of students per teacher in the Highland school system. The Superintendent and the Association shall each appoint two persons to serve on the joint committee and these persons shall elect a chairman from among themselves. The joint committee shall be established as soon as practicable. The report and recommendations of this committee shall be presented to the Board and the Association by January 1, 1969, and subsequent to approval become a part of this Agreement.

Teacher Aides

Union Free School District No. 3, East Meadow, New York

Article 6, Section 6.1—Teachers' Aides

The sum of $26,000, in addition to the amount heretofore contemplated for the annual budget, shall be made available for teachers' aides in the secondary and elementary schools for cafeteria and playground duty. The use and allocation of such funds in the secondary and elementary schools shall be determined by a Joint Committee of Teachers' Aides to be composed of representatives to be named by the Superintendent of Schools and [the East Meadow Teachers Association], respectively.

Non-Classroom Service Duties

Buffalo Public Schools, Buffalo, New York

Article VIII—Teaching Conditions

I. It is recognized that the time of teachers should be utilized for professional teaching activity and that non-teaching duties shall be eliminated whenever possible. (b) A labor organization seeking exclusive recognition in a unit which encompasses any portion of the unit petitioned for must file a petition with the Area Administrator supported by a showing of interest of thirty (30%) percent or more of the employees in the unit it claims to be appropriate within ten (10) days after the initial date of posting of the notice of petition as provided in § 202.4(b) unless good cause is shown for extending the period.

(c) No labor organization may participate to any extent in any representation proceeding unless it has notified the Area Administrator of its desire to intervene within ten (10) days after the initial date of posting of the notice of petition as provided in § 202.4(b) unless good cause is shown for extending the period.

(a) If the Regional Administrator determines after an investigation that the petition has not been timely filed, that the claimed unit is not appropriate, that the petitioner has not made a sufficient showing of interest or the petition is not otherwise actionable, he may request the party filing such a petition to withdraw the petition or in the absence of such withdrawal within a reasonable time, he may dismiss the petition.

(b) If the Regional Administrator determines, after investigation, that a valid issue has been raised by a challenge under § 202.2(f) and (g), he may take such action as he deems appropriate including a request to the party filing such a petition to withdraw the petition, dismissal of the petition, deferral of action upon the petition until such time as those issues have been resolved pursuant to this part, or consolidation of such issues with the representation matter for a resolution of all issues.

(e) A petitioner who withdraws a petition after the issuance of a notice of hearing and before the close of the hearing or after the approval of an agreement for a consent election shall be barred from filing another petition for the same unit or any subdivision thereof for six (6) months.

§ 202.7 Agreement for consent election.

(a) The parties may stipulate subsequent to the filing of a petition that a secret ballot election shall be conducted and such stipulation shall be filed with the Area Administrator. If the Area Administrator approves the stipulation, the election shall be conducted by the agency or activity as appropriate, under the supervision of the Area Administrator, in accordance with § 202.17, among the employees in an agreed upon appropriate unit, to determine whether the employees desire to be represented for purposes of exclusive recognition by any or none of the labor organizations involved. The parties to such proceedings shall be the agency or activity, the petitioner, and any intervenors who have complied with the requirements set forth in § 202.5.

(b) The parties shall stipulate the eligibility period for participation in the election, the date(s), hour(s), and place(s) of the election, the designations on the ballot and other related election procedures.

(c) In the event that the parties cannot agree on the matters contained in paragraph (b) of this section, the Area Administrator acting on behalf of the Assistant Secretary shall decide these matters.

§ 202.8 Notice of hearing.

The Regional Administrator may cause a notice of hearing to be issued if, after the filing of a petition, the petitioner, the agency or activity, and all intervenors, within the purview of § 202.5 are unable to resolve issues of appropriateness of unit or related matters. A notice of hearing providing at least ten (10) days notice shall be served on all interested parties and shall include:

(a) A statement of the time, place and nature of the hearing;

(b) A statement of the unit claimed by the petitioner to be appropriate;

(c) The name of the agency or activity, petitioner and intervenors, if any;

(d) A statement of the authority and jurisdiction under which the hearing is to be held.

§ 202.9 Conduct of hearing.

(a) Hearings shall be conducted by a Hearing Officer and shall be open to the public unless otherwise ordered by the Hearing Officer. At any time another Hearing Officer may be substituted for the Hearing Officer previously presiding. It shall be the duty of the Hearing Officer to inquire fully into all matters in issue and necessary to obtain a full and complete record upon which the Assistant Secretary may make an appropriate decision. An official reporter shall make the only official transcript of such proceedings. Copies of the official transcript will not be provided to the parties but may be purchased by arrangement with the official reporter or may be examined in the Area Office during normal working hours.

(b) Hearings under this section are considered investigatory and not adversary. Their purpose is to develop a full and complete factual record. The rule of relevancy and materiality are paramount; there are no burdens of proof and the technical rules of evidence do not apply.

(c) The Hearing Officer may continue the hearing from day to day, or adjourn it to a later date or to a different place, by announcement thereof at the hearing or by other appropriate notice.

§ 202.10 Motions.

(a) All motions shall be in writing or, if made at the hearing may be stated orally on the record and shall briefly state the order or relief sought and the grounds for such motion. An original and two copies of written motions shall be filed and a copy thereof simultaneously shall be served on the other parties to the proceedings. Motions made prior to the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary shall be filed with the Regional Administrator, with a copy to the Area Administrator, except that motions made during the hearing shall be filed with the Hearing Officer. After the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary, all motions shall be filed with the Assistant Secretary. Other parties may file responses to such motions within five (5) days of service. The Regional Administrator may rule upon all motions filed with him, causing a copy of said ruling to be served on the parties, or he may refer the motion to the Hearing Officer: Provided, that if the Regional Administrator prior to the close of the hearing grants a motion to dismiss the petition, the petitioner may obtain a review of such ruling in the manner prescribed in § 202.6(d). The Hearing Officer shall rule, either orally on the record or in writing, upon all motions filed at the hearing or referred to him as hereinabove provided, except that all motions to dismiss petitions shall be referred for appropriate action at such time as the entire record is considered by the Regional Administrator or the Assistant Secretary, as the case may be.

(b) Motions to intervene will not be entertained by the Hearing Officer. Intervention will be permitted only to those who have met the requirements set forth in § 202.5.

(c) All motions, rulings, and orders shall become a part of the record. Rulings by the Regional Administrator or by the Hearing Officer shall be considered by the Assistant Secretary when the case is transferred to him for decision.

(d) The right to make motions or to make objections to rulings on motions shall not be deemed waived by participation in the proceeding.

§ 202.11 Rights of the parties.

(a) Any party shall have the right to appear at any hearing in person, by counsel, or by other representative, and any party shall have power to examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce into the record documentary and other evidence. Stipulations of fact may be introduced in evidence with respect to any issue.

(b) Any party shall be entitled, upon request, to a reasonable period at the close of the hearing for oral argument, which shall be included in the stenographic report of the hearing.

§ 202.12 Duties and powers of the Hearing Officer.

It shall be the duty of the Hearing Officer to inquire fully into the facts as they relate to the matter before him. With respect to cases assigned to him between the time he is designated and the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary, the Hearing Officer shall have the authority to:

(a) Grant requests for appearance of witnesses or production of records;

(b) Rule upon offers of proof and receive relevant evidence;

(c) Take or cause depositions to be taken whenever the ends of justice would be served thereby;

(d) Limit lines of questioning or testimony which are immaterial, irrelevant or unduly repetitious;

(e) Regulate the course of the hearing and, if appropriate, exclude from the hearing persons who engage in misconduct;

(f) Strike all related testimony of witnesses refusing to answer any questions ruled to be proper;

(g) Hold conferences for the settlement or simplification of the issues by consent of the parties or upon his own motion;

(h) Dispose of procedural requests, motions, or similar matters which shall be made part of the record of the proceeding, including motions referred to the Hearing Officer by the Regional Administrator and motions to amend pleadings;

(i) Examine and cross-examine witnesses and to introduce into the record documentary or other evidence;

(j) Request the parties at any time during the hearing to state their respective positions concerning any issue in the case or theory in support thereof;

(k) Continue, in his discretion, the hearing from day-to-day, or adjourn it to a later or to a different place, by announcement thereof at the hearing or by other appropriate notice;

(l) Take any other action necessary under the foregoing and not prohibited by these regulations.

§ 202.13 Objections to conduct of hearing.

Any objection to the introduction of evidence may be stated orally or in writing and shall be accompanied by a short statement of the grounds of such objection, and included in the record. No such objection shall be deemed waived by further participation in the hearing. Automatic exception will be allowed to all adverse rulings.

§ 202.14 Filing of briefs.

Any party may file a brief with the Assistant Secretary within seven (7) days after the close of the hearing provided, however, that prior to the close of the hearing and for good cause, the Hearing Officer may allow time not to exceed fourteen (14) additional days for the filing of briefs with the Assistant Secretary. Copies thereof shall be served simultaneously on all other parties to the proceeding. Requests for additional time in which to file a brief under authority of this section not addressed to the Hearing Officer during the hearing shall be made to the Regional Administrator, in writing, and copies thereof shall be served simultaneously on the other parties. Requests for extension of time shall be received not later than three (3) days before the date such briefs are due. No reply brief may be filed except by special permission of the Assistant Secretary.

§ 202.15 Transfer of case to Assistant Secretary; contents of record.

Upon the close of the hearing the Hearing Officer shall transfer this case to the Assistant Secretary. The record of the proceeding shall include the petition, notice of hearing, service sheet, motions, ruling, orders, official transcript of the hearing, stipulations, objections, depositions, exhibits, documentary evidence, and any briefs or other documents submitted by the parties.

§ 202.16 Decision.

The Assistant Secretary will issue a decision determining the appropriate unit, and directing an election, or dismissing the petition, or making other disposition of the matter.

§ 202.17 Election procedure.

This section governs all elections conducted under the supervision of an Area Administrator, pursuant to § 202.7 or § 202.16.

(a) Appropriate notices of election shall be posted by the activity. Such notices shall set forth the details and procedures for the election, the appropriate unit, the eligibility period, the date(s), hour(s), and place(s) of the election and shall contain a sample ballot.

(b) The reproduction of any document purporting to be a copy of the official ballot, other than one completely unaltered in form and content and clearly marked "sample" on its face, which suggests either directly or indirectly to employees that the Assistant Secretary endorses a particular choice, may constitute grounds for setting aside an election upon objections properly filed.

(c) All elections shall be by secret ballot. An exclusive representative shall be chosen by a majority of the valid ballots cast.

(d) Whenever two or more labor organizations are included as choices in an election, any labor organization may request, in writing, the Area Administrator to remove its name from the ballot. The request must be received not later than seven (7) days before the date of the election. Such request shall be subject to the approval of the Area Administrator, whose decision shall be final; provided however, that in a proceeding involving a petition filed under § 202.2(b) an organization currently recognized or certified may not have its name removed from the ballot without giving the aforementioned notice in writing to all parties and the Area Administrator, disclaiming any representation interest among the employees in the unit.

(e) Any party may be represented at the polling place(s) by observers of his own selection, subject to such limitations as the Area Administrator may prescribe.

§ 202.18 Challenged ballots.

Any party or the representative of the Assistant Secretary may challenge, for good cause, the eligibility of any person to participate in the election. The ballots of such challenged persons shall be impounded.

§ 202.19 Tally of ballots.

Upon the conclusion of the election, the Area Administrator shall cause to be furnished to the parties a tally of ballots.

§ 202.20 Objections to election; determination on objections and challenged ballots.

(a) Within five (5) days after the tally of ballots has been furnished, any party may file with the Area Administrator an original and four (4) copies of objections to the conduct of the election or conduct affecting the results of the election, supported by a short statement of the reasons therefore. Such filing must be timely whether or not the challenged ballots are sufficient in number to affect the results of the election. Copies of such objections shall be served simultaneously on the other parties by the party filing them, and a statement of service shall be made.

(b) If no objections are filed within the time set forth above, if the challenged ballots are insufficient in number to affect the results of the election, and if no runoff election is to be held, the Area Administrator shall forthwith issue to the parties a certification of the results of the election, including certification of representative, where appropriate.

(c) If objections are filed to the conduct of the election or conduct affecting the results of the election, or if the challenged ballots are sufficient in number to affect the results of the election, the Area Administrator shall investigate the objections or challenges, or both.

(d) The Area Administrator shall report the essential facts and positions of the parties to the Regional Administrator. Where it appears to the Regional Administrator that the objections or challenged ballots raise any relevant question of fact which may have affected the results of the election, the Regional Administrator shall cause to be issued a notice of hearing designating a Hearing Examiner, to take evidence, make factual findings and recommendations with respect to the objections and/or challenged ballots, and shall report these findings and recommendations to the Assistant Secretary and the parties. The objecting party shall bear the burden of proof regarding all matters alleged in its objections to conduct affecting the results of the election.

(e) When the Regional Administrator determines that no such relevant issue of fact exists, he shall (1) find whether improper conduct occurred which affected the results of the election and indicate his intention to set aside the election, or (2) if the Regional Administrator finds no such improper conduct occurred affecting the election, he shall rule on challenges to ballots, if any. The Regional Administrator shall simultaneously serve any such finding upon all parties to the proceeding and shall include therein any additional pertinent matters such as his intent to rerun the election or count ballots at a specified date, time, and place. When the Regional Administrator determines that no relevant question of fact exists, but that a substantial question of interpretation or policy exists, he shall notify the parties and transfer the case to the Assistant Secretary in accordance with § 205.5(b).

(f) Any party aggrieved by findings and recommendations of a Hearing Examiner or findings of a Regional Administrator with respect to objections to an election or challenged ballots, may obtain a review of such action by the Assistant Secretary by following the procedure set forth in § 202.6(d), which review may include an objection to the failure of the Regional Administrator to direct a hearing on the ground that a relevant question of fact exists.

(g) The Assistant Secretary shall decide whether to adopt or modify the Hearing Examiner's recommendation, whether to grant review of the Regional Administrator's findings, or any substantial issue of interpretation of policy transferred by the Regional Administrator. In accord with the Assistant Secretary's final determinations, the Regional Administrator shall cause to be issued a certification of representative, or a decision setting aside the election or directing the opening and counting of challenged ballots, whichever is appropriate.

§ 202.21 Runoff elections.

(a) The activity shall conduct a runoff election under supervision of the Area Administrator when an election in which the ballot provided for not less than three (3) choices (i.e., at least two representatives and "neither" or "none") results in no choice receiving a majority of the valid ballots cast, and any objections which had been filed have been disposed of, and any challenged ballots have been disposed of or are not sufficient in number to affect the results of the election, as provided herein. Only one runoff election shall be held pursuant to this section.

(b) Employees who were eligible to vote in the original election and who also are in an eligible category on the date of the runoff election shall be eligible to vote in the runoff election.

(c) The ballot in the runoff election shall provide for a selection between the two choices receiving the largest and second largest number of votes.

§ 202.22 Inconclusive elections.

(a) An inconclusive election is one in which none of the choices on the ballot has received a majority of the valid ballots cast. If there are no challenged ballots that would affect the results of the election, the Area Administrator may declare the election a nullity and may order another election, providing for a selection from among the choices afforded in the previous ballot in the following situations:

(1) the ballot provided for a choice among two or more representatives and "neither" or "none," and the votes are equally divided among the several choices;

(2) the number of ballots cast for one choice in an election is equal to the number cast for another choice but less than the number cast for the third choice; or

(3) the runoff ballot provided for a choice between two representatives and the votes are equally divided.

(b) Only one further election pursuant to this section may be held.

§ 203.1 Who may file complaints.

A complaint to the Assistant Secretary that an agency, activity or labor organization has engaged in any act prohibited under section 19 of the Order or has failed to take any action required by the Order, may be filed by an employee, an agency, activity, or a labor organization.

§ 203.2 Action to be taken before filing a complaint with the Assistant Secretary.

Any charge of an alleged unfair labor practice occurring after January 1, 1970, shall be filed directly with the party or parties against whom the charge is directed within six (6) months of the occurrence of the alleged unfair labor practice. The alleged unfair labor practice shall be investigated by the parties involved and informal attempts to resolve the matter shall be made by the parties. If informal attempts are unsuccessful in disposing of the matter within thirty (30) days, (a) the parties may agree to stipulate the facts to the Assistant Secretary and request a decision without a hearing or (b) a party may file a complaint requesting the Assistant Secretary to issue a decision in the matter, provided, however, that a complaint to the Assistant Secretary shall not be considered timely unless filed within nine (9) months of the occurrence of the alleged unfair labor practice or within thirty (30) days of the receipt by the charging party of the final decision, whichever is the shorter period of time.

§ 203.3 Contents of the complaint.

A complaint alleging a violation of section 19 of the Order shall be submitted on forms prescribed by the Assistant Secretary and shall contain the following:

(a) The name, address, and telephone number of the employee, agency or activity or labor organization making the complaint (hereinafter referred to as the complainant);

(b) The name, address, and telephone number of the agency or activity or labor organization against whom the complaint is made (hereinafter referred to as the respondent);

(c) A clear and concise statement of the facts constituting the alleged unfair labor practice, including the time and place of occurrence of the particular acts and a statement of the portion or portions of the Order alleged to have been violated;

(d) A statement of any other procedures invoked involving the subject matter of the complaint and the results, if any, of their invocation including whether the subject matter raised in the complaint has been referred to the Council, Panel, or Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service for consideration or action;

(e) The entire report of investigation by the parties, pursuant to § 203.2, shall be filed with the complaint;

(f) A declaration by the person signing the complaint, under the penalties of the Criminal Code (18 U.S.C. 1001), that its contents are true and correct to the best of his knowledge and belief.

§ 203.4 Filing and service of copies.

(a) An original and four copies of a complaint shall be filed with the Area Administrator for the area in which the alleged unfair labor practice occurred or if it occurred in two or more areas, the complaint shall be filed with the Area Administrator for the area in which the headquarters of the respondent is located.

(b) Simultaneously with the filing of a complaint and the parties' report of investigation, copies shall be served by the complainant on the respondent, and a written statement of such service shall be furnished to the Area Administrator.

§ 203.5 Investigation of the complaint.

Upon the filing of a complaint the Area Administrator shall make such additional investigation as he deems necessary, and shall report the essential facts, the positions of the parties, and any offers of settlement to the Regional Administrator.

§ 203.6 Action by Regional Administrator.

The Regional Administrator shall take appropriate measures which may consist of the approval of a withdrawal request or dismissal of the complaint, approval of a satisfactory offer of settlement, or the issuance of a notice of hearing.

§ 203.7 Withdrawal or dismissal of complaint.

(a) If the Regional Administrator determines that the complaint has not been timely filed, that a reasonable basis for the complaint has not been established, or that a satisfactory offer of settlement has been made, he may request the complainant to withdraw the complaint or in the absence of such withdrawal, within a reasonable time, he may dismiss the complaint.

(b) If the Regional Administrator dismisses the complaint, he shall furnish the complainant with a written statement of the grounds for dismissal, sending a copy of the statement to the respondent. If the dismissal is based on approval of an offer of settlement which is satisfactory to the Regional Administrator, such statement shall set forth the terms of settlement and the implementation thereof.

(c) The complainant may obtain a review of such action by filing a request for review with the Assistant Secretary within ten (10) days of service of such notice of dismissal and simultaneously serving a copy of such request on the Regional Administrator and the respondent. Statement of service shall be filed with the Assistant Secretary. The request for review shall contain a complete statement setting forth facts and reasons upon which the request is based.

§ 203.8 Notice of hearing.

The Regional Administrator may cause a notice of hearing to be issued if, after the filing of a complaint, he finds, based on the allegations and the report of investigation by the parties and any additional investigation by the Area Administrator, which has been reported to the parties, that there is a reasonable basis for the complaint and that no satisfactory offer of settlement has been made.

§ 203.9 Contents of the notice of hearing.

(a) The notice of hearing shall include:

(1) A copy of the complaint;

(2) A statement of the time and place of the hearing which shall be not less than ten (10) days after service of the notice of hearing, except in extraordinary circumstances;

(b) An official reporter shall make the only official transcript of such proceedings. Copies of the official transcript will not be provided to the parties but may be purchased by arrangement with the official reporter or may be examined in the Area Office during normal working hours.

§ 203.11 Intervention.

Any person desiring to intervene in any proceeding shall file a motion in writing or, if made at the hearing, may move orally on the record, stating the grounds upon which such person claims an interest. Prior to the hearing, such a motion shall be filed with the Regional Administrator issuing the notice of hearing; during the hearing such motion shall be made to the Hearing Examiner. An original and two copies of written motions shall be filed. Simultaneously upon filing such motion, the moving party shall serve a copy thereof on the other parties. The Regional Administrator shall rule upon all such motions filed prior to the hearing, and shall cause a copy of such rulings to be furnished to the other parties, or may refer the motion to the Hearing Examiner for ruling. The Hearing Examiner shall rule upon all such motions made at the hearing or referred to him by the Regional Administrator.

When the Hearing Examiner rules, before the hearing, on a motion referred to him by the Regional Administrator, he shall furnish copies of such ruling to the parties. The Regional Administrator or Hearing Examiner, as the case may be, may permit intervention in person or by counsel or other representative to such extent and upon such terms as he may deem proper.

§ 203.12 Rights of parties.

Any party shall have the right to appear at such hearing in person, by counsel, or by other representative, to examine and cross-examine witnesses, and to introduce into the record documentary or other relevant evidence, except that the participation of any party shall be limited to the extent prescribed by the Hearing Examiner; and provided further, that two (2) copies of documentary evidence shall be submitted.

§ 203.13 Rules of evidence.

The technical rules of evidence do not apply. Any evidence may be received, except that a Hearing Examiner may exclude any evidence or offer of proof which is immaterial, irrelevant, unduly repetitious or customarily privileged. Every party shall have a right to present his case by oral and documentary evidence and to submit rebuttal evidence.

§ 203.14 Burden of proof.

A complainant in asserting a violation of the Order shall have the burden of proving the allegations of the complaint by a preponderance of the evidence.

§ 203.15 Duties and powers of the Hearing Examiner.

It shall be the duty of the Hearing Examiner to inquire fully into the facts as they relate to the matter before him. Upon assignment to him and before transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary, the Hearing Examiner shall have the authority to:

(a) Grant requests for appearance of witnesses or production of documents;

(b) Rule upon offers of proof and receive relevant evidence;

(c) Take or cause depositions to be taken whenever the ends of justice would be served thereby;

(d) Limit lines of questioning or testimony which are immaterial, irrelevant, or unduly repetitious.

(k) Prepare, serve and submit his report and recommendations pursuant to § 203.22.

(l) Take official notice of any material fact not appearing in evidence in the record, which is among the traditional matters of judicial notice and also concerning which the Department by reason of its functions is presumed to be expert; Provided, that the parties shall be given adequate notice, at the hearing or by reference in the Hearing Examiner's decision of the matters so noticed and shall be given adequate opportunity to show the contrary.

(m) Take any other action necessary under the foregoing and not prohibited by these regulations.

§ 203.16 Unavailability of Hearing Examiners.

In the event the Hearing Examiner designated to conduct the hearing becomes unavailable, the Chief Hearing Examiner shall designate another Hearing Examiner for the purpose of further hearing or issuance of a report and recommendations on the record as made, or both.

§ 203.17 Objection to conduct of hearing.

(a) Any objection with respect to the conduct of the hearing, including any objection to the introduction of evidence, may be stated orally or in writing accompanied by a short statement of the grounds for such objection, and included in the record. No such objection shall be deemed waived by further participation in the hearing. Such objection shall not stay the conduct of the hearing.

(b) Automatic exceptions will be allowed to all adverse rulings. Rulings by the Hearing Examiner shall not be appealed prior to the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary, but shall be considered by the Assistant Secretary only upon the filing of exceptions to the Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations in accordance with § 203.22.

§ 203.18 Motions before or after a hearing.

(a) All motions made before a hearing shall be made in writing to the Regional Administrator. All motions made after the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary shall be made in writing to the Assistant Secretary. The moving party shall serve simultaneously a copy of all motion papers on all other parties. A statement of service shall accompany the motion. Answering affidavits, if any, must be served on all parties and the original thereof, together with two (2) copies and statement of service, shall be filed with the Regional Administrator before the hearing or the Assistant Secretary after the hearing, within five (5) days after service of the moving papers unless it is otherwise directed.

(b) The Regional Administrator may rule upon all motions filed with him, causing a copy of such ruling to be served on the parties, or he may refer such motions to the Hearing Examiner or Chief Hearing Examiner. Rulings by the Regional Administrator shall not be appealed prior to the transfer of the case to the Assistant Secretary, but shall be considered by the Assistant Secretary when the case is transferred to him for decision.

§ 203.19 Waiver of objections.

Any objection not duly urged before a Hearing Examiner shall be deemed waived.

§ 203.20 Oral argument at the hearing.

Any party shall be entitled, upon request, to a reasonable period prior to the close of the hearing for oral argument, which shall be included in the official transcript of the hearing.

§ 203.21 Filing of brief.

Any party desiring to submit a brief to the Hearing Examiner shall file the original and one copy within seven (7) days after the close of the hearing: Provided, however, that prior to the close of the hearing and for good cause, the Hearing Examiner may grant a reasonable extension of time. Copies thereof shall be served simultaneously on all other parties to the proceeding. Requests for additional time in which to file a brief under authority of this section not addressed to the Hearing Examiner during the hearing shall be made to the Chief Hearing Examiner, in writing, and copies thereof shall be served simultaneously on the other parties. A statement of such service shall be furnished. Requests for extension of time shall be received not later than three (3) days before the date such briefs are due. No reply brief may be filed except by special permission of the Hearing Examiner.

§ 203.22 Submission of the Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations to the Assistant Secretary; exceptions.

(a) After the close of the hearing, and the receipt of briefs, if any, the Hearing Examiner shall prepare his report and recommendations expeditiously. The report and recommendations shall contain findings of fact, conclusions, and the reasons or basis therefor including credibility determinations, and recommendations as to the disposition of the case including, where appropriate, the remedial action to be taken and notices to be posted.

(b) The Hearing Examiner shall cause his report and recommendations to be served promptly on all parties to the proceeding. Thereafter, the Hearing Examiner shall transfer the case to the Assistant Secretary including his report and recommendations and the record. The record shall include the complaint, notice of hearing, service sheet, motions, rulings, orders, official transcript of the hearing, stipulations, objections, depositions, exhibits, documentary evidence and any briefs or other documents submitted by the parties.

(c) An original and two (2) copies of any exceptions to the Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations may be filed by any party with the Assistant Secretary within ten (10) days after service of the report and recommendations; Provided, however, that the Assistant Secretary may for good cause shown extend the time for filing such exceptions. Requests for additional time in which to file exceptions shall be in writing, and copies thereof shall be served simultaneously on the other parties. Requests for extension of time must be received no later than three (3) days before the date the exceptions are due. Copies of such exceptions and any supporting briefs shall be served simultaneously on all other parties, and a statement of such service shall be furnished to the Assistant Secretary.

§ 203.23 Contents of exceptions to Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations.

(a) Exceptions to a Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations shall:

(1) Set forth specifically the questions upon which exceptions are taken;

(2) Identify that part of the Hearing Examiner's report to which objection is made;

(3) Designate by precise citation of page the portions of the record relied on, state the grounds for the exceptions, and include the citation of authorities unless set forth in a supporting brief.

(b) Any exception to a ruling, finding, conclusion, or recommendation which is not specifically urged shall be deemed to have been waived. Any exception which fails to comply with the foregoing requirements may be disregarded.

§ 203.24 Briefs in support of exceptions.

(a) Any brief in support of exceptions shall contain only matters included within the scope of the exceptions and shall contain, in the order indicated, the following:

(1) A concise statement of the case containing all that is material to the consideration of the questions presented;

(2) A specification of the questions involved and to be argued;

(3) The argument, presenting clearly the points of fact and law relied on in support of the position taken on each question, with specific page reference to the transcript and the legal or other material relied on.

(b) Answering briefs to the exceptions and cross-exceptions and supporting briefs may be filed at the discretion of the Assistant Secretary.

§ 203.25 Action by the Assistant Secretary.

After considering the Hearing Examiner's report and recommendations, the record, and any exceptions filed, the Assistant Secretary shall issue his decision affirming or reversing the Hearing Examiner, in whole or in part, or making such other disposition of the matter as he deems appropriate.

(a) Upon finding a violation of the Order the Assistant Secretary may order the respondent to cease and desist from conduct violative of the Order and may require the respondent to take such affirmative corrective action as he deems appropriate to effectuate the policies of the Order.

AUTHORITY: The provisions of this PART 205 issued under sec. 6, 18, E.O. 11491, 34 F.R. 17605.

§ 205.1 Computation of time for filing papers.

In computing any period of time prescribed by or allowed by these regulations, the day of the act, event, or default after which the designated period of time begins to run, shall not be included. The last day of the period so computed is to be included unless it is a Saturday, Sunday or Federal legal holiday in which event the period shall run until the end of the next day which is neither a Saturday, Sunday, or a Federal legal holiday. When the period of time prescribed, or allowed is less than seven (7) days, intermediate Saturdays, Sundays, and Federal legal holidays shall be excluded from the computations. When these regulations require the filing of any paper, such document must be received by the Assistant Secretary or the officer or agent designated to receive such matter before the close of business of the last day of the time limit, if any, for such filing or extension of time that may have been granted.

§ 205.2 Additional time after service by mail.

Whenever a party has the right or is required to do some act pursuant to these regulations within a prescribed period after service of a notice or other paper upon him and the notice or paper is served on him by mail, three (3) days shall be added to the prescribed period, provided, however, that three (3) days shall not be added if any extension of time may have been granted.

§ 205.3 Documents in a proceeding.

(a) Title. Documents in any proceeding under these regulations including correspondence shall show the title of the proceeding and the case number, if any.

(b) Number of copies; form. Except as otherwise provided in these regulations any documents or papers shall be filed with four (4) copies in addition to the original. All matters filed shall be printed, typed, or otherwise legibly duplicated; carbon copies of typewritten matter will be accepted if they are clearly legible.

(c) Signature. The original of each document required to be filed under these regulations shall be signed by the party or by an attorney or representative of record for the party, or by an officer of the party and shall contain the address and telephone number of the person signing it.

§ 205.4 Service of pleading and other papers under this chapter.

(a) Method of service. Notices of hearing, decisions, orders and other papers may be served personally or by registered or certified mail or by telegraph.

(b) Upon whom served. All papers except complaints, petitions and papers relating to requests for appearance of witnesses or production of documents shall be served upon all counsel of record and upon parties not represented by counsel or by their agents designated by them or by law and upon the Assistant Secretary, or his designated officer or agent or examiner, where appropriate. Service upon such counsel or representative shall constitute service upon the party, but a copy also shall be transmitted to the party.

(c) Statement of service. The party or person serving the papers or process shall submit simultaneously to the Assistant Secretary or other designated representative, or to the individual conducting the proceeding, a written statement of such service; failure to file a statement of service shall not affect the validity of the service. Proof of service shall be required only if subsequent to the receipt of a statement of service a question is raised with respect to proper service.

§ 205.5 Transfer of case to Assistant Secretary.

(a) In any case under parts 202 and 203 in which the Regional Administrator determines that no material issue of fact exists, he may transfer the case to the Assistant Secretary who shall decide the case on the basis of the papers alone after having allowed ten (10) days for the filing of briefs and/or requests for review of the Regional Administrator's action; or the Assistant Secretary may remand the case to the Regional Administrator if he determines that material fact questions exist. Orders of transfer and remand shall be served on all parties.

(b) In any case under parts 202 and 203 in which it appears to the Regional Administrator that the proceedings raise questions which should be decided by the Assistant Secretary, he may, at any time, issue an order transferring the case to the Assistant Secretary for decision or other appropriate action. Such an order shall be served on the parties.

§ 205.6 Request for appearance of witnesses and production of documents at hearing.

The Regional Administrator, Hearing Officer or Hearing Examiner as appropriate may request the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents at a hearing held pursuant to this chapter. A party may file a written application for such request with the Regional Administrator before the opening of a hearing or with a Hearing Officer or Hearing Examiner during the hearing. The application for request shall name and identify the witness or the documents sought, or both, and the reason therefor.

Notice of an application for request need not be communicated to the parties. The Regional Administrator, Hearing Officer or Hearing Examiner shall grant the request provided the anticipated testimony or documents appear to be reasonably related to the matters under investigation and describes with sufficient particularity the documents sought. If the Regional Administrator, Hearing Officer or Hearing Examiner denies such request he shall set forth the basis for his ruling, which shall become a part of the record.

Upon the failure of any party or officer of any party to comply with such a request the Regional Administrator, the Hearing Officer, Hearing Examiner, or the Assistant Secretary may disregard all related evidence offered by the party failing to produce such evidence.

§ 205.7 Rules to be liberally construed.

(a) The regulations in this chapter shall be liberally construed to effectuate the purpose and provisions of the Order.

(b) When an act is required or allowed to be done at or within a specified time the Assistant Secretary may at any time order the period altered where it shall be manifest that strict adherence will work surprise or injustice or interfere with the proper effectuation of the Order.

§ 205.8 Petitions for amendment of regulations.

Any interested person may petition the Assistant Secretary in writing for amendments to any portion of these regulations. Such petition shall identify the portion of the regulations involved and provide the specific language of the proposed amendment together with a statement of grounds in support of such petition.

Effective date. This chapter shall become effective on the date of its publication in the Federal Register.

Case Reviews

IOWA

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS BARGAINING AUTHORITY OF REGENTS

The Iowa Supreme Court modified and affirmed a trial court decision involving the Iowa State Board of Regents by defining the term "collective bargaining" in the "full industrial sense." Determining that the trial court "treated collective bargaining as meeting with and discussing wages, working conditions and grievances rather than the full industrial sense," the high court modified the earlier decision "only insofar as we have attempted to spell out in more detail the limitations on the power of the Board of Regents in this particular area."

The case originally arose when University of Northern Iowa physical plant employees who belonged to the United Packing House Food and Allied Workers of America, AFL-CIO, Local 1258, went on strike against the regents (administrative authority over the university), and established picket lines. Following the February 20, 1968, strike, the regents brought an action in the Black Hawk District Court (reported in the October 1969 DIGEST) which eventually resulted in the issuance of a permanent injunction > enjoining and restraining the defendants, and each of them individually and collectively from engaging in a strike or concerted work stoppage against the University of Northern Iowa and from picketing on or near the campus or in the vicinity of the campus . . . in furtherance of any strike or concerted work stoppage or for the purpose of coercing plaintiff to bargain collectively with the defendant union Local No. 1258 . . . except that nothing contained herein shall be deemed to prevent informational picketing which in no way interferes with or impedes the operation of the University of Northern Iowa.

The regents appealed that portion of the lower court's order which held that the board had "the power to enter into collective bargaining and collective bargaining agreements" (reported in the October 1968 DIGEST). And Local 1258 cross-appealed that portion of the injunctive order prohibiting it from picketing for any purpose other than informational.

According to the high court, three propositions "are accepted as the law of the case":

1. Public employees have the right to organize and join labor organizations.
2. Public employees do not have the right to strike.
3. Defendants have the right to picket for informational purposes if the picketing does not interfere with or impede the operation of the university.

In addition, the court determined that the power and authority of the regents to bargain collectively with the union depend upon how the term "collective bargaining" is defined. Local 1258 acknowledged that no specific legislation gave the regents such authority, but claimed that such authority > is necessarily implied [under the rule of statutory construction] in section 262.9(2)(4)(7)(11), Code of Iowa which gives the Regents the general power to hire employees, fix their salaries and wages, direct the expenditure of money and to perform all other acts necessary and proper for the execution of the powers and duties conferred by law upon it.

However, the high court held that > there is a vast difference between implying authority in the Regents to meet with selected representatives of a group of employees to discuss wages, working conditions and grievances on behalf of those who have agreed to such representation and implying authority in the Regents to recognize the union as the exclusive employee representative for collective bargaining on behalf of all employees.

Explaining that collective bargaining agreements "in the industrial sense . . . almost without exception . . . include a provision making the union the exclusive bargaining agent," the high court held:

> We cannot imply [the authority of the regents] under these general powers to agree to exclusive representation, depriving other employees of the right to be represented by a group of their choosing or an individual the right to represent himself . . . . The power to fix the terms and conditions of public employment is a legislative function which, with proper guidelines from the legislature, can be delegated to its administrative agencies.

In the absence of specific legislation granting public employees "the advantages of collective bargaining in the full sense as it is used in private industry," the high court established that the board of regents has the authority to bargain collectively only within the context of its > power and authority to meet with representatives of an employee's union to discuss wages, working conditions and grievances if it so desires [emphasis added]. It can do so without becoming obligated to meet with the representatives of any other group of employees. The agreed terms could be adopted by the Regents in a proper legislative manner. Such action does not involve an improper delegation of legislative powers to private persons as there is no compulsion to sign an agreement and the final decision remains in the Board of Regents.

Moreover, the high court held that within this context "we can see no reason why the Regents, if they so desire, could not enter into one written contract with the union binding all members of the union agreeing to such representation as long as the terms of the contract are within the statutory authority of the board and contain no terms of employment which could not be included in a standardized contract for individual employees."

In considering that portion of the trial court's order which was cross-appealed by the union, the high court upheld the earlier decision, explaining,

> We have heretofore held that the Board of Regents has no authority to enter into collective bargaining or collective bargaining agreements in the industrial context. We have also held the Board of Regents may voluntarily meet and consult with representatives of groups of employees to discuss wages, working conditions and grievances. The decision whether to do so or not remains that of the Board of Regents. Therefore, any picketing to coerce the Board of Regents to bargain collectively against its better judgment would either be illegal, against public policy or both.

In a specially concurring minority opinion, two high court justices argued that "the issues of exclusive bargaining and mandatory recognition of multiple bargaining agencies [as ruled upon in the majority opinion] are not in this case." The minority pointed out that "nothing in the record indicates the defendants contend they must be recognized as the exclusive bargaining agent," that the trial court's decision was silent on the matter, that the various briefs filed by plaintiff and defendant were also silent on the subject, and that the three amicus curiae briefs filed in the appeal "repeatedly" note that defendant's right to bargain exclusively was not at issue.

Given, however, the fact that "the opinion and concurrence are written on a point not argued," the minority disagreed > that public collective bargaining must be interpreted to prohibit exclusive bargaining with one recognized agency. Within limits, this court can tell an administrative agency what it can and cannot do under the law. But we cannot, and normally do not, attempt to tell the agency how to do what it can do.

>
> This is what we are doing here. We say they may bargain collectively but they may not bargain exclusively. In the same breath we say the agency has the right to refrain from bargaining with any groups of employees it chooses. The positions are inconsistent. If the agency can recognize one group and refuse to bargain with all others isn't it bargaining exclusively? . . . As a practical matter we are placing public agencies in an impossible position.
>
> One of the phrases most often used in the majority opinion is "collective bargaining in the industrial sense." There is an implication that if the employee's bargaining unit is recognized as an exclusive agent there is collective bargaining "in an industrial sense." This is not true. The legal right to strike has been eliminated. The legal necessity to bargain has been eliminated. The right to deal with nonunion individuals is preserved. The open shop—as it is commonly known—is preserved. So that even if the public agency finds it more efficient—or even necessary—to bargain exclusively, there are many factors which remove the process from bargaining "in the industrial sense." If this phrase is a short-handed way of making a point it is an oversimplification that commands a poor result.

(State Board of Regents, State of Iowa, Appellant v. United Packing House, Food and Allied Workers, Local 1258, affiliated with United Packing House Workers of America, AFL-CIO, et al., Appellees, Iowa Supreme Court, February 10, 1970.)

NEW JERSEY

SCHOOL BOARD MAY NOT AMEND BUDGET TO PROVIDE SALARY INCREASES ONCE BUDGET HAS BEEN ADOPTED

The New Jersey Superior Court of Essex County denied the Newark Teachers Association (NTA) a motion for summary judgment in a case which grew out of a February 1969 salary impasse between the NTA and the Newark education board. In ruling upon a four-count complaint brought by the NTA against the Newark board and others in an attempt to implement new salary schedules for teachers and other nonprofessional employees prior to the 1969-70 school year, the court determined that > a basic question in this case . . . is whether the Board was empowered to require the board of school estimate [composed of two education board members, two members of the governing body of the municipality, and the mayor] to certify to the City and to require the City to raise and pay over to the Board the amount of money necessary to meet increases in salaries granted by the Board to all employees during a current school year, no provision for any of which had been made in the Board's annual budget for that year.

According to a three-year contract negotiated between the NTA and the Newark board and effective through February 1, 1970, the NTA was granted the right "by written request made after December 1 of each year of the contract to negotiate with the Board over all budget items concerning teachers' salaries and other related matters in the school budget for the following fiscal year." However, such negotiations were to end on February 1 of each year, the statutory date for submission of the school budget to the board of school estimate. The NTA and the Newark board accordingly entered negotiations on teachers' salaries and salary schedule revisions in December 1968. Negotiations continued until the February 1, 1969, cutoff date, at which time the board submitted a budget of $65,000,000 for the year beginning July 1, 1969, to the board of school estimate; this budget provided no increases in the existing salary schedules (reported in the March 1970 DIGEST).

In keeping with the statutory plan for determining and eventually funding the annual budget of a type I school district, the board of school estimate held a public hearing on the budget, and by February 15 publicly fixed and determined the amount of money necessary to be appropriated for the ensuing year at $63,000,000. This amount then was certified to the Newark board and the city of Newark, which has the statutory power to appropriate the amount certified and include that amount in its tax ordinance, if that amount does not exceed 1½ percent of the assessed valuation of the municipality's ratables. As the certified amount exceeded this limitation and therefore was not binding upon the city without its consent, the city reduced the budget to $61,000,000. However, it ultimately approved a budget of $63,000,000.

After the budget was approved, the NTA requested mediation of its dispute with the Newark board (according to provisions of the state's negotiation statute); when mediation proved unsuccessful, a fact-finder was appointed. Both the mediator and the fact-finder recommended specific salary increases and revisions in the salary schedules, which resulted in a resolution adopted by the Newark board on August 5, 1969:

> Whereas, the Board deems that salary increases for all its employees are both warranted and necessary for the best interests of this school district, and
> Whereas, in order to implement this policy, I hereby move that the Board adopt the following salary schedules, the effective date of both this policy and salary schedules to be the date of receipt of a proper appropriation or the receipt of funds from such other sources which may be available for the implementation of this policy .... Resolved that the Board of School Estimate be asked for an appropriation of $4,700,000 to implement the salary schedules.

The Newark board submitted its resolution and a statement of the money requested to the board of school estimate. On August 13, 1969, the board of school estimate rejected the request by not determining the amount necessary to implement the new salary schedules, and therefore not certifying any amount to the city as required by statute. The NTA consequently entered a September 8 action in superior court seeking summary judgment on four counts:

1. That the portion of the board's resolution stating that "the effective date of both this policy and salary schedules [will be] the date of a proper appropriation or the receipt of funds from such other sources which may be available for the implementation of this policy" should be declared void, and that the effective date of the board's policy (as outlined in the resolution) and the new salary schedules was the date of their passage (August 5).

2. That the Newark board should pay teachers in accordance with the August 5 salary schedules.

3. That the board of school estimate should "fix and determine the amount necessary for the purpose contained in the Board's statement and [should] certify this amount separately to the Board and to the City."

4. That the sum of $4,700,000 should be considered as having been certified to the Newark board and the city, and that the city therefore should "immediately appropriate such sum and pay it over to the custodian of school moneys of Newark in accordance with New Jersey Statutes 18A:22-23."

The court initially emphasized the "significant differences" between the two methods by which boards of education may seek and receive municipal appropriations. The first and principal way is through an annual budget which, according to statute, "must indicate . . . amounts estimated to be necessary for 'current expenses,' which include salaries of all personnel." The board of school estimate fixes and determines the amount to be expended, and has discretionary authority to reduce the budget submitted by the education board only after a public hearing. The city also has the right to reduce the amount certified to it by the board of school estimate if that amount exceeds the 1½ percent limitation.

Under the second method of raising funds (as prescribed in New Jersey Statutes 18A:22-21 to 23), a school board may request additional appropriations over and above those set forth in any given school budget for specified reasons which include "meeting emergencies arising since the making of such budget." In this case, "the board of school estimate must, as required by Section 22, fix, determine and certify the amount necessary for the purpose and the governing body must, as required by Section 23, appropriate and raise the moneys so certified." Moreover, if "the need and circumstances come within the purview of Section 21 [which includes the 'emergency' clause] neither body has any discretion in the matter and . . . the 1½% limitation does not apply." But, citing the case of The Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth v. the City of Elizabeth, the court emphasized that "a board, in requesting an additional appropriation after its budget has been settled, cannot be certain that the purpose for which it seeks funds falls within the purview of N.J.S. 18A:22-21."

In the present case, the court ruled that there was no "legislative plan which disabled the Board from postponing the effective date of salary raises to a date on which moneys for them were appropriated or otherwise received. Therefore, the so-called 'offensive language' [as claimed in the NTA's first count] will not be declared void; nor may I declare that the effective date of the new schedule was August 5, 1969." Although the NTA argued that the term "effective date" as it appears in New Jersey Statutes 18A:29-4.1 means date of adoption and that the court had ruled to that effect in the case of Rall v. Board of Education of the City of Bayonne, the court held that its "use of the word 'adoption' cannot therefore be considered as an intentional and authoritative equation by it with the words 'effective date.' The statute does not require that a new salary schedule shall go into effect on the date of its adoption. It says that the salary policy shall be binding on the board of education for two years from the effective date of the policy—not from the date of its adoption."

In its second count the NTA claimed that the Newark board knew the salary dispute would have to be resolved, and that the board's intention upon adopting its resolution and the new salary schedules was to amend its current 1969-70 budget in the area of "current expenses." The court, however, ruled:

> There is no statutory provision permitting a board of education to amend its annual budget after it has been approved. Additional funds may be requested and appropriated only under N.J.S. 18A:22-21 to 23 . . . . In the case of [Elizabeth] the court held that a board of education may resort to Section 21 only in the case of an emergency. It held that even though a request is made under the "under-estimate" clause of N.J.S. 18A:22-21 and not the "emergency" clause of that statute, it cannot be allowed except in case of an emergency and that a general salary increase does not constitute an emergency.
>
> The [NTA] does not say that an emergency existed on August 5, 1969. In fact, it has specifically disclaimed the existence of one. Since there is none, I am obliged by the Elizabeth case to hold that the Board was precluded from endeavoring to raise moneys for the increased salaries for the current school year. Furthermore, it bound itself to pay only upon receipt of the necessary funds.
> Plaintiff's final contention against the Board is that by failing to honor the new salary schedule, the Board has deprived the teachers of their proper salary, the effect of which constitutes a reduction in compensation in violation of the tenure statute . . . . The claim is without merit. The failure to receive an increase in salary does not constitute a reduction in compensation.

The court additionally determined that since no emergency existed when the Newark board adopted its resolution and the new salary schedules on August 5, "the board of school estimate could not lawfully compute the total of the increases for the current school year and call on the City to raise and pay over the moneys to the Board. Had it done so, its requisition would [have] had to be set aside, as was done by the court in the Elizabeth case, supra." The court finally ruled that New Jersey Statute 18A:29-4.1 "does not purport to apply to, amend or modify the additional appropriation provisions of the school laws." As such, the court held that the statute "is not applicable to a request for an additional appropriation for non-budgeted salary increases [and] cannot be employed to compel defendant board of school estimate to certify [sic], and defendant City to raise and pay over moneys for salary increases for the school year 1969-70."

TEACHERS' STRIKE ENDS WITH PRETRIAL AGREEMENT TO RESUME NEGOTIATION

An eight-day walkout staged by about 66 of the 77 regular teachers employed by the Springfield Township Local School District (Mahoning County) ended when representatives of the Springfield education board and the Springfield Local Education Association (SLEA) agreed in a pretrial conference to resume negotiations.

The strike began on December 16, 1969, when the education board refused to meet with representatives of the SLEA for the purpose of renegotiating contract terms dealing with teacher salaries, length of school year, teacher participation in curricular decisions, and supplies, equipment and textbooks. Also at issue were inadequate negotiation and grievance procedures.

The education board sought an injunction against the striking teachers in the Mahoning County Court of Common Pleas, contending that district schools would have to close unless the court restrained the teachers "from their unlawful and illegal acts." In addition, the board asked that the temporary injunction be made permanent upon the court's final hearing on the matter.

A settlement was reached, however, during a pretrial conference in which the parties agreed to provide negotiation representatives, and continue negotiations "for a reasonable time." The court further ordered that "if these [negotiations] terminate without any agreement, the matter will again be called to the attention of the Court." The striking teachers accordingly agreed to return to work on January 9, 1970, and counsel for the education board agreed to recommend that the school year be extended by eight days so the teachers could make up all pay lost during the strike.

Board Findings and Rulings

MASSACHUSETTS

REPRESENTATION ELECTION DIRECTED AFTER TWO ELECTION PETITIONS FILED WITHIN 10-MONTH PERIOD

The Massachusetts Labor Relations Comission (MLRC) determined that a representation election was warranted after the Springfield Federation of Teachers, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Local 484, filed a second election petition within a 10-month period. Ruling that the second petition was evidence of "substantial unrest in the Springfield school system," the MLRC directed that an election be held "to determine whether or not the [Springfield Education Association (SEA)] still represents a majority of employees in [the] unit or whether the Springfield Federation of Teachers, Local 484 . . . represents a majority of the employees."

The SEA, certified in June 1966 as bargaining representative for two units of Springfield school system employees, negotiated a contract with the Springfield School Committee which was effective from March 28, 1967, to August 31, 1969. Article XXIX of the contract provided: "The parties agree that, not later than November 15, 1968, they shall enter into negotiations for a successor contract to become effective as of September 1, 1969."

In late October 1968 Local 484 entered its first election petition, seeking certification as bargaining representative for a unit of all classroom teachers, guidance counselors, and department heads in the city's elementary, junior high, and senior high schools. At that time the MLRC dismissed the petition, saying that "it seems unfair to unbalance the labor relations in a community school system some ten months in advance of the expiration of a contract that was to last some 29 months." While acknowledging that the contract's renegotiation provision "invited" the Federation's petition and that a "very zealous, dedicated and loyal minority opposition group" existed in the Springfield school system, the MLRC nevertheless held that there was not an "adequate showing of interest" to warrant an election at that time.

Then on June 26, 1969, the SEA and the Springfield committee entered into another agreement effective from September 1, 1969, to August 31, 1970, and containing a renegotiation provision identical to the previous one. Shortly before the 1969-70 contract was signed, Local 484 filed a second election petition supported by some 475 authorization cards. Noting that the filing "was no guarantee that such an election would take place," the MLRC held that even if the SEA and the school committee were aware of the second petition, they were not bound to refrain from entering into the 1969-70 agreement. Moreover, the Massachusetts bargaining statute provides that "no election shall be directed during the term of a collective bargaining agreement; except that for good cause shown the Commission may direct an election."

However, the MLRC determined that the filing of a second election petition in less than a year's time was evidence of "good cause," explaining:

> While the Labor Relations Commission is aware of the impressive improvements in the conditions of employment, as well as the educational improvements which were negotiated by the [Springfield Education Association] for the teachers in the Springfield School Department, the Commission finds that the filing of petitions on October 29, 1968 and again on June 18, 1969 is evidence of substantial unrest in the Springfield school system, which is under the statute, good cause for conducting an election because it raises a very crucial question of representation which the Commission cannot ignore. While the Commission is aware that [the statute prohibiting an election during the term of a contract except for good cause shown] was made a part of the Municipal Bargaining Law to accomplish stability in labor relations in the public sector, we cannot use this section to defeat the rights of employees where such stability does not exist and where strife and unrest exist among the employees of the Springfield School Department.

NOTE: In a representation election held on March 19, 1970, Local 484 defeated the SEA by a vote of 677 to 625.

MICHIGAN

MERE NONDISCRIMINATION IN RECRUITMENT INADEQUATE; SCHOOL BOARD DIRECTED TO "ACTIVELY RECRUIT" INTEGRATED STAFF

A grievance submitted to final and binding arbitration by the East Detroit Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Local 698, resulted in a finding that the East Detroit education board had failed to comply with a negotiated contract provision stating that the board "shall seek out and hire a certified integrated Staff reflective of all races." In interpreting the language of the contract provision, the American Arbitration Association arbitrator paraphrased testimony delivered by the Secretary of Labor before a Senate subcommittee, explaining that "there is an important difference between passive nondiscrimination and pursuing actively the goal of equal employment opportunity, and . . . to insure equal employment opportunity, there must be activity in the form of affirmative action to overcome patterns of discrimination."

The contract provision in question (Article III, Paragraph E) first was included in the 1968-69 agreement between Local 698 and the Detroit board, and since has been continued in the 1969-71 agreement. Article III, entitled "Fair Employment Practices," provides:

> A. This Agreement shall be applied uniformly to all employees within the Bargaining Unit and there shall be no discrimination among the employees in the Bargaining Unit as regards terms or conditions of employment.
>
> B. Neither the Board nor its agents shall discriminate against any teacher on the basis of race, creed, color, national origin, sex, marital status, political activities or membership or participation in the activities of any employee organization.
>
> C. The Union agrees that it shall admit all teachers to its membership without discrimination by reason of race, creed, color, national origin, sex, marital status or prior membership or past participation in the activities of any employee organization.
>
> D. Membership in any employment group shall not be required as a condition of employment of any teachers with the Board. Further, nothing herein shall prohibit or require any teacher from being a member of or participant in the activities of any Union group except as required by the provisions of this Contract.
> E. The Board of Education shall seek out and hire a certified integrated staff reflective of all races.

According to testimony presented during the arbitration hearing, Paragraph E was submitted to school-board representatives by the Federation bargaining committee during a May 1968 bargaining session, and agreed upon by both parties following little discussion. The Federation president testified that during the bargaining meeting the assistant superintendent of schools said the board "does not discriminate," agreed that the district staff should be integrated, and maintained that minority group teachers should be sought and hired. In addition, the chairman of the Federation's 1968-69 bargaining committee testified that the Federation "desired the language, 'seek out and hire,' because it meant that the School Board would try to hire teachers from minority races in every possible way." Board representatives raised no objections to the language of Paragraph E, and the assistant superintendent of schools testified that the language enunciated "the ongoing policy of the District." There was no discussion of the mechanics of implementation during the bargaining session.

Then on April 29, 1969, the two Federation officials met with the superintendent and assistant superintendent of schools to discuss specific hiring practices for the fall of 1969. According to the school officials, approximately 80 teachers were needed for the 1969-70 school year, and 35 had been hired at that time. None of these 35 were members of a minority group. Moreover, 300 interviews had been conducted up to that time, and only one of the interviewees was a member of a minority group. The two school officials maintained that school policy adhered to federal and state fair employment practices statutes, and that Paragraph E had not been violated. Following the meeting, the school board added the phrase "an equal opportunity employer" to its college recruitment bulletins, but no other action was taken.

A grievance charging a continuing violation accordingly was entered by the Federation, which contended that the district had failed to comply with Paragraph E, and that immediate changes in the district's recruitment policies were needed to implement the contract provision. In denying the grievance, the East Detroit assistant superintendent of instruction outlined at length the education board's "legal and ethical responsibilities," and reviewed its recruitment policies:

> First of all, our teacher needs are written and posted approximately every three weeks in all nineteen (19) Michigan teacher training institutions . . . . This bulletin is also sent approximately three (3) times per year to teacher training colleges in Ohio and Pennsylvania. Since all of these colleges are integrated, our staff needs are made known to certified, integrated teachers, reflective of all races.
>
> Secondly, we visit the campuses of the major Michigan universities during March, April, and May of each year. The campus placement offices set up schedules of candidates to interview with no set conditions whatever, as required by law. We may not request to see candidates of one race or another, nor may we request pictures of the candidates, etc.
>
> Thirdly, to gain broader coverage our school district posts notices and invites applications through ASCUS (Association of School, College and University Staffing) . . . .

As a result of this process, our employment to date does include minority group representation for September 1969.

In our opinion our personnel employment procedures do comply with the Fair Employment Practices Act and the terms of our Collective Bargaining Agreement, and on the basis of our record as outlined the grievance does not have validity and is herewith denied.

An appeal to the superintendent of schools was denied on similar grounds. And a second appeal to the education board resulted in a July 8, 1969, denial "on the basis that the School District of the City of East Detroit has fulfilled the terms of the East Detroit 1968-69 Teachers Contract."

The Federation then submitted its grievance to arbitration, contending that Paragraph E was proposed and agreed to "because there are no Black or other minority group teachers in the School System," and that Paragraph E "requires affirmative action by the School Board [and] has not been implemented by [the board]." On the other hand, the board argued that Paragraph E "is a restatement of the policy which the School Board had been following prior to its adoption, and has been following ever since its adoption," that the purpose of the clause was to reiterate school board policy, and that the school board "has complied with Paragraph E and is continuing to do so."

Noting that there are no black students in the East Detroit system and that only one black teacher (of a total of 550 teachers) was employed for the 1969-70 school year, the arbitrator emphasized that "there is no charge that the School Board has discriminated, or is discriminating, against any teacher on the basis of race, color or national origin." But he determined that a study of the contract and the evidence established that Paragraph E requires action beyond that specified in Paragraph B of Article III.

While there was little discussion at the May, 1968, bargaining session concerning the meaning of Paragraph E, the evidence persuades that it was submitted for the purpose of requiring affirmative School Board action beyond the practice then in effect, and beyond strict legal requirements.

Paragraph B is a passive provision. It means that the School Board will not take any affirmative action to discriminate against a teacher, but requires no affirmative action by the School Board. It requires compliance with applicable Fair Employment Practices statutes. Also, Paragraph B is not applicable to applicants for teaching positions. While, as the Board noted at the hearing, both Federal and State Law prohibit discrimination in hiring, the statutes do not require affirmative action to seek out [emphasis added] minority group teachers.

The Board urges that it intended Paragraph E solely as a reiteration of its existing policy. There would be no need to adopt this affirmative clause to restate existing policy. I agree with Counsel for the Federation that if this had been the intent, it is likely that the language would have read, "The Board of Education shall continue to seek out and hire a certified integrated staff reflective of all races.

Contrary to the contention of the School Board, the evidence discloses that the School Board did not, prior to May, 1968, have an active program of seeking out teachers from minority races. The phrase "seek out" is an active expression which requires affirmative action. "Seek" means "to go in search of: look for: to try to discover."

Turning to the testimony of the assistant superintendent of schools, the arbitrator noted that of the 800 to 900 candidates interviewed for the 1969-70 school year, only about 25 were black. Moreover, the school official stated that he usually does not ask college placement offices to provide black students for interviews; although he had asked the University of Michigan placement office to provide black students for interviews, he had not done so at Wayne State University (which has a larger black population). The arbitrator therefore concluded that "while there is no evidence of discrimination, there has been a lack of any affirmative effort to find Black teachers." Pointing to the mandatory "shall" contained in Paragraph E, the arbitrator held:

The evidence established that the School Board is not doing as much as it legally can to recruit Black teachers and persons of other minority races in the colleges of education. I know of no rule which renders it illegal for an East Detroit recruiter to ask placement directors at colleges and universities for an opportunity to interview Black students, and students of other minority races.

Concluding that the East Detroit Board had not complied with the requirements of Paragraph E, the arbitrator directed that the following action be taken.

A. Request that placement officers at Michigan colleges and universities where there are a substantial number of Black students in the schools of education attempt to secure Black students to interview with a representative of the East Detroit Board of Education for teaching positions in the East Detroit system;

B. Actively recruit at colleges and universities outside of the State of Michigan which have large Black student bodies . . . [with the suggestion that the number of colleges and universities] be not less than two, with a top limit of eight. The Board and Administrative Staff is not required to take unreasonable action in complying with Paragraph E;

C. Place at least three advertisements during the recruiting season in a newspaper, or newspapers, published primarily for Black readers.

While not directing the East Detroit board to take any action with respect to nonwhite groups other than blacks, the arbitrator suggested that the Board and the Federation "explore this matter and, if feasible, that efforts be made to secure non-white persons from other than the Negro race." He also suggested that the board's ASCUS advertisement include the phrase "an equal opportunity employer," as does its college recruitment bulletin.

NEW YORK

BARGAINING UNIT OF TOP-LEVEL ADMINISTRATORS AND SUPERVISORS RULED APPROPRIATE

In compliance with the provisions of New York's Taylor Law, an independent arbitrator ruled appropriate a bargaining unit comprised of 30 assistant superintendents, administrative directors, supervising directors, coordinators, and other top administrative personnel employed by the Rochester school system. Following the arbitrator's January 9 unit determination, an election was held, and the Association of Central Office Administrators (ACOA) was unanimously selected and accordingly certified as bargaining representative for the unit.

The ACOA first was established in October 1969 when salary increases for four assistant superintendents were passed and then nullified by a Rochester school board resolution. In mid-November the ACOA petitioned for a representation election, and a professor at the New York State School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell University was selected to hear the petition.

The arbitrator subsequently determined that "there is no prohibition in the Taylor Law against the recognition of organizations of managerial and executive personnel." Explaining that the act defines "public employee" broadly enough to include recognition of top-level administrators, the arbitrator found that the proposed unit met the act's "criteria of appropriateness" in that the community of interest of all employees in the proposed unit was similar. In addition, the arbitrator held that "although the members of the proposed unit have historically had different fringe benefits and salary increases . . . this factor possesses merely the significance of tradition" and does not affect the appropriateness of the unit, because "no evidence has been offered to suggest that there is any conflict of interest between or among the members of the proposed unit."

Referring to a provision of the Taylor Law which states that "the unit shall be compatible with the joint responsibilities of the public employer and public employees to serve the public," the arbitrator held that "so far as any potential conflict of interest with other units is concerned, it should be noted that [the ACOA] is not affiliated, directly or indirectly, with organizations representing members of other units." The arbitrator emphasized this point because "some members of the proposed unit are involved as representatives of the Board and the Superintendent in collective negotiations with the other units."

As of the ACOA election, the arbitrator noted that all Rochester school system employees were "in negotiating units with the exception of the Superintendent and the confidential secretaries." Members of the latest bargaining unit originally were excluded from a unit of administrative and supervisory personnel which was found appropriate in November 1967, because "their responsibilities in evaluating and supervising the administrators below them would [have created] an inherent conflict of interest."

WISCONSIN

FEDERALLY PAID TEACHERS APPROPRIATELY ARE INCLUDED IN UNIT OF MUNICIPALLY PAID TEACHERS

In response to a petition for clarification of a Milwaukee teachers' bargaining unit certified on June 17, 1963, the Wisconsin Employment Relations Commission (WERC) decided that teachers who are teaching under federally funded programs are "regular teaching personnel," and appropriately are included in a single, over-all teachers' bargaining unit.

The Milwaukee Vocational Teachers Union, American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, Local 212, entered a petition before the WERC stating that the Milwaukee Board of Vocational and Adult Education "refused to recognize the petitioner as the representative of those of its employees who are teaching in programs sponsored by the Government of the United States under Acts of Congress, such as, by way of illustration, the Manpower Defense Trainee Act [MDTA] and the Adult Basic Education Act [ABEA]." Although the employer did not dispute the fact that federally paid teachers are eligible for inclusion in an appropriate bargaining unit, it argued that such employees should comprise a separate unit because their community of interest differs from that of teachers in the over-all unit.

Citing an earlier decision reached in Superior Vocational, Technical and Adult School as controlling of the present case, the WERC held that teachers paid under the MDTA and teaching at least half of a full teaching schedule appropriately are included in a bargaining unit consisting of all regular teaching personnel. Noting that the teachers in the present case met this work load specification, the WERC explained that teachers paid by the MDTA and ABEA programs have working conditions, duties, and functions similar to board-paid teachers, are considered to be professional teachers, and form a segment of the public employer's teaching staff. Moreover, they teach under the same rules and regulations as other teachers, have their salaries determined in a like manner, and are eligible for the same retirement, health insurance, sick leave, and holiday benefits. Although federally paid teachers may be subject to different life insurance benefits, and certification and tenure requirements, the WERC determined that these differences are outweighed by the homogeneous nature of the entire profession.

In addition, the WERC noted that when the 1963 representation election was held, the public employer submitted a list of the names of all teachers employed under the MDTA program, and these teachers voted without challenge. The number of Milwaukee MDTA teachers since has increased, but the WERC found no changes in the duties and responsibilities of such teachers which would warrant their exclusion from the over-all teachers' bargaining unit. NLRB SAYS EMPLOYERS MAY JOIN UNIONS WHICH REPRESENT THEIR EMPLOYEES

In a syllogistic exercise involving several alleged violations of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA), a National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) trial examiner found that it was not unlawful for employers to join employee unions and accordingly contribute membership dues and fees to the unions, because such payments did not threaten the unions' independence, and the employers had joined the unions for reasons of economic self-preservation. Conversely, the unions did not commit a violative act by accepting the employers' membership payments.

Provisions of the NLRA which allegedly were violated included:

Sec. 8(a)(1)—It shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer . . . to interfere with, restrain, or coerce employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 7.

Sec. 8(a)(2)—It shall be an unfair labor practice for an employer . . . to dominate or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization or contribute financial or other support to it.

Sec. 8(b)(1)(A)—It shall be an unfair labor practice for a labor organization or its agents . . . to restrain or coerce . . . employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 7: Provided, That this paragraph shall not impair the right of a labor organization to prescribe its own rules with respect to the acquisition or retention of membership therein.

Sec. 7—Employees shall have the right to self-organization, to form, join, or assist labor organizations, to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and to engage in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection, and shall also have the right to refrain from any or all of such activities except to the extent that such right may be affected by an agreement requiring membership in a labor organization as a condition of employment as authorized in section 8(a)(3).

The charges before the NLRB examiner involved two associations of employers which represented their employer-members in negotiating and executing contracts with two unions. The Eastern Missouri Contractors' Association (EMCA), an organization of employers in the construction industry, negotiated with the Congress of Independent Unions, Local 77, which represented employees of the EMCA's employer-members. Another similar employer association designated MCA bargained with the Congress of Independent Unions, Local 99, which represented the employees of the MCA's employer-members. Employers represented by the EMCA and the MCA had paid the fees and dues of membership for themselves in the union locals, and the locals had accepted these membership payments. Charges accordingly were brought against both the associations and the unions for interfering with, restraining, and coercing employees in the exercise of their rights to self-organization.

Specifically, the EMCA and the MCA were charged with allegedly violating Sections 8(a)(2) and (1) of the NLRA because their employer-members had given financial assistance to Locals 77 and 99, in the form of dues and fees paid to defray the costs of the employers' memberships in the unions. In addition, it was alleged that Locals 77 and 99, had violated Section 8(b)(1)(A) of the NLRA by admitting the employers to membership and accepting their fees and dues. One further charge alleged that one of the MCA's employer-members violated Sections 8(a)(2) and (1) of the NLRA by paying Local 99 the membership fees and dues of two of its employees—and, conversely, that Local 99 violated Section 8(b)(1)(A) of the NLRA by accepting the payments.

Noting that the EMCA and the MCA did not answer the allegations, the trial examiner found that the associations' "non-denials were admissions [binding only on themselves] that membership payments were made." But he held that "there was no evidence that such payments were in fact made for any reason other than to obtain protection against picketing of the associations' jobs [i.e., the jobs of the associations' employer-members] while they worked at their trade." Moreover, both locals had entered denials of these allegations, and the examiner found that "there was no evidence that the Locals were dominated by the employers or that they represented an uncoerced majority of the employees in the bargaining units." The examiner accordingly dismissed the allegations charging violation of Sections 8(a)(2) and (1), and 8(b)(1)(A) of the NLRA, explaining:

> It was clear that the payment of dues and fees by management was not a direct threat to the unions' independence, particularly where the employers had joined the unions as a matter of economic self-preservation. This was based on prior findings that sanction membership by supervisors in unions, which necessarily implied that nothing in the [NLRA] could be construed to prohibit supervisors from qualifying for union membership by paying union initiation fees and dues. Therefore, if that treatment of the problem was feasible in the case of supervisors, it was clear that the same could be true in the case of employers.
> It was alleged that since the payment of the employer contributions constituted a violation of Section 8(a)(2) then the acceptance by the unions of those payments constituted a violation of Section 8(b)(1)(A) of the [NLRA]. Having found that such payments did not constitute unlawful assistance, there was no basis, under the syllogism, for finding that the acceptance was unlawful.

As to the charge brought against the MCA alone, the examiner determined that "the thrust of the allegation was that it was the substantiality of the employers' payments involved that was the gravamen of the offense." He noted, however, that the "only evidence was that the [MCA employer-member] paid to Local 99 twenty-four dollars to cover a three-month dues period for two employees." Stating that the NLRB "has found no violation [of Sections 8(a)(2) and (1)] where there was no other evidence of union assistance and the amount involved was insubstantial," the examiner dismissed the allegation against the MCA. Moreover, the charge against Local 99 for receiving the payment was dismissed, because "no case has held that a union violates Section 8(b)(1)(A) by accepting such payment."

One additional alleged violation of the NLRA concerned a union security clause contained in the first contract (effective from August 1, 1964, to July 31, 1966) negotiated between the EMCA and Local 77. Although the clause was retained in the contract beyond the June 1965 cutoff date specified in the NLRA, the examiner held that > the mere existence of the clause after that date would not be unlawful, if there were no employees to whom it could have possibly applied between that date and July 31, 1966, when the contract expired.

>
> Such a violation could not be found as based upon the EMCA's non-denial which really was an admission as to the terms of the clause and was not an admission that employees were actually subject to the clause's application.

ILLINOIS

TEACHER CONTRACTS MAY CONTAIN BINDING GRIEVANCE ARBITRATION PROVISIONS

The Illinois Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction issued a January 14, 1970, opinion holding that "a school which enters into an agreement or contract may have as a part of the contract a provision in regard to binding [grievance] arbitration." The opinion cited three Illinois court cases which established that a municipality may enter into binding grievance arbitration, that a school board has the power to enter into collective bargaining agreements, and that such a power enables a school board to include a binding grievance arbitration provision in agreements it negotiates.

MAINE

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE ESTABLISHED FOR STATE EMPLOYEES

An amendment to Title 5 of the Maine Revised Statutes established a three-member State Employees Appeals Board empowered "to mediate the final settlement of all grievances and disputes between individual state employees, both classified and unclassified, and their respective state agencies, except in matters of classification and compensation." Members of the board are to be appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the executive committee, and the board is to "report bienially to the Governor and Legislature facts and recommendations relating to the administration and needs of the board."

All decisions rendered by the board "shall be final and binding upon the state agency and state employees involved in the dispute, and shall supersede any prior action taken by the state agency with reference to the employment and working conditions of such employees." The board is granted the power to subpoena any witnesses or documentary evidence pertinent to its investigations, and may request a superior court order to force compliance with a subpoena.

Any public employee who seeks settlement of a grievance through the established procedure may be represented at each step by his chosen representative. The grievance procedure outlined in the statute consists of six steps:

1. Voluntary, oral attempt by the grievant or his representative and the grievant's immediate supervisor to settle the grievance.
2. Grievant's submission of his grievance in writing to his supervisor, followed by the supervisor's written decision within three working days.
3. Written appeal to the grievant's department head, followed by the department head's written decision within three working days.
4. Meeting between the department head and the grievant or his representative in an attempt to adjust the dispute.
5. Written appeal to the director of personnel, who shall issue a written reply based upon the state's personnel rules and laws to the grievant and his department head within six working days.
6. Submission of the dispute to the State Employees Appeals Board, which "shall investigate the matters in controversy, shall hear all interested persons who come before it, and make a written decision thereof, which shall be binding on the parties involved." The board's decision is to be rendered within 30 days after the dispute is submitted unless the parties to the dispute agree to an extension of the specified time limit.

MINNESOTA

NATURE OF STUDENT TEACHER PROGRAM COMPENSATION DEFINED

In response to several questions raised by a local school district attorney, the Minnesota attorney general determined that compensation for supervisory work in a student teacher program must be specified as additional compensation in an individual teacher's contract. In addition, he held that funds made available for compensating supervising teachers are public funds which are subject to certain restrictions placed upon their expenditure, and that the distribution of such funds to the local education association is gratuitous and unlawful.

Independent School District No. 147 of Dilworth had a contractual arrangement with Moorhead State College whereby the college sent student teachers to practice under the supervision of district teachers, and remitted funds to the district for use in compensating the supervising teachers. Normal teaching functions performed by the district's teachers were compensated in accordance with a schedule contained in a negotiated agreement between the district and the local education association.

Citing a portion of the Minnesota statutes which holds that written contracts between a school board and its teachers "shall specify the wages per year and the general assignment of the teacher," the attorney general determined that a supervising teacher's "general assignment and the total compensation therefor [must] be specified in the teacher's contract. The contract must be such that the teacher's wages can be determined with absolute certainty from the contract itself." He added that since "school districts are organized solely for public purposes," any funds remitted by Moorehead State College and received by the district "are held and expended only on behalf of the public and for the public good."

Noting that the local education association "renders no service in the practice teacher program," the attorney general found that "any payments to it by the school district would not be in the nature of compensation or reimbursement . . . . It can only be concluded that the payments would constitute a gratuity. Such an expenditure is unauthorized and unlawful."

NEVADA

STATE EMPLOYEES DENIED BARGAINING RIGHTS UNDER PRESENT LAW

An opinion issued by the Nevada attorney general on January 19, 1970, held that state law currently prohibits state employees from bargaining collectively with their state employers. Although local government employees are granted bargaining rights under the Local Government Employee-Management Relations Act, the attorney general ruled that the act does not apply to state employees "regardless of improper class legislation and invidious discrimination, which cast doubt on the constitutional validity of the act."

The opinion was handed down when staff nurses of the Nevada Division of Health joined the Nevada Nurses Association and asked that the association be designated as their bargaining agent. As the nurses are state employees, the attorney general ruled that "such activity is illegal until specifically authorized by the legislature."

NEW MEXICO

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES DENIED EXCLUSIVE REPRESENTATION AND BARGAINING RIGHTS

An opinion issued by the New Mexico attorney general on January 23, 1970, held that, in the absence of specific legislation, state or political entities may not recognize a union as exclusive bargaining agent for an employee unit, even though a majority of the employees in that unit elect to be represented by the union. According to state public policy as set forth in a 1959 attorney general opinion, "employees of a state, municipality, or subdivision thereof can probably belong informally to unions, but they cannot engage in collective bargaining, picket, or strike against the government."

NORTH DAKOTA

INDIVIDUAL TEACHERS PERMITTED TO NEGOTIATE DIRECTLY WITH SCHOOL BOARD, BUT BOARD MAY REFUSE

The North Dakota attorney general issued a January 9, 1970, opinion, finding that any teacher who does not wish "to join or participate in the activities of any organization authorized by an appropriate negotiating unit to represent the members of the unit in negotiations with a school board . . . has the [individual] right to present his views directly to the school board . . . [and] must have the right to negotiate directly with the school board." However, while a school board must allow an individual teacher to present his views, the board "on its own volition could determine it will not negotiate independently with any teacher and that any teacher who is a part of such negotiation unit must accept the contract negotiated with the representative organization of such negotiation unit" [emphases added].

In making this determination, the attorney general noted Sections 15-38.1-07 and 15-38.1-08 of the North Dakota Teacher Representation and Negotiation Act:

1. Teachers, or administrators, shall have the right to form, join, and participate in the activities of representative organizations of their choosing for the purpose of representation on matters of employer-employee relations.
2. Teachers, or administrators, shall also have the right to refuse to join or participate in the activities of representative organizations [15-38.1-07].
3. Representative organizations shall have the right to represent the appropriate negotiating unit in matters of employee relations with the school board. Any teacher, or administrator, shall have the right to present his views directly to the school board [15-38.1-08].

An "appropriate negotiating unit" is defined by the act as "a group of teachers having common interests, common problems, a common employer, or a history of common representation, which warrants that group being represented by a single representative organization in negotiations with a school board." And the term "representative organization" is defined as "any organization authorized by an appropriate negotiating unit to represent the members of the unit in negotiations with a school board."

The opinion was issued in response to a request by the state superintendent of public instruction for clarification of the phrase "present his views." The attorney general initially explained that there is a significant distinction between an appropriate negotiating unit and a representative organization. A teacher may be classified as a part of an appropriate negotiating unit by virtue of his position in a school system since it would appear to be the position rather than the teacher which is being classified. The individual teacher, once such classification has been determined as provided by the statutes, does not have an individual option as to the negotiating unit in which his position is classified. However, the above quoted statutes do authorize the individual teacher the choice of not joining or participating in the activities of the representative organization authorized by the appropriate negotiating unit in which his position is classified to represent the members of the unit in negotiations with a school board.

Any teacher who declines participation in the representative organization accordingly has the individual right to present his views to the school board, and to negotiate directly with the board. Although the school board "must permit the individual teacher to present his view," the attorney general held it "possible" that a school board may refuse to negotiate independently with an individual teacher and require that teacher to accept the contract negotiated by the organization representing his unit.

In addition, the attorney general explained that any teachers who decline to associate themselves with the organization representing their negotiating unit would not be entitled to have a separate organization represent them as a unit since the unit has already selected its representative organization. In other words, if one or more teachers do not wish to join or participate in the activities of the representative organization selected by their negotiating unit, such teachers may then only negotiate with the school board on an individual basis, and not as a separate representative organization basis.

Another question raised was whether teachers who decline membership in the representative organization publicly should be identified. The attorney general deemed such identification practical, necessary, and unavoidable, and found "nothing in the statutes which prevent a teacher who presented his views directly to the school board rather than through a representative organization from being identified."

OHIO

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES TERMINATED FOR STRIKING ALLOWED APPEAL ONLY TO COURTS

The Ohio Court of Appeals ruled that public employees who are terminated for engaging in a strike may appeal their cause only to the courts, because of legislative intent inherent in the state's anti-strike statute. In so ruling, the court differentiated between the words "removal" and "termination," and held that public employees who are terminated for striking do not have the right of appeal to the State Personnel Board of Review granted classified civil service employees who are reduced, suspended, or removed on the basis of specified grounds other than striking.

More than 100 employees of the Lawrence County General Hospital were terminated by the hospital's board of trustees for allegedly striking in violation of provisions of Chapter 4117, Revised Code, which hold that "no public employee shall strike," and that violations "will result in termination of employment and loss of rights for the employee." Following a hearing at which termination of the appellants' employment was affirmed, the appellants appealed their cause to the Lawrence County Common Pleas Court. The trial court, however, dismissed the appeal on grounds that the appellants "had failed to exhaust their administrative remedies by appeal to the State Personnel Board of Review pursuant to Section 143.27, Revised Code."

The appellants then instituted an appeal before the Ohio Court of Appeals in which the court determined that the final question dispositive of this appeal . . . is whether a classified civil service employee has the right to appeal to the State Personnel Board of Review pursuant to Section 143.27, Revised Code, after the termination of his employment under Chapter 4117, Revised Code, in as much as Section 143.27, Revised Code, provides for appeals from removal from employment by employees in the classified service.

Noting that the appellants had not clarified the nature of their civil service status and that appeals to the State Personnel Board of Review under Section 143.27 are limited to classified civil service employees who are reduced, suspended, or removed for specified reasons that do not include striking, the appeals court concluded that it would be a tenuous and improper construction of the appeal provision in Section 143.27, Revised Code, to read into it a right of appeal of classified employees from terminations under Chapter 4117 . . . . Is a termination under Chapter 4117, Revised Code, a "removal" as that term is used under Section 143.27, Revised Code? We hold that it is not. Section 4117.05, Revised Code, provides that any public employee who violates the sections therein "shall thereby be considered to have abandoned and terminated his appointment or employment and shall no longer hold such position, or be entitled to any of the rights or emoluments thereof." We have no doubt that most public employees who strike do not actually intend to abandon their employment. The legislative intent in the enactment of this chapter is clear. It was intended to prevent strikes by public employees and to terminate their employment if they do so. Regardless of his subjective intention, every public employee presumptively knows that if he strikes he will, by this section, be deemed in law to have abandoned and terminated his employment. In effect, by striking he resigns his position. In Rieke, Gdn., v. Hogan . . . the Ohio Supreme Court has stated that "abandonment may be treated as a constructive resignation" . . . . We observe nothing in the statute allowing an appeal by a public employee, under Section 143.27, Revised Code, who has abandoned, in law, his employment, by virtue of Chapter 4117.

The appeals court further explained that Chapter 4117 is applied broadly to public employees, because the definition of public employees contained in the statute is not restricted to persons employed in the classified service. As the main purpose of Chapter 4117 is to prohibit public employee strikes, the court held that "it does not seem a logical interpretation . . . to provide an additional administrative hearing to those accused of the same act, to wit, striking, if they were in the classified service, and deny it to those not in that classification."

As such, the appeals court ruled that the appellants, "irrespective of the status as classified or unclassified employees of the state civil service, had no right of appeal pursuant to Section 143.27, Revised Code." Moreover, the court reversed the dismissal order rendered by the Lawrence County Common Pleas Court as "contrary to law," and remanded the case for further proceedings according to law.

OREGON

PERB ADOPTS REPRESENTATION AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION RULES GOVERNING STATE EMPLOYEES

Procedures outlining the determination of public employee representation and the resolution of public employee labor disputes in the state classified service were adopted by the Oregon Public Employee Relations Board (PERB) on January 12, 1970, pursuant to the state's bargaining law. In setting the groundwork for its rules, the PERB defined collective bargaining as the performance of the mutual obligation of a public employer and the representative of its employes to meet at reasonable times and confer in good faith with respect to employment relations, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder, and the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party. However, this obligation does not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession.

According to the rules, " 'employment relations' includes, but is not limited to, matters concerning direct or indirect monetary benefits, hours, vacations, sick leave, grievance procedures and other conditions of employment."

The rules specifically provide that public employees have the right to "form, join and participate in the activities of labor organizations of their own choosing for the purpose of representation and collective bargaining with their public employers on matters concerning employment relations." And public employers are prohibited from interfering with, intimidating, restraining, coercing, or discriminating against public employees in the exercise of those rights.

In determining the appropriateness of a bargaining unit, the PERB shall consider whether the proposed unit of employes is a distinct and homogeneous group, with significant problems which can be negotiated and adjusted without regard to the other employes of the employer, and it may consider the relationship of the proposed unit to the total organizational pattern of the employer. Neither the extent to which employes have been organized by a labor organization nor the desires of a particular group of employes to be represented separately or by a particular organization shall be controlling on the question of whether a proposed unit is appropriate.

Excluded from a bargaining unit are: "(1) management and supervisory employes designated by the employer to represent, advise or assist him in collective bargaining; (2) employes who occupy a position of a confidential nature relating to employe relations; and (3) persons appointed on a temporary or emergency basis who will not be employed for more than 90 calendar days." However, the rules also provide that once a bargaining unit is established and its representative elected and certified, nothing "shall prohibit consultation and agreement regarding changes in the composition of the list of excluded positions."

Petitions for representation or decertification (both of which must be supported by the signatures of 30 percent of the employees in a proposed or existing bargaining unit) may not be filed "for a unit or a subdivision of one in which a valid election has been held during the preceding 12-month period." Moreover, the existence of "a valid collective bargaining contract with a term of up to two years' duration shall be a bar to any election involving employes covered by the contract for its entire term."

When a representation election is sought, all organizations wishing to intervene must be supported by 10 percent of the employees in the proposed or existing unit. All bargaining unit employees who have been on pay status for 40 calendar days prior to an election are eligible to vote, and the secret ballot election must provide "an opportunity to vote for any one of the candidates on the ballot or for no representation."

The labor organization receiving a majority of the votes cast will be certified by the PERB as exclusive bargaining representative. In the event that no choice receives a majority of the votes cast in a election where there are three or more choices, "a run-off election shall be conducted . . . between the two choices receiving the largest and second largest number of votes cast in the previous election."

The rules further provide that the PERB investigate unfair labor practice charges, assist in mediating labor controversies, and initiate fact-finding upon the request of either party to an impasse, or if the PERB itself determines that an impasse has been reached. As fact-finding is left to the discretion of the PERB, a fact-finding committee will not be appointed "if there has not been a sincere attempt to mediate the dispute." All conclusions reached by a fact-finding committee are to be in the form of "written findings of fact and recommendations for solution of the dispute," and are to be made public "not later than the fifth day after [being] submitted . . . unless the parties, before that time, reach agreement on the matters in dispute."

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX, JANUARY 1970

Figures reported by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) indicate that the Consumer Price Index (CPI) all items figure for January 1970 stood at 131.8 (1957-59=100), an 0.4 percent rise over December 1969. The January figure represented a 6.2 percent rise above the all items figure of a year ago. BLS also reported that, as of January, the purchasing power of the consumer dollar stood at $0.759 in relation to its average buying power in 1957-59.

Consumer service charges, which accounted for a major part of the January rise, "rose by an accelerated 0.9 percent, largely because of a sharp rise in transportation services." Medical care service charges progressed at a rate comparable to that of December, although hospital daily service charges continued to rise. BLS attributed a slower upward movement in household service charges during January to "a drop in prices of residential telephone services." Food prices rose a greater than usual 0.6 percent in January, and BLS noted that beef prices posted their first increase since July 1969.

Commodities other than food declined less than seasonally in January, while the prices of nondurable goods rose 0.2 percent. Consumer durables exhibited "a contraseasonal increase as prices of new cars failed to decline as much as usual and house prices climbed fairly sharply," according to BLS.

An estimated 100,000 workers, primarily in the automotive and aircraft equipment, and office machinery industries, will receive cost-of-living wage increases based upon the January CPI.

Statistics

NEGOTIATION AGREEMENTS: SICK LEAVE BANK PROVISIONS

The NEA Research Division's analysis of 978 comprehensive classroom teacher agreements effective during the 1968-69 school year indicates that 49 of these agreements (5 percent) contain sick leave bank provisions. The 49 provisions vary in scope and structure: two establish joint teacher-board committees to study and plan sick leave banks, while the other 47 provisions establish formally structured sick leave banks. Of the 49 agreements containing negotiated sick leave banks, 42 are found in Michigan, four in New York, and one each in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island. Distribution of these agreements according to enrollment strata is as follows:

Stratum	School system enrollment	Number of agreements with sick leave bank provisions
1	100,000 or more	0
2	50,000-99,999	0
3	25,000-49,999	2
4	12,000-24,999	10
5	6,000-11,999	12
6	3,000- 5,999	11
7	1,200- 2,999	13
8	1,000- 1,199	3

A sick leave bank is a plan for pooling sick leave days or a sum of money to be shared by school-board employees who are qualified to participate in the program. All participating employees thereby are able to obtain sick leave days over and above their own annual, accumulated sick leave for use in cases of prolonged illness or disability. All days obtained through a sick leave bank are paid leave days, and the employee is not required to repay them in money, or replace them through a donation of his own sick leave days. Provisions whereby each individual employee accumulates extra emergency leave or is granted leave for extended illness are not sick leave bank provisions.

Of the 49 agreements containing sick leave bank provisions, 47 also provide for the accumulation of sick leave days annually allotted to individual employees. Three agreements do not define a maximum accumulation of annual sick leave days, and 12 agreements allow board employees an unlimited accumulation of such days. Of the agreements specifically limiting the maximum accumulation of annual sick leave days, 11 set the maximum between 50 and 99 days, 10 provide a maximum ranging between 100 and 149 days, and 11 establish a maximum ranging between 150 and 200 days. As such, the sick leave bank is not a substitute for cumulative leave in a majority of the 49 school systems with agreements containing sick leave banks.

Tables 1, 2, and 3 present a system-by-system listing of the 49 sick leave bank provisions according to negotiated content. The analysis is limited to what appears in written negotiation agreements; it is not concerned with actual practices or verbal agreements reached by school boards and teachers groups. Table 1 provides general information about sick leave bank provisions, including a definition of board employees eligible to participate in the bank, the nature of participants' contributions to the bank, and the body administering or making decisions about the use of the bank. Since all sick leave bank provisions appear in classroom teacher agreements, it is assumed that they apply to classroom teachers; only 15 agreements specifically define the employees eligible to participate in the bank. Twelve provisions state that the employee's contribution to the bank is voluntary, while 20 provisions call for required contributions to the bank. Of the 17 provisions which do not indicate the nature of employee contributions, nine provide that only the school board contributes to the bank, and one states that teachers may vote on the nature of their contributions. Thirty-eight of the 49 agreements contain negotiated items concerning the body which administers the bank or makes decisions concerning its use: 13 sick banks are administered by employees or their representatives; four are administered by the school administration; 20 are administered jointly by employees or their representatives and the school administration; and one is administered by an undefined committee.

Table 2 summarizes the negotiated amount and source of contributions to the sick leave bank. Of the 46 provisions specifying the amount and source of days or money contributed to the bank, 13 indicate that both the board and its employees contribute to the bank, 22 indicate that only employees contribute to the bank, and 11 provide that only the board contributes to the bank. A maximum or minimum number of days to be maintained in the sick leave bank is negotiated in 27 of the provisions.

Table 3 presents the negotiated regulations governing the use of the sick leave bank. In 39 provisions an employee's use of the bank is predicated upon the prior exhaustion of all of his annual and cumulative sick leave. In one provision an employee may draw leave from the bank after using only a stipulated number of his own leave days. Five provisions require a medical examination before use of the bank, and eight provisions state that the administering agent may request a medical examination during an employee's use of leave from the bank. In 25 provisions a maximum possible waiting period before use of the sick leave bank is negotiated, specifying either the number of days an employee must wait after the exhaustion of his own leave, or the number of days an employee must be sick before using the bank. (All figures relative to the maximum possible waiting period were derived by assuming that an employee has no sick leave of his own.) Twenty-eight provisions indicate the maximum number of days per year or per illness which can be drawn from the bank by an individual employee.

In addition to the three tables, three of the 49 negotiated sick leave bank provisions are printed in their entirety.

[a] Each teacher contributes $5 per year, and the board matches this contribution.

[b] The formula applied is: each year the board contributes a sum equal to the number of teachers in the bargaining unit times the average number of days used for illness, disability, and personal business times the per diem substitute rate.

[c] The maximum total number of days maintained in the sick leave bank is equal to the total number of employees.

[d] The style used is that of an algebraic formula.

City of Ferndale School District, Ferndale, Michigan
Schedule C–Master Sick Bank Plan

1. Master Sick Bank Plan. The procedure for the establishment and administration of the Master Sick Bank shall be in accordance with the following provisions and shall be for the use and benefit of all eligible teachers who apply and their applications are subsequently approved for sick day benefits.

2. Funding of Sick Bank. The Master Sick Bank shall be funded in accordance with the following provisions:

a. All teachers employed in the Ferndale School District for more than a year shall have two (2) sick days of their accumulated current allowance transferred to the Master Sick Bank.

b. Teachers newly employed by the school district shall have two (2) sick days of their advanced ten (10) days of current allowance transferred to the Master Sick Bank at the beginning of the school year. Teachers employed subsequent to February 1 of the school year shall have only one (1) day of their current allowance transferred to the Master Sick Bank. The additional day of the two (2) day requirement will be transferred from their current allowance at the beginning of the new school year in September.

c. The maximum number of sick days in the Master Sick Bank shall be twice the number of teachers in the bargaining unit.

d. The above two (2) sick days transferred to the Master Sick Bank from the current allowance of a teacher, or any other sick days so transferred, shall not be deducted from the days remaining in the Master Sick Bank at the time a teacher terminates his employment with the School District.

e. If the number of days in the Master Sick Bank falls below 50% of the maximum funding of days prior to the end of any school year, the Association will notify the Board to make a transfer of one (1) more day from each teacher's current allowance to the Master Sick Bank.

3. Eligibility Master Sick Bank. Any teacher shall be eligible to make application to the Sick Bank Committee for sick days of benefit after he has been incapacitated for fifteen (15) consecutive working days and has used all of his own current allowance. If a teacher is incapacitated for at least fifteen (15) working days in any one (1) year and there is a further incapacitation which appears to be a recurrence of the same illness or accident and the same doctor who handled the case originally verifies by written statement that such incapacitation is a recurrence, then the fifteen (15) days' eligibility requirement could be waived in this instance at the discretion of the Sick Bank Committee.

4. Application. Each application for sick days of benefit from the Master Sick Bank must be submitted on the Sick Bank Application form to the Sick Bank Committee, and such application will be approved or rejected on the basis of the individual teacher's circumstances. All applications must be accompanied by supporting doctor's statements.

5. Sick Bank Committee. The Sick Bank Committee shall be composed of five (5) teachers to be selected in any manner determined by the Association who shall hold membership on the Committee for such terms as the Association may determine. Any application approval by the Committee shall be by a majority vote of the entire committee.

6. Administration. The Master Sick Bank shall be administered by the Sick Bank Committee in accordance with the following provisions:

a. No teacher shall be allowed more than ninety (90) days from the Sick Bank.

b. The form authorizing an award of sick days from the Master Sick Bank to a teacher which is sent to the Board for payment must be accompanied by supporting doctor statements used by the Committee in making their decision (for Board review) and signed by three (3) members of the Sick Bank Committee and one of the following:

(1.) President of Ferndale Education Association
(2.) Executive Secretary of Ferndale Education Association

c. The administration records of the Master Sick Bank shall be audited at the end of each school year by a Committee composed of three (3) members, with one member each to be appointed by the Board, by the Association, and by the Sick Bank Committee.

d. This plan and its application to the current allowance of teacher sick days shall be retroactive to September 6, 1966.

7. Board Retention of Sick Days. All sick leave days accumulated by any teacher in his current allowance or those days transferred to the Master Sick Bank from his current allowance shall be subject only to the contingent liability of actual sick claim use by the teacher or the Master Sick Bank. All sick leave days which are not used by the teacher or the Master Sick Bank during the period of his employment shall not be subject to any other type or kind of claim in any form whatsoever by the teacher or the Association when his employment has terminated.

8. Board Indemnification. The Association will indemnify and hold harmless the Board and assume and discharge the full and complete liability of the Board arising out of or in connection with the administration of the Master Sick Bank, by their duly designated Sick Bank Committee as well as any and all claims for payment of compensation involving litigation or proceedings brought against the Board, by any teacher or group of teachers who had sick days transferred from their current allowance, or were the recipient of or were denied an award of sick days from the Master Sick Bank.

9. No Increase in Board Liability. Nothing herein contained shall alter or extend, or in any manner increase, the liability of the Board to any teacher in respect to sick day compensation presently existing in any plan or agreement to which the Board is a party.

10. Termination of Master Sick Bank. The Master Sick Bank shall terminate and become null and void on the same date the Agreement between the Board and the Association terminates.

If the application is approved, he will be paid retroactive to and including the first day after his personal leave is exhausted.

2. No applications will be considered for the purposes of cosmetic or other surgical procedures that could without danger to the patient, be postponed to a time when school is not in session.

The above-named committee shall periodically review each case to determine future eligibility. The maximum period between reviews shall be thirty (30) calendar days. All committee decisions shall be in writing and a copy sent to all persons involved.

All committee decisions pertaining to eligibility or renewal of benefits, after initial benefits are granted, shall be final and are not subject to appeal.

The committee shall also have the authority to grant a year of grace during which no additional contributions are made to the central sick leave bank if, in their opinion, the bank is of sufficient size to guard against future emergencies. The year of grace shall be mandatory when the bank exceeds six hundred (600) days. The year of grace shall not apply to first year teachers.

If the occasion should ever arise when the central sick leave bank is exhausted, no applications will be considered until the following year.

APPENDIX D–PROFESSIONAL GROWTH PLAN

A. Introduction and Definitions

Teaching today is a science as well as an art, and knowledge about it is being acquired rapidly. The day has passed when the informed citizen thinks that "just anyone" can teach school. He has a new image of the teacher. The teacher who wishes to walk in this image must keep in step with this new knowledge through professional growth.

Professional growth is defined as: Improvement in understanding and application of our current trends of subject matter and methodology, and appreciation of cultures–present and past.

A portion of this growth should be formal–that is in definite units of study offered by a university or other institution. This formal study best enables the teacher to keep up with subject matter, teaching methods, aids and approaches to learning.

A portion of this growth is also informal. Informal growth shall be in all other areas which can be established as beneficial to the teacher.

B. Types of Professional Growth Units

1. Formal

College course work can satisfy all units at the ratio of one semester hour to one unit of professional growth credit. Units for auditing college courses will be given at the ratio of one semester hour to ½ unit. Units for workshops will be given at the ratio of 30 clock hours of workshop time to ½ unit.

2. Informal

Professional growth units will be given for travel. If travel is individually planned, the teacher may, if he so desires, insert in his professional growth folder the plans for his trip. When he has returned, the teacher will be required to submit a written report, summarizing his travel and how it will be of value to him. A maximum of 3 units may be earned in a single trip or during a three-month period. If accepted, a trip will have a value of at least ½ unit, as explained in the accompanying form.

C. Professional Growth Plan

Professional growth units will be given for work experiences in areas related to the teaching field or that will be valuable to the teacher as a person. The teacher may ask for prior approval of credit for work experience. Upon completion, he should submit in writing a summary of the experience and its value to him. ½ to 3 units will be given for work experience, as explained on the accompanying form.

Long term curriculum study committees that meet regularly for a period of approximately one year and complete their studies with a written report, will earn professional growth credits. 30 hours' work will be worth ½ unit, not to exceed 1 unit per year.

If a teacher is responsible for a student teacher, he will earn ½ unit of professional growth credit for each term. Only three supervising teacher experiences will be counted.

Professional growth credit will be given for professional association work. Officers, committee chairman, and members who apply for credit will be expected to meet regularly, carry out a program, and submit a report, as explained in the accompanying form.

G L E A President		2 units
G L E A President-elect		½ unit
G L E A Secretary		½ unit
G L E A Treasurer		½ unit
Committees that meet for a least 30 hours		½ unit
	(not to exceed)	1 unit
Chairman will earn		1 unit
	(not to exceed)	2 units
Region President		2 units
Region President-elect		2 units
Region Secretary		1 unit
Region Treasurer		1 unit

Region committees will be evaluated on the same 30 hour basis as local committees.

Teachers holding office in departments or at the state level will be eligible for professional growth units.

Unusual personal experiences that have not been included in the categories above will be considered for professional growth; for example: significant work in community service, individual study and research, publication, lectures, etc. If a teacher feels he qualifies in these or other areas, application should be made to the professional growth committee.

D. Professional Growth Operation

This professional growth plan began March 9 for the 1965-1966 contract year.

Each teacher will give a written report of his informal professional growth experience by no later than April 1st. Evidence of work completed is to be attached to the report. e.g. proof of credit received for college course work, written reports of travel or work experiences, etc. It is recommended that professional growth experiences be submitted for evaluation as they are completed. Formal credit units counted for any succeeding year will be submitted by August 1.

E. Professional Growth Committee

1. Composition
   a. 1 school board member (the chairman of the personnel committee).
   b. 1 administrator (assistant superintendent).
   c. 4 teachers (one k-3; one 4-6; one middle school; one senior high school) elected by Grand Ledge Education Association for three year staggered terms.
   d. The chairman will be elected by the committee in May, for a 12 months period, from June 1 to May 31, the following year. A quorum of two-thirds of the committees is required to take action. All action will be by majority vote of those present.
2. Duties

Meetings will be held as necessary, at least three times each school year. To accept or reject in writing individual programs, no later than 45 days after being submitted to the committee, or by May 15th. At the request of any teacher whose record is unapproved, to arrange a meeting of the teacher and the members of the professional growth committee. The purpose of this meeting will be to give the teacher an opportunity to present additional information or individuals to clarify his report.

3. Records and Forms

All records pertaining to professional growth will be kept in a folder, filed in the personnel file maintained by the office of the Superintendent of schools. Such records will be available to the committee or to the individual teacher concerned through the superintendent or Ass't. Supt.

The following forms are suggested and will be revised by the Professional Growth Committee as the need arises.

F. Travel

The exact evaluation of units of credit for trips shall be decided by the Professional Growth Committee. Listed are a few of the requirements for trips.

1. A trip must warrant the number of units given it. (A maximum of three units to be awarded except in unusual instances. These would be trips for educational purposes and only with a great deal of preparation, study and formal work. Credit above three units should be awarded on only unusual and infrequent occasions.)
2. No trip shall be given credit solely upon the duration of time, but rather include the evaluation of knowledge learned by the teacher as expressed by him in his formal presentation to the committee. The larger the number of units allowed for the trip, the more extensive the formal presentation shall be.
3. A teacher may request a commitment from the committee as to whether or not a trip will receive credit before he embarks on said trip. (Such request must be made at least 45 days prior to the proposed trip.)
4. If the teacher states in his report the number of units he deserves, and if the committee does not award this number, it shall be the committee's responsibility to give its reasons for not awarding full credit.
5. For minimum credit (½ unit) a trip must include:
   a. 48 hours length of time. (Shorter trips may be presented for possible approval.)
   b. A formal presentation of said trip to the Professional Growth Committee.
   c. The committee must accept a trip for at least ½ unit of credit if all the preceding requirements are met.

ARTICLE XXXIV—GUIDANCE

A. Duties of Guidance Counselors

The counselor is professionally trained to meet the guidance needs of pupils and to provide adjunctive services to the school staff, parents and the community. His primary role is in student counseling, but he also carries responsibilities in such areas as pupil appraisal; interpretation of test results; organization of programs for increasing student knowledge of vocational information; utilization of community resources; placement; and evaluation. His duties are as follows:

1. Counsels pupils individually, and in groups, helping them to gain insight into their educational, vocational, and personal-social problems and to develop skill in arriving at decisions.
2. Studies pupil needs through the use of records, tests, observation, consultation and interviews. Assists pupils in evaluation of their abilities and interests, and interprets same to pupils, parents, and teachers. Enlists pupils' cooperation in carrying out plans to promote better adjustment. Gives support to pupils in helping them to resolve difficult situations.
3. Assists in screening individual pupils to identify those having special needs, such as gifted and talented pupils, underachiever and potential dropouts; pupils to be referred to the psychologist; potentially maladjusted pupils; and other groups of pupils with specific needs.
4. Makes recommendations to the principal concerning placement, interclass transfers and placement in special classes. Interviews new pupils and after testing and completing evaluation, the counselor recommends appropriate class placement for them.
5. Interprets pupil personnel data to staff members and cooperates with teachers in planning and carrying out measures to overcome learning difficulties and help pupil adjustment.
6. Works along with all specialists in order to help a particular child. Arranges case conferences when necessary.
7. Interprets pupil data to parents and enlists parental cooperation in carrying out educational plans. Helps parents explore opportunities and resources for the pupils' growth and development. Participates in parent meetings whenever necessary.
8. Cooperates with other agencies which provide services to pupils and their parents.
9. Maintains required records.
10. Is responsible for group guidance programs.

11. Conducts articulation activities on all academic levels and works to help pupils make a smooth transition from one school level to the next. Makes available information on educational offerings and occupational requirements.

12. Has a responsibility of reviewing all student course selections and appraising the appropriateness of choice to both student and parent.

13. Conducts follow-up and other evaluation activities concerned with the study of pupil needs and effectiveness of school program in meeting these needs.

B. Counselor-Pupil Ratio

The number of pupils for whom a counselor is responsible should be such that he can carry out his functions effectively for all of them. It is agreed that the pupil load per counselor will conform with the provisions of Article IX.

C. Secretarial Assistance

Ample secretarial assistance will be available for the counselors. It is agreed that where possible a ratio of one (1) secretary to seven hundred (700) students in the senior high school and one (1) secretary to one thousand (1000) students in the middle or junior high schools will be maintained.

D. Working Conditions

In order for the counselor to function in the school setting the following conditions should prevail:

1. He should have the physical facilities appropriate to his work—
   a. Private office visual as well as auditory.
   b. . Office should offer a relaxed and comfortable atmosphere.
2. The housing of discipline cases in the guidance office and the interruptions during counseling interviews should not exist.
3. Discipline cases should be referred to the counselor, not to administer discipline, but as a follow-up to the actions of the disciplinarian. This would give the counselor ample time to review past records and discuss with teachers the child in question.

E. Salaries

In light of the fact that guidance counselors hold additional certification to the classroom teacher and in light of the fact that the guidance counselors of Central Islip Public Schools have traditionally worked a longer day (7½ hours) and a longer school year (September 1-June 30), than the classroom teacher, the guidance counselors of the Central Islip School District will receive the following:

IMPLEMENTATION:

A. The salary schedule for administrators has been established by multiplying step 6 of the MA+30 schedule by 1.3 and step 16 of the MA+30 schedule by 1.5. The difference between these two amounts is divided into 8 equal steps. All schedules for administrators were developed in the same fashion. Administrators presently in the District and future administrators from within the District will be placed on schedule according to the following criteria.
   1. Full credit will be given for experience as a principal or coordinator. In cases where appointments were made during the year, administrators will receive credit for a full year of experience only if the tenure of appointment was half year or more.
   2. Assistant Principals (coordinators) will receive one year of credit for each two (2) years of service in that role when applied to a principalship (coordinatorship). Credit for experience as a coordinator or assistant coordinator toward a principalship or vice versa shall be negotiated by the applicant and the District Principal.

3. Any administrator shall be placed on schedule, taking into account his experience as a teacher. Those who have experience as a teacher beyond six (6) years shall receive credit for one (1) year of experience as an administrator for each three (3) years as a teacher or major fraction thereof to a maximum of two (2) years. Hence, credit for one (1) step on the administrative schedule will be given for teaching experience of 8, 9, or 10 years. Two (2) years of credit on the administrative schedule will be given for 11 years or more of teaching.

B. The maximum raise in one (1) year will be $2,800 for building principals and directors and a maximum raise of $2,000 for assistant building principals, coordinators and assistant coordinators.

C. The law clearly specifies that a principal will be placed on the teacher salary schedule according to the number of years he has occupied that position. This amount will be multiplied by 1.3. Essentially, this applies to personnel of experience on the MA+60 or Doctorate level. Administrators will be held "save harmless" under this law.

ILLINOIS

FEDERAL COURT DENIES HEARING ON STATE COURT INJUNCTION AGAINST PUBLIC EMPLOYEE STRIKE

A ruling handed down by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit held that federal court jurisdiction cannot be asserted in a case where public employees enter insufficiently specific claims that their constitutional civil rights are being violated by a state court anti-strike injunction. Pointing to the criteria used to permit removal of a case from state to federal court jurisdiction, the court ruled:

> The pertinent allegations made [in the present case] are of violations of general constitutional amendments. The Supreme Court has held that First Amendment rights are not among those included under "equal rights" .... And there is no allegation [here] that defendants have been denied specific rights accorded others similarly situated in the State of Illinois so as to invoke the Fourteenth Amendment. The "broad contentions" based on the Thirteenth Amendment claim cannot support a valid claim for removal under Section 1443 because they are "phrased in terms of general application available to all persons or citizens, rather than in the specific language of racial equality."

When employees of the Evanston Department of Streets and Refuse went on strike, the city sought and was granted a temporary injunction against the strike by the Cook County Circuit Court. Shortly afterward, the sanitationmen (as defendants) petitioned the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois for removal of the case to a federal court prior to the state court's hearing on a permanent injunction. When the district court remanded the case to the state court, the sanitationmen appealed their cause, asserting that the city > alleges that defendants illegally demanded negotiations on wages, hours and working conditions, and seeks to compel defendants to work; and that by virtue of the [city's] allegations, defendants' First Amendment right to free association, Fifth Amendment right to due process, Thirteenth Amendment right to be free from involuntary servitude, and Fourteenth Amendment right to equal protection are "being violated."

While noting possible jurisdiction "on the ground of the denial of civil rights," the U.S. Appeals Court cited a U.S. Supreme Court decision which clarified the criteria for removal of a case under the statute which grants federal jurisdiction:

> On review, the Supreme Court in Georgia v. Rachel, 384 U.S. 780 (1966), construed Section 1443 as requiring a showing of two elements: that "the right . . . is a right under any law providing for . . . equal civil rights," and that petitioner is "denied or cannot enforce" that right in the state courts. . . . The Court also said that the first element "must be construed to mean any law providing for specific civil rights stated in terms of racial equality."

Measuring the sanitationmen's allegations against the first criterion, the U.S. Appeals Court ruled that "the Petition for Removal does not allege violation of a right under 'any law providing for . . . equal civil rights stated in terms of racial equality' . . . and that the district court therefore was not in error in remanding the cause." (City of Evanston v. Lee Buick, Jr., et al., U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, January 22, 1970.)

MAINE

HIGH COURT INTERPRETS FIRE FIGHTERS ARBITRATION LAW TO ALLOW BINDING GRIEVANCE ARBITRATION

The Maine Supreme Court ruled that although the state's 1965 Fire Fighters Arbitration Law authorizes arbitration (which "shall not be final and binding") only in cases of negotiation impasses, "the Legislature intended the Fire Fighters to have all the rights of labor organizations except those specifically withheld." Referring to section 981 of the statute which holds that fire fighters are accorded "all of the rights of labor other than the right to strike, or engage in any work stoppage or slowdown," the high court decided that these rights include the right to submit unsettled grievances to binding arbitration, if so negotiated.

In so ruling, the state supreme court reversed and remanded the Knox County Superior Court's dismissal of an application by the Rockland Professional Fire Fighters Association for enforcement of a grievance arbitration award which found that the discharge of an Association member for alleged insubordination lacked "sufficient cause." The lower court denied judgment on grounds that "as the Fire Fighters Arbitration Law provided only for arbitration of disputes surrounding the making of a contract . . . the Fire Fighters had been given no right to arbitration of disputes arising subsequent to the contract and therefore had no right to enforcement of an award."

But the state supreme court adopted a broader interpretation of the statute, noting that "in section 951, years earlier, the Legislature had given all labor organizations the right to provide in their contracts for arbitration of grievances arising out of such contracts." The high court accordingly ruled:

> Applying the in pari materia rule of construction and reading in connecting with the Fire Fighters Arbitration Law the 1957 general arbitration statute having the same general purpose, it appears clear that the grant to the fire, fighters of "all of the rights of labor other than the right to strike, or engage in any work stoppage or slowdown" found in section 981 included the right to submit grievances to binding arbitration. We hold that the [Association] was entitled to submit to arbitration grievances arising under the labor contract and was not limited to the specific issue of formation of a contract.

(Rockland Professional Fire Fighters Association v. City of Rockland, Maine Supreme Court, February 2, 1970.)

MASSACHUSETTS

PETITION FOR REVIEW OF MLRC'S DIRECTION OF ELECTION DISMISSED BY STATE SUPREME COURT

Noting that "in ordinary cases judicial review of certification issues may take place only after there has been a commission decision based upon an unfair labor practice," the Massachusetts Supreme Court dismissed as premature a petition seeking judicial review of a direction of election made by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission (MLRC) in 1967.

The case originally arose when the Worcester Vocational Teachers Association sought certification as bargaining representative for some 120 day-school teachers employed at three schools by the Worcester Vocational School Department, and filed a petition with the MLRC. Intervening in the proceeding, the Worcester Industrial Technical Institute Instructors Association proposed that the larger over-all unit be divided into two separate units of 16 and 19 teachers at two of the schools, as these teachers were "professional employees" dissimilar to the remaining teachers.

Following a hearing, the MLRC determined that there was "no compelling reason for separating these employees into two small units," as all of the teachers in the proposed unit were certified, professional employees with a community of interest, identical over-all supervision, and attendance at common faculty meetings. As such, the MLRC directed that an election be held in the over-all unit.

In hearing the appeal of the MLRC's decision brought by the Worcester Industrial Technical Institute Instructors Association, the state supreme court found that "a commission decision and order for an election has been held not to be a final decision in an adjudicatory proceeding subject to judicial review." As such, only "extraordinary circumstances making certification questions of vital significance may permit other avenues of review." Finding no "extraordinary circumstances" in the instant case, the high court ruled that "the parties must first exhaust their other available remedies before they resort to judicial review."

However, the court explained that if the MLRC's decision "has resulted in a prohibited practice, there are courses open to the appellant before the Commission following which, and after denial of complaint, judicial review might properly take place." Specifically, the court noted that Section 178L of the Massachusetts Municipal Employee Relations Act prohibits municipal employers from "interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of [their] rights," one of which is that "no unit shall include both professional and nonprofessional employees unless a majority of such professional employees vote for inclusion in such unit [Section 178H(4)]." (Worcester Industrial Technical Institute Instructors Association, Inc. v. Labor Relations Commission, et al., Massachusetts Supreme Court, March 4, 1970.)

MICHIGAN

AGENCY SHOP PROVISION RULED VALID BY CIRCUIT COURT

The Michigan Circuit Court for Wayne County delivered a January 19, 1970, opinion confirming the validity of an agency shop clause contained in the 1969-71 contract between the Detroit education board and the Detroit Federation of Teachers, AFL—CIO, Local 231. Finding it "patent that this Court . . . conclude that the agency shop provision is not repugnant to any statute or constitutional provision," the court granted a motion for summary judgment entered by the Detroit board and Local 231, defendants in the case.

On November 7, 1969, the 600-member Detroit Teachers Opposed to Compulsory Unionism (DTOCU) filed suit as a class action on behalf of all "school teachers who object to the requirement that they authorize deduction of service fees equal to the regular union dues or be terminated from employment." The 40 Detroit teachers involved in the suit claimed that they were entitled to declaratory relief in the determination of the validity of the agency shop provision. The Michigan Citizens for Right to Work, an affiliate of the National Right to Work Committee, supported the suit.

The disputed provision, which became effective on January 26, 1970, states that within 60 days all bargaining unit employees must either become union members and pay union dues, or "pay to the Union each month a service fee in an amount equal to the regular monthly Union membership dues uniformly required of employees of the Board who are members." If an employee does not comply with the provision, the board shall immediately notify said employee that his services shall be discontinued at the end of the current semester, and shall dismiss said employee accordingly . . . [following] the dismissal procedure of the Michigan Tenure Act, as applicable. The refusal of a teacher to contribute fairly to the costs of negotiation and administration of this and subsequent agreements is recognized as just and reasonable cause for termination of employment under the Michigan Tenure Act.

In their complaint the plaintiffs alleged that the agency shop clause is invalid for four reasons:

1. This provision violates the constitutional guarantees of freedom of association and right to privacy.

2. It denies plaintiffs due process and equal protection as required by both State and Federal Constitutions.

3. Use of collected monies for purposes other than that germane to the contract itself is illegal as to [the plaintiffs].

4. The clause is contrary to state statutes; namely, the Public Employment Relations Act [PERA], Michigan Teachers Tenure Act, Section 353, Chapter LI, Penal Code (MSA 28.585), and the Michigan General School Laws.

The court, however, rejected the first contention in noting that "the provision for an agency shop does not require plaintiffs or any of them to become members or join the defendant union." Moreover, the court rejected the second contention in finding no evidence of any arbitrary or discriminatory provisions in the principle of the disputed agency shop clause:

No employee will be prejudiced in or be deprived of his employment without the safeguards of due process. The contract itself provides for the following of the dismissal procedure of the Michigan Tenure act . . . . On the issue as to whether the plaintiffs are being denied equal protection as guaranteed by the constitution, it does not appear that any employee in the bargaining unit is being in any manner discriminated against whether or not he is a union member. Each employee has all the rights and privileges of a member and all the protections and benefits guaranteed to members. He pays no more (or less) than a member for the services rendered to him.

Plaintiff's third contention represented a "somewhat novel issue," according to the court. Citing the federal case of I.A.M. v. Street, the court noted that there, "as a matter of statutory construction, the court held that the monies could not be used for certain purposes, but even in this case the Supreme Court held an injunction to restrain the collection was not to be permitted." Dismissing the contention as not really an issue in the instant proceeding, the court submitted that in another "suitable proceeding it may be decided that any expenditure in furtherance of legitimate union purposes may be permissible."

As to the plaintiffs' argument that the agency shop clause violates the PERA, the court held that although the PERA is silent on agency shop, it authorizes contracts between employees and their public employers to cover conditions of employment. The agency shop is apparently a condition of employment agreed upon by the contracting parties and where not violative of any individual rights will be sustained. As to the issue whether this clause encourages or discourages membership in a union, this Court would conclude that the clause does not violate this provision of P.E.R.A. Nothing encompassed in the agency shop clause encourages anyone to do any more than contribute to the organization selected by a majority of the group to represent it. This contribution merely spreads among all the beneficiaries the cost of representation.

Moreover, the court determined that the agency shop clause can be reconciled with the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act, because the Detroit contract contains the constitutional safeguards of due process required by the tenure act. The court explained that "the cases are myriad in holding that where the agency shop clause is violated an employee's discharge for violation of the clause was reasonable." In addition, the court rejected the plaintiffs' contention that the agency shop clause violates a provision of the state penal code, because such a clause does not fall within the purview of the criminal statute.

The court finally ruled that although the state's school laws do not authorize an agency shop clause, those statutes "must be read in conjunction with P.E.R.A. . . . [and] it would be indeed a narrow construction of the school laws to hold that nothing not specifically authorized there in is prohibited."

The DTOCU reportedly plans to appeal the circuit court's decision. (Christine Warczak, et al. v. Board of Education, School District of City of Detroit, et al., Michigan Circuit Court for Wayne County, January 19, 1970.)

NOTE: In another agency shop case reported in this issue of the DIGEST, the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) upheld the validity of an agency shop clause contained in the Southgate Community School District contract, and dismissed a series of unfair labor practice charges which alleged that the clause violated

Section 10 of the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act (PERA). Most importantly, the MERC determined that a valid agency shop clause under the PERA need not contain any of the specific safeguards relative to agency shop which are contained in the National Labor Relations Act. In a third agency shop case reported in this issue the Michigan Teacher Tenure Commission sustained the dismissal of a Grand Blanc teacher for refusing to comply with a negotiated agency shop provision. Urging that provisions of the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act can be reconciled with the PERA, the commission held that refusal to comply with an agency shop provision "is 'reasonable and just cause' for dismissal, as that phrase is used in the Teacher Tenure Act."

Other Michigan agency shop cases reported in previous issues of the DIGEST include the following:

- In the case of Oakland County Sheriff's Department and the Oakland County Board of Supervisors and Metropolitan Council No. 23, American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL–CIO, the then Michigan Labor Mediation Board held that union security provisions are not in opposition to the PERA:

  A requirement that employees pay their share of the cost of negotiating and administering a collective bargaining agreement neither discourages nor encourages membership in the labor organization selected by the majority of employees in the bargaining unit to represent them. It is not discriminatory, as the requirement that each employee pay his pro rata share of the costs applies alike to all employees in the bargaining unit, whether they are, or are not, members of the union. (NRD, 3-68, A-2, C-1)

- The Wayne County Circuit Court ruled in Jean Smigel, et al. v. Southgate Community School District, et al. that an agency shop clause "is a valid bargainable issue in contract negotiations between public employees and employers," and does not conflict with the Teacher Tenure Act. Determining that such a provision "serves the purpose of allocating indiscriminately the cost of representation for collective bargaining among all those participating in the benefits received . . . [and] eliminates the 'free riders,'" the court held that discharge for failure to comply with an agency shop clause constitutes "reasonable and just cause" as used in the Tenure Act. (NRD, 2-69, A-1, C-5)

- A Michigan circuit court overruled a civil service board decision by upholding a Grand Rapids contract clause which required union membership or the payment by check-off of the equivalent of monthly union dues to a scholarship fund. Although the agency shop clause in dispute "differs slightly from the agency shop arrangements approved in [previous] decisions," the court held that the scholarship contribution provision was not in itself illegal, and that there was "no more tendency of the modified agency shop to encourage or discourage membership in a labor union, as proscribed by the PERA, than the straight agency shop." (NRD, 11-69, 4)

- The Michigan Court of Appeals denied four Wayne County General Hospital nurses leave to appeal a circuit court decision which upheld the nurses' discharge for refusal to comply with an agency shop provision, explaining that "plaintiffs have failed to demonstrate an abuse of discretion by the trial court." (NRD, 2-70, 3)

- The Macomb County Circuit Court dismissed as premature a challenge brought by an unaffiliated teacher who asked the court to declare the agency shop clause in the Warren agreement as contrary to the Teacher Tenure Act. The clause provided that any teacher who refused to authorized deduction of a sum equivalent to Association dues and assessments would be notified that his employment would be terminated at the end of the school year. The court declared the teacher's plea premature, since all administrative remedies under the contract had not been exhausted. (NRD, 10-68, A-2, C-8)

In addition, several fact-finders seeking to resolve negotiation impasses have recommended that agency shop clauses be negotiated and included in teacher contracts. One such recommendation was reprinted in the February 1969 DIGEST, p. A-1, C-1.

NEW JERSEY

STATE SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS CONSTITUTIONALITY OF PUBLIC EMPLOYEE BARGAINING STATUTE

In a lengthy historical opinion the New Jersey Supreme Court affirmed the constitutionality of the state's 1968 Employer–Employee Relations Act, reiterated the proven necessity for exclusive bargaining representation, and discussed the dichotomous nature of collective bargaining as it is understood and applied in the private and public sectors. Moreover, the high court emphasized that the bargaining statute under attack in the present case is novel legislation for New Jersey. The Commission established to administer it is working in unploughed ground. We expect that many problems both administrative and substantive will confront it in due course. In our judgment the judicial approach must be a gradualistic one calling for the withholding of judgment unless a justiciable issue is actually before us.

The case before the high court came on an appeal by the Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association (FMBA), Branch #1, and others of a a decision rendered by the Superior Court of

New Jersey. The FMBA, as described by the state supreme court, is an incorporated association [whose] membership has always been made up of Jersey City firemen who desired to join. It is not a labor organization in the usual sense and has never held itself out as a negotiating agent for all the firemen of the City. However, on a purely voluntary basis it has interceded for and spoken on behalf of its members with the proper City representatives in matters affecting salaries, working conditions and grievances.

Following enactment of the bargaining statute in 1968, the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAF), Local 1066, sought a representation election among eligible Jersey City firemen pursuant to provisions of the statute. Although the FMBA was notified of the election, it declined to participate, because it regarded the statute as unconstitutional. Instituting an action in superior court, the FMBA asked that the statute be declared invalid, and that the representation election be temporarily and permanently enjoined. The trial court, however, sustained the statute, declined issuing a temporary injunction, and directed that the election be held, although the election's result was not to be certified until disposition of the court proceeding. When the election was held, 399 of the 430 eligible Jersey City firemen cast their votes for IAF representation.

In its appeal before the state supreme court, the FMBA challenged the constitutionality of the bargaining statute on two grounds: (a) that the representative elected by a majority of the public employees in an appropriate unit is to be designated the exclusive representative of all unit employees, and (b) that the duly elected exclusive representative and the employer are authorized to engage in collective negotiations regarding the terms and conditions of employment of bargaining unit members. The FMBA alleged that these two provisions (contained in section 7 of the bargaining statute) are repugnant to Article 1, paragraph 19, of the 1947 New Jersey constitution, which holds:

Persons in private employment shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively. Persons in public employment shall have the right to organize, present to and make known to the State, or any of its political subdivisions or agencies, their grievances and proposals through representatives of their own choosing.

Specifically, the FMBA urged that designation of the IAF as exclusive bargaining representative of the appropriate Jersey City firemen's unit violated the constitutional provision because the pluralistic significance of "persons" [as contained in the constitutional provision] . . . authorizes any "person" in public employment to present his grievances and proposals through a representative of his own choosing . . that each public employee has been vested with the basic right to present his proposals and grievances to employer through his individually chosen representative, and this right, being entrenched in the organic charter, is beyond the power of the Legislature to qualify or dilute. Consequently . . . section 7 of the statute is invalid because it undertakes to place effectuation of this right exclusively in the hands of a representative elected by a majority of an individual's fellow employees in the designated unit, even though the individual did not vote with the majority or does not belong to the organization selected as the representative.

The high court, however, found such a narrow view of the constitutional purpose unacceptable. Recounting in detail the historical and philosophical groundwork resulting in the state constitution and the bargaining statute, the court held that the two are "harmonious and may stand together," and that the very general language of Article 1 paragraph 19 was oriented toward collectivity. The purpose was to secure to employees collectively in the various employer divisions and agencies of government the right to get together—to organize—and to select representatives to present their (i.e., all employees in all divisions and agencies) proposals and grievances. The use of the plural form—"representatives"—signifies an awareness that there would be many different organizations involved and that they would represent many different groups or units of employees in many separate divisions or agencies of government. It is not reasonable to say that the delegates to the Constitutional Convention . . . intended the broad language they employed in paragraph 19 to prevent the Legislature from establishing a commonly known means of giving potency and practical effect to the guaranteed right to organize. . . . Such delegates would have known that "multiplicity of organizations claiming or possessing representation rights for the same group or unit of employees has long been regarded as undesirable."

Emphasizing the fact that the "exclusivity doctrine [is] at the heart of the national employer-employee labor relations policy in the private employment sector," the high court found it "significant" that the state legislature adopted in section 7 almost the identical language of the federal [Labor–Management Relations Act], 29 U.S.C.A. §159(a) in mandating that the representative selected by the majority of the employees in an appropriate unit for purposes of collective negotiation shall be the exclusive representative of all the employees for that purpose.

The legislative aim in writing section 7 was to aid, not to hinder, public employees in their relationship with their employers. The purpose was to discourage rivalries among individual employees and employee groups and to avoid the diffusion of negotiating strength which results from multiple representation. On the positive side the Legislature was seeking through the medium of the collective agreement to supersede separate agreements with employees and to substitute a single compact with terms which reflect the strength, negotiating power and welfare of the group. The benefits and advantages of the collective agreement are then open to every employee in the unit whether or not he is a member of the representative organization chosen by the majority of his fellow workers.

He can be certain also that in negotiating with the employer the representative is obliged to be conscious of the statutory obligation to serve and protect the interests of all the employees, majority and minority, equally and without hostility or discrimination.

The FMBA further contended that the constitutional provision conflicted with section 7 of the bargaining statute in respect to the handling of grievances, in that the constitutional provision "confers an unqualified right on each individual public employee or minority group of employees to process his or their own grievances either personally or by a representative of his or their own choosing other than the majority representative." The FMBA accordingly urged that "the Legislature cannot constitutionally require, as it seeks to do by section 7 . . . that individual or minority group grievances be processed by the majority representative in accordance with a collective agreement negotiated by such representative."

Declining to rule upon the FMBA's argument because "under the circumstances . . . the grievance issue [is] hypothetical," the state supreme court nevertheless noted that in the private employment sector it is long since settled that the majority representative is the exclusive agent for all the employees in the unit in negotiating the agreement respecting grievances and procedures for handling them. Moreover, when so provided by the agreement, the majority representative has the exclusive right to process all employees' grievances in accordance with the procedure provided therein, so long as the representative acts in complete good faith toward the employee in doing so.

In addition, the court referred at length to a brief entered by the New Jersey Public Employee Relations Commission (a defendant-respondent in the case) which urged that portions of section 7 relating to the handling of grievances provide "persuasive support for the claim that the authorization for exclusive representation by the majority representative also includes the handling of grievances. . . . . In short . . . sole representation in the grievance area not only enhances administrative efficiency but increases the responsibility of the elected majority representative as well as its power to act in the interest of all the employees."

In considering the FMBA's attempt to equate "collective negotiation" as used in section 7 with "collective bargaining" as it is known in the private sector and nationally, the high court found the argument to be "patently without merit." Declining to rule upon the issue because the present case called for no exploration of the specifics of "collective negotiation," the court explained:

Obviously it was a Legislature fully aware of the absence of the right to strike in the public employment sector that adopted [the state bargaining statute]. It did not grant the right expressly and every reasonable inference from the four corners of the Act demonstrates that it did not do so by implication. . . . Thus we see no substance to plaintiffs' claim that the broad scope of the 1968 Act envisions collective bargaining with all the implications the term carries in the private employment sector, including the right to strike. This conclusion also disposes of the contention based on the further unsound claim that since section 7 grants the right to strike it is unconstitutional because Article 1, paragraph 19, bans strikes in public employment. . . . In our judgment. . . the authorization for "collective negotiations" in the 1968 Act was designed to make known that there are salient differences between public and private employment relations which necessarily affect the characteristics of collective bargaining in the public sector. Finally, it signified an effort to make public employers and employees realize that the process of collective bargaining as understood in the private employment sector cannot be transplanted into the public service.

Finally the court dismissed the FMBA's allegation that the results of the representation election should be set aside, because the court found that there was no showing of prejudice or any inaccuracies in the election which could have affected its outcome adversely. Board Findings and Rulings

MERC SUSTAINS VALIDITY OF AGENCY SHOP CONTRACT CLAUSE

In concurring with the prior findings of a trial examiner, the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC) sutained the validity of an agency shop provision contained in the 1968-70 contract between the Southgate Community School District and the Southgate Education Association (SEA). As such, the MERC dismissed a series of unfair labor practice charges brought by a district teacher who alleged that the agency shop provision violated Section 10 of the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act (PERA), which states:

> It shall be unlawful for a public employer or an officer or agent of a public employer (a) to interfere with, restrain or coerce public employees in the exercise of their rights guaranteed in section 9; (b) to initiate, create, dominate, contribute to or interfere with the formation or administration of any labor organization . . . (c) to discriminate in regard to hire, terms or other conditions of employment in order to encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization; (d) to discriminate against a public employee because he has given testimony or instituted proceedings under this act; or (e) to refuse to bargain collectively with the representatives of its public employees, subject to the provisions of section 11.

The provision in dispute states that "all teachers as a condition of employment shall" either authorize deduction of Association dues and assessments within a given time period, or authorize "deduction of a representation fee equivalent to the dues and assessments of the Association" within the same time period. "Association" is defined as including "the National and Michigan Education Associations." The clause further stipulates that > in the event the representation fee shall not be paid, the Board upon receiving a signed statement from the Association indicating the teacher has failed to comply with this condition, shall immediately notify said teacher that his services shall be discontinued at the end of the current semester. The Board shall follow the dismissal procedure of the Michigan Tenure Act. The refusal of said teacher to contribute fairly to the costs of negotiation and administration of this and subsequent agreements is recognized as just and reasonable cause for termination of employment.

Some 50 Southgate teachers who refused to pay either the SEA membership dues or the "representation fee" filed suit in Wayne County Circuit Court in 1968 seeking a class action injunction and damages after the SEA asked the school district to notify them that they would be discharged for noncompliance with the agency shop provision. At that time the district declined discharging the teachers, because the provision states that no employees are to be discharged while legal proceedings concerning the validity of the agency shop are pending. Assuming jurisdiction over the case (Smigel, et al. v. Southgate Community School District, et al.), the circuit court denied the injunction in a November 22, 1968, opinion finding that such an agency shop clause did not constitute unlawful discrimination in violation of the PERA, and that termination for failure to pay the agency shop fee violated neither the PERA nor the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act. An appeal of that decision currently is pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals.

The teacher in the present case (who was not involved in the 1968 class action) filed an unfair labor practice complaint on February 7, 1969, charging that "since on or about September 3, 1968 [the effective date of the agreement] the Employer has violated the [PERA] by executing and enforcing a collective bargaining agreement which was improperly ratified by the Association, thereby improperly aiding and assisting a labor organization." She further alleged that as of the same date, > the Employer agreed to and has enforced a provision in the Agreement (a) that requires myself and all other teachers to sign an authorization for deduction from our pay of all dues and assessments, or an amount equivalent thereto, for the labor organization, including the State and National Education Associations; (b) that discriminates against me and the teachers in regard to my hire and terms and conditions of my employment; (c) that encourages membership in the labor organization; (d) that aids and assists the labor organization; and (e) interferes with, restrains, and coerces myself and other teachers in our rights under Act 336, as amended, and other laws.

In response to the improper ratification charge, the trial examiner found that "no provision of PERA requires that statutorily-designated bargaining agents submit their agreements to ratification by employees in the bargaining unit." Although the SEA had agreed with the school district to hold a ratification vote, the examiner held that such an agreement was beyond the SEA's statutory authority:

A decision as to whether or not contractual agreements should be submitted for ratification, either by the membership or by all employees in the bargaining unit, is an internal decision which must be made by the bargaining agent. If the responsible leaders of the bargaining agent choose to be guided by a ratification vote, that is well and good. However, if the leaders of the bargaining agent do not choose to pursue this sort of "participatory democracy," the employees working in the bargaining unit have no cause of action under PERA. . . .

Therefore, I find that the rights of [the teacher] under PERA sec. 10 (a) and (c) were not infringed by the alleged action of the School District in entering into a collective bargaining contract with the Association without first permitting the entire bargaining unit to vote on that agreement. For the same reasons, I find and conclude that the School District did not unlawfully "aid and assist" the Association in violation of PERA sec. 10 (b) by allegedly entering into a collective bargaining agreement without proper ratification. . . . The question of holding a ratification vote is an issue between the organization and the employees, not between the organization and the employer. Therefore, it is not a mandatory subject of collective bargaining. . . . These conclusions are consistent with federal cases concerning the right of a labor organization to be free from attacks on purely internal procedures, whether from non-members or employers.

In addition, the trial examiner denied a motion for dismissal brought by the intervening SEA according to the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel and based upon Smigel. Arguing that the interests of the plaintiffs in Smigel "appear identical" to those of the teacher in the instant case, and that plaintiffs in both actions were represented by the same attorney, the SEA moved for dismissal of the instant case on grounds that a matter once conclusively determined by a jurisdictional body cannot be relitigated in a subsequent proceeding based upon a different cause of action. Submitting that the circuit court "lacked jurisdiction over the subject matter" in Smigel because the unfair labor practice issues decided by that court "were not merely incidental to a case grounded on other rights," the trial examiner denied the motion for dismissal, explaining:

The [MERC] possesses exclusive primary jurisdiction to interpret and apply and enforce the unfair labor practice provisions of Sec. 10 of PERA. The statute which creates unfair labor practices delegates complete responsibility for the initial determination of unfair labor practice issues to the [MERC] . . . . A civil action seeking an injunction and damages [as in Smigel] is not res judicata in a later unfair labor practice complaint case. . . . Lack of jurisdiction over the subject matter [as submitted by the examiner in reference to Smigel] can not be waived, and no "estoppel" or "election of remedies" argument has merit in these circumstances. . . . Conclusive evidence that the legislature did not wish to confer concurrent jurisdiction over unfair labor practices on circuit courts is provided by Sec. 22 (c) of the Labor Mediation Act . . . which provides that "any appropriate legal or equitable remedy" may be pursued in circuit courts with respect to all provisions of the LMA except those which define unfair labor practices. This makes the [MERC's] procedure in unfair labor practice cases under LMA exclusive of other remedies. Since the [MERC's] unfair practice complaint procedures under PERA and LMA are identical and were enacted almost simultaneously in 1965, it seems evident that the [MERC's] complaint procedures under PERA were also intended to be exclusive.

Reiterating the fact that "the charges filed herein are limited to a specific attack on the agency shop," the trial examiner rejected as unsupported and untimely an allegation that the SEA required nonmembers to pay a lump sum in cash which was greater than the amount charged to members. In addition, the examiner rejected an allegation that the agency shop is unlawful because noncertificated teachers are not allowed to vote or hold office in the SEA's parent bodies; he noted that "an accusation of this sort goes to the entire question of the right of the local Association to be certified as a bargaining agent. . . [and] has no place in connection with an attack on the legality of the agency shop clause, since the agency shop does not require membership but only requires that everyone pay a share of the cost of their representation by the bargaining agent."

The thrust of the teacher's attack on agency shop centered upon her contentions that a valid agency shop under the PERA "(1) must contain a grace period, (2) must require that the bargaining agent have majority status, (3) must provide that membership in the bargaining agent be available to all employees on an equal basis, (4) must provide that the employee will not be fired if he 'tenders' his dues or fees, and (5) must be limited to regular dues and fees as opposed to fines or assessments." Referring to various federal cases which require some or all of these specific safeguards for valid agency shops under the National Labor Relations Act, the teacher asked that the MERC rule invalid an agency shop under the PERA which does not "set forth explicitly on the face of the contract" all of the enumerated safeguards.

Stating that none of the safeguards "are contained in the specific language of PERA, since PERA says nothing on the subject of union security or agency shops," the trial examiner dismissed the teacher's second contention as not at issue in the case, because "the Association is admittedly the majority (and therefore exclusive) bargaining agent of the teachers in question." He also dismissed the third contention as irrelevant to a specific attack on agency shop, because "the availability of membership to all on an equal basis . . . is a question which goes to the very right of the organization to be a recognized, certified bargaining agent."

The teacher's first contention was based upon the majority MERC opinion rendered in the case of Oakland County Sheriff's Department, et al. and Metropolitan Council 23, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL–CIO, in which the MERC chairman referred to the lawfulness of "traditional" agency shop arrangements. The teacher argued that such a traditional arrangement contemplates the enumerated safeguards, but the trial examiner held that the Oakland County decision > does not stand, even by implication, for the proposition that any agency shop which deviates from the "traditional" agency shop language is, ipso facto, unlawful.

> [I am] not persuaded that a specific grace period, as such . . . must be permitted under an agency shop contract before public employees may be discharged for noncompliance. . . . The agency shop clause contained in Article II of the [Southgate contract] contains no express grace period, although a reasonable period for employee compliance may be inferred as a matter of law. . . . I conclude that the absence of express language in this contract guaranteeing a grace period does not render the agency shop clause unlawful.

As to the teacher's fourth contention, the trial examiner found that the agency shop clause in dispute "does not fall because of failure to expressly provide that a non-member need only 'tender' dues. . . . It stands to reason that it would be a violation of the anti-discrimination provisions of PERA sec. 10 (c) if a non-member were to tender his representation fees and then be fired because the bargaining agent refused to accept the money. However, the agency shop clause itself need not so state."

The examiner also rejected the fifth contention, determining that the "inclusion of assessments along with dues . . . does not render this agency shop clause unlawful." He cited a portion of the majority decision rendered in Oakland County which held:

> A requirement that employees pay their share of the cost of negotiating and administering a collective bargaining agreement neither discourages nor encourages membership in the labor organization selected by the majority of employees in the bargaining unit to represent them. It is not discriminatory, as the requirement that each employee pay his pro rata share of the costs applies alike to all employees in the bargaining unit, whether they are, or are not, members of the union.

Finally the examiner rejected "out of hand" all of the teacher's arguments which sought to show "that agency shop, per se, discriminates against non-members or encourages membership." Conceding that the inability of nonmembers to participate in the union's internal affairs "operates as an encouragement to join," the trial examiner held that the inducement to join exists whether or not an agency shop situation is involved. He explained:

> The encouragement is produced by the legal right of the exclusive bargaining agent to keep non-members out of its affairs and decisions. As long as the law permits the bargaining agent to do this, there is a built-in advantage in joining a union once it achieves exclusive status. But the requirement of paying a dues equivalent does not add any incentive which is not already there by virtue of the recognized right of the union to exclude non-members from participation in its affairs and decisions.
> The problem here is created by the fact that, while the Southgate Education Association is the lawfully recognized bargaining agent and the party to the master contract, the non-members are required to pay "a representation fee equivalent to the dues and assessments of the Association (including the National and Michigan Education Associations)." As a matter of fact, of the $81.50 which agency employees or members must pay annually, only $19.50 represents local dues retained by the [SEA]. (The record does not reveal how the remaining $62.00 is divided between the NEA and the MEA.) Thus, over three-fourths of the "representation fee" goes to parent bodies which have no statutory duty to provide representation to those employees at all. . . . Under the [present] circumstances, [I make] no recommendation to the [MERC] concerning the lawfulness of the provision requiring payment of a "representation fee" to the NEA and MEA, except to observe that if no representation is received in return for the agency shop fee, then the payment requirement does encourage membership in NEA and MEA.

In an opinion issued on February 6, 1970, the MERC sustained the trial examiner's findings and dismissed the charges and complaint in their entirety. (In the Matter of Southgate Community School District, and Linda Morrison, and Southgate Education Association, Michigan Employment Relations Commission, February 6, 1970.)

STATE TENURE COMMISSION SUSTAINS DISMISSAL OF TEACHER WHO VIOLATED AGENCY SHOP PROVISION

By a 3–2 vote the Michigan Teacher Tenure Commission upheld the June 1969 dismissal of a Grand Blanc teacher who refused to comply with an agency shop provision contained in the 1968-70 agreement between the local education board and the Grand Blanc Education Association. Referring to a similar 1969 case which involved the dismissal of two Saginaw teachers, the majority found itself "persuaded" that refusal to comply with an agency shop provision "is 'reasonable and just cause' for dismissal, as that phrase is used in the [Michigan] Teacher Tenure Act."

Article XIX, Section A-3, of the current Grand Blanc contract provides that if a teacher does not pay a fee equivalent to the authorized Association membership dues and assessments within 60 days after the beginning of a given school year the Board, upon receiving a signed statement from the Association certifying the teacher has failed to comply with this condition and that the teacher has been so notified by the Association, shall immediately notify said teacher that his services shall be discontinued at the end of the current school year providing such action is not contrary to state law. The refusal of said teacher to contribute fairly to the costs of negotiation and administration of this Agreement is recognized as just and reasonable cause for termination of employment.

In upholding the Grand Blanc education board's firing of a high-school English teacher who had taught for 23 years but refused to pay the agency shop fee, the tenure commission adopted the rationale propounded by a Wayne County Circuit Court judge in the case of Smigel, et al. v. Southgate Community School District, et al. There the court determined that the Michigan Teacher Tenure Act, which "permits in explicit language the discharge of an employee 'for reasonable and just cause,'" was reconcilable with portions of the Michigan Public Employment Relations Act (PERA) authorizing public employee bargaining. For the court held that "the purpose of PERA, under which agency shop provisions may be bargained, is to benefit the employees with a sound, secure, unified approach to employee representation. Thus we see a common unified goal precluding an interpretation of the tenure act urging a conflict with PERA." The court further held that the claim that an agency shop provision violates statutory law in that it forces one to join a union, and is discriminatory, is without merit. Such provision in an agreement serves the purpose of allocating indiscriminately the cost of representation for collective bargaining among all those participating in the benefits received. Such a provision eliminates the "free riders."

In the present instance the tenure commission supported its decision with a portion of the Smigel ruling which held that any action which would weaken the bargaining power of the Association and tend to reduce its strength is very well a proper subject for the parties to consider as reasonable grounds for discharge. Such activity disturbs the delicately balanced relationships between the bargaining parties, thus creating hardships greater in magnitude than provisions such as those setting forth hours of attendance and responsibilities in the classroom. Violation of these provisions certainly could be interpreted by the parties and Tenure Commission to constitute reasonable grounds for discharge under Article IV, Section 1 of the Tenure Act.

However, the two dissenting members of the tenure commission argued that the phrase " 'reasonable and just cause' relates only to a tenure teacher's fitness or capacity to discharge the duties of his position." Contending that "since the sole purpose of the agency shop clause is to protect and strengthen employee organizations, it bears no relation to the teacher's competence, and therefore may not be, upon a teacher's failure to comply, the basis of dismissal," the dissenting members explained:

School boards in Michigan have only such powers as are conferred upon them by statute, either expressly or by necessary implication. Section 569 of the School Code of 1955 confers upon boards of education the power to hire and contract with teachers. It does not, in terms, or by implication, confer upon boards the power to enter into a contract with an employee organization requiring teachers, regardless of their own wishes in the matter, to pay dues or fees to that employee organization. This lack of power is not supplied by the Public Employment Relations Act, which is silent on the subject. . . . If anything, the Public Employment Relations Act forbids an agency shop agreement when, in Section 10(c), it makes it unlawful for a public employer to "discriminate in regard to hire, terms or other conditions of employment in order to encourage or discourage membership in a labor organization." It is difficult to see how an employer could encourage membership in a labor organization by any means more forceful than compelling the employee to pay dues to that labor organization.

NEW YORK

HEARING OFFICER RECOMMENDS DISMISSAL OF REPRISAL CHARGES FOUND TO BE UNTIMELY FILED

A Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) hearing officer determined that although the LeRoy Central School District No. 1 had engaged in "active reprisal" against seven school bus drivers, the drivers' complaint of reprisal should be dismissed because the charge was filed untimely. PERB rules of procedure hold that any public employee who charges an act of reprisal in violation of Section 202 of the Taylor Law must file that complaint "within sixty days of the alleged act." In the present case, the examiner found that "a fair reading of the record indicates that the district engaged in acts of reprisal against each of the complainants well before" the date when it became "crystal clear" that the acts of reprisal were "completely executed," and following which the drivers filed their complaint. As such, the examiner recommended that the complaint be dismissed in its entirety, and that no remedial order be issued.

In February 1968 the drivers who always executed their contracts with the LeRoy board individually, sought an increase in pay. No action was taken on the request until mid-April, when the drivers received 1968-69 contracts containing a daily raise of 75 cents above the previous year.

Dissatisfied with the raise, the drivers authorized two of their representatives to return the contracts to the board unsigned, but accompanied by a letter stating that the drivers would "be glad to meet with the board or its representatives." On about May 15 the board decided to alter its original offer. Throughout this period a representative for the drivers stated that "it was the intention of the bus drivers to work in the fall."

Shortly afterward the drivers authorized a spokesman for the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, AFL–CIO, to ask the board for recognition and negotiations. The Brotherhood's June 3 request for recognition was considered unactionable by the board on grounds that "recognition for bargaining under the Taylor Law would not be applicable since the bus drivers were part-time employees not working twenty plus hours." In late June the board advertised for bus drivers to apply for jobs with the district, with the intention that the applicants selected begin work on September 3, 1968. And with the end of the board's 1968 fiscal year on June 30, the board considered the drivers' employment terminated.

On August 16, a day after the Brotherhood petitioned the PERB for certification as representative of the bus drivers and other noncertified school employees, the former drivers (through the Brotherhood spokesman) delivered facsimiles of their April contract to the school attorney. Each contract was signed indicating acceptance of the earlier offer, but all were dated August 18, 1968 (instead of April 18, 1968), and a line was added to each contract stating that "the above wage rate is subject to collective bargaining." The district took no action upon the return of these contracts.

Moreover, the board entered on August 30 recognition agreement with the LeRoy Non-Teachers Association, which sought recognition as representative of all noncertified district personnel. After the Association filed a petition for certification with the PERB on September 24, a PERB trial examiner informed all parties involved that the Association had filed "an adequate showing of interest for the non-professional unit," and that he was treating its petition as a motion to intervene in the Brotherhood's August 15 representation hearing.

On September 3 the new bus drivers began work. Although the former drivers appeared at the board's October 8 meeting to protest the board's whole series of actions, the board declined to alter its position with respect to the former drivers. The charge of reprisal accordingly was filed on November 21.

In light of all the evidence presented, the hearing officer determined that > the LeRoy central school district has engaged in active reprisal against the charging employees . . . on account of their having exercised their rights guaranteed them by CSL §202. More specifically, the district, through its governing body, the LeRoy board, from the time it received the request for an increase from the bus drivers in February 1968, acted without any consideration of the fact that the bus drivers were a clearly identifiable group acting together to seek economic betterment through unionization and collective bargaining. . . . The whole strategy clearly was to place the bus drivers on the horns of an impossible dilemma of either on the one hand signing a 1968-69 contract on the board's terms, without any recognition of the group as a unit for bargaining, or without permitting them to bargain at all in any meaningful way, or on the other hand losing their jobs. . . . . [It] is difficult to see what the charging parties or the brotherhood could have done to protect their position short of an abject surrender by agreeing that the drivers should work at the board's last offered rate.

However, in considering four motions to dismiss entered by counsel to the district at the outset of the hearing (three of which ultimately were denied), the PERB examiner found that "on the face of it, the [drivers'] complaint should be dismissed because it is based upon a charge that is not timely filed." Noting the PERB's 60-day limitation on the filing of reprisal charges, the fact that the district had engaged in acts of reprisal well before September 3, and the board's refusal to reinstate the former drivers at its October 8 meeting, the examiner cited federal court rulings under the Labor Management Relations Act (LMRA) to the effect that "an employer does not commit a new unfair labor practice when he refuses reinstatement." That is, federal courts not only uphold the LMRA's six-month limitation on filing unfair labor practice charges as an absolute bar, but also hold that "such bar cannot be lifted merely on the theory of 'continuing tort' i.e., that a new period of limitation can run from the subsequent time that the discharged employee seeks reinstatement and is refused." Adopting this point of view as applicable to the PERB's 60-day limitation, the examiner recommended dismissal of the entire complaint. Negotiation Notes

MANDATORY TEACHER BARGAINING LAW ENACTED

A law mandating school boards to meet with recognized teacher bargaining representatives for the purpose of negotiating agreements was enacted on March 9, 1970, without the governor's signature. Although the Alaska governor acknowledged that the house bill "appears to be free of legal deficiencies," he had reservations about "a number of [definitional] uncertainties which will have to be resolved by judicial construction unless remedial legislation is enacted."

The law provides that "each school board, and the state Board of Education for the state-operated schools, shall negotiate with its certificated employees in good faith on matters pertaining to their employment and the fulfillment of their professional duties." Within 20 days after a recognized employee bargaining organization enters a written request for meeting with a school board, the board is to meet with that organization at a time and place mutually agreed upon. Each party may select a maximum of five negotiating representatives, and the bargaining meetings may be held in executive session upon mutual agreement. All final agreements, however, are to be made public at a school-board meeting.

Procedures for determining the bargaining representative provide that > when a majority of the certificated employees in a school district have designated an educational organization of their own choosing to bargain for them, the organization shall be recognized by the school board as the bargaining agent for all the certificated staff, except superintendents of schools. The membership of any such recognized educational organization shall be composed principally of those employed in the teaching profession in Alaska.

A school board's recognition of an employee organization "is valid for one year or a term agreed upon by the two parties to an agreement, unless a majority of certified staff votes to request the termination of recognition of the employee bargaining agency." The board is entitled to receipt of a membership affidavit from the bargaining representative once each year. In the event that 25 percent of a district's certificated employees request a representation election, the school board must hold a secret ballot election of all certificated employees within 20 days; the results of this election are binding for one year.

The new law also provides mediation procedures upon the written request of "an employee bargaining agency or a school board, and upon certification by the requesting party that good faith negotiations have terminated in a stalemate." Each party to the dispute is to choose two mediation board members within 10 days, and the four members so selected jointly are to select a fifth member to serve as chairman. All mediation board members serve without compensation, and the law provides that teachers who serve on such a board "must have attained tenure under AS 14.20.150 and are to be released from school duties without penalty or loss of pay from public funds." The mediation board is charged with hearing evidence from both parties, and submitting its findings and recommendations to both parties, the education commissioner, and the public within 30 days after the initial hearing, although the reporting period may be extended upon mutual agreement of the parties.

Other provisions of the new law mandate the inclusion of "grievance procedures for the certificated staff" in negotiation agreements, and hold that nothing in the law "prohibits an employee from addressing a school board, as an individual, through the regular procedures of the school board for hearing individual cases." In addition, nothing in the law's provisions "shall be construed as an abrogation or delegation of the legal responsibilities, powers, and duties of the School Board including its right to make final decisions on policies."

MAINE

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE BARGAINING LAW AMENDED

A February 9, 1970, amendment to the Maine Municipal Public Employees Labor Relations Law allows either party to a dispute to "seek a review by the Superior Court of a binding determination by an arbitration panel or a decision of the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeal Board." Prior to the amendment the statute held that an appeal of a unit determination or bargaining representative dispute to the state appeal board was "the sole means of review of such determinations." The amendment further provides that > the binding determination of an arbitration panel or arbitrator or the decision of the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeal Board, in the absence of fraud, upon all questions of fact shall be final. The court may, after consideration, affirm, reverse or modify any such binding determination or decision based upon an erroneous ruling or finding of law. An appeal may be taken to the law court as in any civil action.

Portions of the definition of "public employee" as contained in the statute also were amended to exclude individuals who are employed less than six months, and "temporary, seasonal or on-call" employees. The statute previously had excluded from the definition employees who are "on a probationary or provisional status, or who [are] temporary, seasonal, on-call or part-time" employees.

Another amendment to the statute provides that in a unit determination dispute the commissioner of labor and industry may decide "the appropriateness of a unit for purposes of collective bargaining," as well as whether a supervisory or other position should be included in a given bargaining unit. Section 967 of the statute, which outlines the determination of a bargaining representative, was amended to provide that in the event of a run-off election between two choices, the organization receiving "the majority of votes of those voting," rather than "the majority of votes of the unit," will be certified by the commissioner as bargaining representative. In addition, Section 967 was amended to provide that "where there is a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect, no question concerning unit or representation may be raised except during the period not more than 90 nor less than 60 days prior to the expiration date of the agreement." The statute previously had held that only questions of representation were barred under the stated conditions.

A final amendment to the statute provides compensation for members of the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeal Board at the rate of $50 apiece for each day in which they are "actually employed in the discharge of their official duties."

The full text of the Maine statute is reprinted in the "Texts" section of this issue of the DIGEST. All amendments to or changes in the statute are italicized.

NEW YORK

BARGAINING REPRESENTATIVE FOR CITY UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK VOTES NEA AFFILIATION

The Legislative Conference of the City University of New York (CUNY), recognized bargaining agent for some 6,500 full-time instructional staff members at numerous state colleges, voted on April 16 to affiliate with the New York State Teachers Association and the NEA. The vote for affiliation was 1,238 to 477. Bargaining units of CUNY employees represented by the Legislative Conference exist at Baruch College, Hunter College, Lehman College, Brooklyn College, Queens College, York College, John Jay College, Richmond College, Staten Island Community College, Kingsboro Community College, Hostos Community College, New York City Community College, Bronx Community College, Manhattan Community College, Queensboro Community College, New York City College of Applied Arts and Sciences, the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, the Board of Higher Education, Division of Teacher Education, and the University Graduate Center.

THREE LOCAL MINI-PERB LAWS REPEALED

According to the New York Public Employment Relations Board (PERB), three local ordinances creating local mini-PERB's have been repealed, and a fourth is expected to go out of existence. State officials report that the city of Buffalo repealed its mini-PERB enactment on February 15, 1970, and the city of Lackawanna repealed its on December 30, 1969. In addition, Oswego County and the city of Middletown were disestablished by the PERB on December 31, 1969, for failure to amend their local laws.

Following 1969 amendments to the state's Taylor Law, all local governments which had enacted laws establishing local mini-PERB's were required to amend such laws and regulations to bring them into substantial compliance with state public employee procedures. As of early March 1970, 16 local mini-PERB's had been approved by the PERB; these were effective in the counties of Broome, Delaware, Erie, Monroe, Nassau, Onondaga, and Westchester, and the towns of Freeport, Harrison, North Castle, North Hempstead, Oyster Bay, Port Chester, Rye, Syracuse, and the Syracuse City School District. Two other counties were in the process of amending their local ordinances to provide for local mini-PERB's at that time.

WISCONSIN

MAYOR WHO RESIGNS DURING ELECTED TERM ELIGIBLE TO BECOME CITY NEGOTIATOR

An amendment to Chapter 370, Section 111.70(5), of the Wisconsin municipal employment bargaining statute provides that any mayor of a first-, second-, or third-class city who resigns during the term of his elected office is eligible to represent the city in negotiations, if selected to do so by the city council. Effective February 13, 1970, the amendment extends the former statute which held that only a city council member of a first-class city who resigned during his elected term was eligible to be designated as negotiator for the city.

AFL–CIO URGES UNIONS TO SEEK 10 PERCENT WAGE INCREASE IN 1970

Adding the record 5.6 percent deferred increase due to be paid some five million workers this year to an estimated 4 percent price rise, the AFL–CIO executive council urged unions to seek a "minimum" 10 percent increase in 1970 settlements "to offset increased living costs and advance living standards." Although the 10 percent figure represents a sharp rise above last year when first-year settlement gains averaged 8.2 percent, a report produced by the union's economic policy committee warned that owing to "the inflation that has plagued the economy in the past few years . . . rising prices erode workers' buying power, and many workers have experienced declines in real wages. . . . Under these conditions, workers have no other recourse than to seek substantial wages gains."

According to figures reported by the Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics in January, the renegotiation or reopening of settlements covering at least 1,000 workers will affect more workers this year than in any year during the previous decade. Some five million workers will be affected this year, compared with 2.7 million last year. Major contracts subject to renegotiation this year include those in the automobile manufacturing, trucking, rubber, meatpacking, apparel, construction, and retail trade industries. Another five million workers will be affected by agreements which neither expire nor reopen this year, but provide for deferred increases during the year.

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX, FEBRUARY 1970

Figures released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) indicate that the Consumer Price Index (CPI) all-items figure for February rose 0.5 percent above the previous month to 132.5 (1957-59=100). The February 1970 all-items index stood 6.3 percent higher than a year ago. In addition, BLS reported that the February 1970 purchasing power of the consumer dollar stood at $.755 based upon its average buying power in 1957-59.

BLS attributed most of the February increase to "larger than seasonal increases in food and apparel prices and . . . charges for consumer services, particularly home mortgages." Medical care services, which rose 0.8 percent in February, registered their sharpest monthly increase in nearly a year. Transportation service charges rose substantially less than in the previous two months, while the costs of durables remained unchanged instead of registering the usual slight seasonal decline.

BLS estimates that some 67,000 workers will receive cost-of-living wage increases based upon the February CPI. Nearly 33,000 workers in the farm equipment, chemical, and household appliance industries will receive hourly pay increases varying from two to five cents and based upon the increase in the national index since November 1969. In addition, 23,000 workers in the electronics and automobile equipment industries will receive hourly increases of two or eight cents based upon the rise in the CPI since February 1969. And some 3,100 other workers will receive hourly pay increases of six or seven cents, according to the change in the CPI since August 1969.

NEGOTIATION AGREEMENTS: TRANSFER PROVISIONS

The NEA Research Division's analysis of 978 comprehensive classroom teacher agreements effective during the 1968-69 school year indicates that 558 of these agreements (57 percent) contained negotiated transfer provisions. These provisions are found in agreements in school systems with enrollments of 1,000 or more in 21 of the 25 states which filed comprehensive classroom teacher agreements with the NEA Research Division's depository of agreements. The number of professional school system personnel represented by the 558 agreements with transfer provisions is 331,291. Comprehensive agreements containing transfer provisions are found in all enrollment strata, but the percentage of comprehensive agreements with such provisions increases with the size of enrollment. Distribution of the 558 agreements according to enrollment strata is:

Stratum	School system enrollment	School systems with comprehensive agreements	Professional personnel in school systems with comprehensive agreements	School systems with comprehensive agreements having transfer provisions		Professional personnel in school systems with comprehensive agreements having transfer provisions

Total		978	420,118	558	57.1%	331,291	78.9%

Of the 108 comprehensive agreements reported for school systems with enrollments of 12,000 or more, transfer provisions are contained in 95 (88.0 percent) of these agreements. The 95 school systems with negotiated transfer provisions represent approximately 237,465 professional employees. Only these transfer provisions are analyzed in the following article.

A transfer provision is a negotiated procedure governing the movement of an employee from one assignment to another without a change of rank. Although similar procedures may be followed for promotions, assignments, layoffs, and recalls, these contingencies are not considered transfers. There are two basic types of transfer provisions, voluntary and involuntary. Voluntary transfers are transfers initiated at the request of the individual teacher; involuntary transfers are transfers initiated by the school administration.

Of the 95 transfer provisions, 92 contain various specific negotiated regulations or guidelines governing transfer procedures. Two of the remaining three provisions establish joint teacher-board study committees to recommend transfer policies, and the other one provides that the formerly negotiated transfer provision will be deleted pending court action. A review of the 92 specific transfer provisions shows 77 (83.7 percent) contain provisions for both voluntary and involuntary transfers, 14 (15.2 percent) cover only voluntary transfers, and 1 (1.1 percent) covers only involuntary transfers.

Tables 1 and 2 list the contents of the 91 voluntary and 78 involuntary transfer provisions containing specific negotiated regulations governing transfers. This analysis is limited to what appears in written negotiation agreements; it is not concerned with other school-board policies, rules, and regulations, or verbal agreements reached by school boards and teacher groups. In addition, the information in Tables 1 and 2 is limited strictly to the data found in the transfer provisions. For example, the grievance procedure in many agreements covers all other provisions in the agreement. No attempt is made in this analysis to cross-reference provisions. Thus, the five agreements listed in Table 1 as allowing teachers recourse to the grievance procedure in matters concerning transfers consist only of the five agreements which so state in the transfer provision itself. Teachers covered by other agreements may also have recourse to the grievance procedure for violations of or inequities in the transfer procedures, but they are not listed. Furthermore, the categories in Table 1 and in Table 2 are not mutually exclusive. The provisions nearly always contain more than one feature. Also, the categories are based on subject matter, not on types of provisions.

Content of Voluntary Transfer Provisions

Specific negotiated regulations governing transfer procedures under the 91 voluntary transfer provisions can be grouped into five broad categories: notification of transfer vacancies, procedures for making application, criteria for the selection of applicants, notification of action taken on the application, and the appeal process.

In reference to the time at which vacancies are posted, most agreements provide for the posting or listing of all school system vacancies before a given annual date. This date usually falls in February, March, April, or May. Some agreements provide for a supplemental posting following the initial posting, while others state only that vacancies will be posted as they occur. Still other agreements stipulate the number of days vacancies must be posted before they may be filled; this number varies from three to 14. Vacancies most frequently are to be posted in each school building, but some agreements provide that vacancies be posted only in a central location, the personnel office, or the superintendent's or assistant superintendent's office. In four agreements teachers who previously have placed their names on transfer lists are to be notified of vacancies individually. In about 25 percent of the agreements the representative organization is given comprehensive lists (usually by the end of the year) of the system-wide status of current vacancies and the number of teachers transferred.

The majority of the provisions specifying how applications for transfers are to be made state that an application must be filed by a certain annual date, which usually falls in March, April, or May. A comparison of these dates with annual posting dates indicates that a teacher usually must file his application within two weeks of the posting date. In those agreements stipulating that a teacher must file within a given number of days of posting, the time period varies from one to three weeks. A teacher most often applies in writing directly to the central office or to the administrator in charge of system-wide transfers; in some agreements a teacher first notifies his immediate supervisor. A few agreements state that a teacher desiring a transfer must have a conference with the administrator in charge of transfers. In other agreements the receiving principal or supervisor is made aware of applicants through interviews or information provided by the central administration, and exerts some influence on the selection process.

The criteria used to select applicants usually are defined in broad, somewhat flexible terms. Of the 44 agreements naming seniority as one selection criterion, seven list seniority alone, 20 list seniority and one other criterion, 12 list seniority and two other criteria, four list seniority and three other criteria, and one lists seniority and four other criteria. Seniority usually is the deciding factor when all other qualifications are equal.

In some agreements notification of an action first occurs when a teacher is given written assurance that his application has been received. Those agreements naming the given annual date by which a teacher is to be notified of the acceptance or rejection of his application most frequently specify the end of the school year. A few agreements state that notice be given in August, at the very latest. When notice is to be given according to when a decision is made, the agreements stress expediency. Only one agreement indicates that a teacher must be notified within a stipulated number of days of the receipt of his application. Although the manner of notification frequently is undefined, a number of agreements state that a notice is to be delivered in writing. Ten agreements grant teachers the right to know the reasons for their rejection, or for a delay in the processing of their applications; sometimes the reasons are given in writing, while other agreements provide that the teacher personally be informed by the superintendent or his principal. Five voluntary transfer provisions specify that a teacher has recourse to the grievance procedure if he believes the agreement has been violated, or there has been an inequity in the handling of his transfer request.

Content of Involuntary Transfer Provisions

Data derived from the 78 involuntary transfer provisions which contain specific regulations governing transfer procedures can be grouped into five categories: notification of the pending transfer, the reasons for involuntarily transferring a teacher, the criteria governing the selection of teachers to be transferred, special considerations given to teachers being transferred involuntarily, and the appeal process.

When teachers are notified by an annual date that they will be transferred involuntarily, such notification usually occurs in May or June. Some agreements indicate that notice may be given as late as July or August. The number of days before the effective date of a transfer by which a teacher must be notified varies from five to 60, but most frequently is given as 30. Some agreements merely provide that notification of a pending transfer is to be given as soon as possible. Only one agreement states that teachers may be transferred involuntarily at any time without notice. Notice most often is given personally during a conference where the teacher is informed of the reasons for his transfer. In three agreements the representative organization is to be notified of involuntary transfers directly by the school administration. The person most often responsible for directing involuntary transfers is the superintendent, or the assistant superintendent in charge of personnel.

Although the reasons for involuntary transfers usually are stated broadly, the most common reason is shifts in the enrollment patterns of individual schools within a system. The second most common reason is that the best interests of the school system and the instructional program necessitate some involuntary transfers; the term "best interests" is not explained. A few agreements name unexpected disruptions of the instructional program as a cause for transfer. The three agreements which name racial imbalance as a possible cause for transfer do not mandate involuntary transfers when an imbalance exists; they merely state that racial imbalance may be a factor influencing such transfers.

Seniority is the major criterion influencing most involuntary transfers. In 13 agreements seniority is the only factor influencing selection; seniority and one other criterion form the basis for selection in 19 agreements; seniority and 2 other criteria influence selection in 10 agreements. When the transference of a large number of teachers is necessitated by enrollment shifts and mergers, seniority usually is the most influential factor; unless enough volunteers are found, teachers with the least seniority are transferred first. Other important selection criteria include the availability of volunteers, and a teacher's qualifications and experience. When a teacher is needed to fill a particular instructional opening, seniority rules only when qualifications and experience are equal.

Teachers who are transferred involuntarily frequently are given special consideration; this most commonly consists of the chance to select an opening from those existing in the school system. In some agreements involuntary transferees are given preference over voluntary transferees in their choice of openings. In other agreements involuntary transferees are guaranteed a comparable position if transferred. In five agreements teachers who have been transferred involuntarily are given priority when openings occur in the school from which they were transferred. Four of these agreements provide that involuntary transferees may return in the reverse order in which they were transferred. One agreement allows involuntarily transferred teachers priority in transferring to any school of their choice. Three agreements allow teachers to be released from their contracts if such is preferable to being transferred involuntarily.

An appeal of an involuntary transfer usually consists of discussions between the superintendent (or other administrators in charge of transfers) and representatives of the teachers' organization. About one-third of the agreements providing for an appeal specifically state that the grievance procedure may be used.

Four examples of transfer provisions are reprinted here. These samples show variations in the handling of transfer procedures and are not intended to be evidence of exemplary transfer procedures.

Little Rock School District, Little Rock, Arkansas

Article IX–Voluntary Transfers and Reassignments

A. 1. No later than April 15th of each school year, the Superintendent shall cause to be published a complete list of all known vacancies which shall occur during the following school year.

2. Tenure teachers who desire a change in grade, subject, and/or school shall file a written statement of such desire with the Assistant Superintendent-Personnel not later than May 1st. Such statement shall include the grade, subject, and school to which the teacher desires to be assigned, in order of preference.

3. No assignment of new teachers in the school system shall be made until all pending requests for reassignment or transfer have been acted upon either by granting or denying the requests.

4. Notification of transfer or reassignment shall be made personally and confirmed in writing, such notice to be made immediately after such decision to transfer has been reached.

B. In the determination of requests for voluntary reassignments and/or transfer, the convenience and wishes of the individual teacher will be honored to the extent that they do not conflict with the instructional requirements and best interests of the school system. If more than one teacher has applied for the same position, seniority in the school system shall be a primary consideration.

Article X–Involuntary Transfers and Reassignment

The Board and the Association recognize that some involuntary transfer of teachers from one school to another or reassignment within a school is unavoidable. They also recognize that under normal circumstances transfer or reassignment of teachers should be held to a minimum. Therefore, they agree as follows:

A. Notice of an involuntary transfer or reassignment shall be given to teachers as soon as practicable and, under normal circumstances, not later than June 1st.

B. An involuntary transfer or reassignment will be made only after a meeting between the teacher involved and the Deputy Superintendent and/or the Assistant Superintendent-Personnel, at which time the teacher will be notified of the reasons therefor. In the event that a teacher objects to the transfer or reassignment at this meeting, upon request of the teacher the Association will be notified and the Deputy Superintendent and/or the Assistant Superintendent-Personnel will meet with the Association's representative to discuss the matter. In the event the differences cannot be resolved, provisions of the grievance procedure will be employed. [NOTE: Grievance procedure ends with advisory arbitration.]

C. Openings in the school system will be discussed with the teachers being transferred or reassigned. Such teachers may request positions to which they desire to be transferred. Within time limitations, teachers being involuntarily transferred or reassigned shall have selection preference over those seeking voluntary transfers under Article IX. In consideration of involuntary transfers seniority in the school system shall be primary.

Gary City School District, Gary, Indiana

Article VIII–Transfer Procedures

A. A teacher requesting a transfer shall file the completed forms available from the principal and/or the personnel department.

B. Whenever possible, a teacher should list more than one school to which a transfer is desired in order to improve the possibility of effecting such a transfer.

C. A teacher may request a transfer to a different organizational level of the school system, to a different subject matter field, to a special field (e.g. counseling, instructional materials center, special education) provided he has the proper certification for the requested position.

D. A list of vacancies shall be posted in each school building by October 1 and revised periodically thereafter to keep it up-to-date until March 1 of the school year. A current list of vacancies will be kept available in the Personnel Department.

E. A request for a transfer made by a teacher will remain active until the transfer is effected or withdrawn, but in no event for a period to exceed two years from the date of filing.

F. When filling vacant positions, after following the procedures for making assignments within a building, teacher transfer requests will be processed before new personnel are hired.

G. When a vacancy for the ensuing school year exists between March 1 and September 1, transfer requests currently on file shall be processed first in the filling of that vacancy. If said vacancy cannot be filled from the transfer requests currently on file, the School City may fill the vacancy with a new employee. Such vacancies existing after March 1 which cannot be filled by the transfer procedure or new employees shall be posted each two weeks in each school building until the close of school.

H. When a position which is, or becomes, open for which two or more teachers who are equally qualified have requested a transfer, length of service in the School City shall be the determining factor in effecting the transfer. When only one qualified staff member applies for a transfer to an open position, he shall receive the transfer. If the vacancy occurs within the school year it may be filled according to the procedures above ten days after the vacancy has been posted in each building or it may be filled temporarily until the end of the year at which time it will be filled according to the procedures outlined above.

I. When a vacancy is filled and a transfer applicant did not succeed in filling the vacancy, he shall have access to the grievance procedure. [NOTE: Grievance procedure ends with advisory arbitration.]

J. When a teacher receives a voluntary transfer he shall have no seniority rights to a subsequent transfer for a period of two years.

K. Involuntary transfers will be made only when new buildings are opened, when an old facility is closed, or when staff needs cause a reduction in staff.

L. When a new school is opened, the staff, when staff members are properly qualified, shall be drawn first from schools affected by the opening of the new school. When involuntary transfers are required because part of the student body is moving to the new school, teachers, when qualifications are equal, with the least system-wide seniority shall be transferred first. Remaining vacancies shall be posted in each building and filled with requests for transfers. New teachers will be assigned only after all transfer requests have been considered.

M. When there is a reduction in the number of teaching assignments within a building due to changes in course offerings, or a reduction in pupil enrollment which results in the necessity of an involuntary transfer for a teacher, the teacher with the least length of service within a building when qualifications are equal will be transferred first. Any teacher so affected, when properly qualified, shall be given a preference in a transfer assignment and shall, when equally qualified, have the first right of return to vacant positions to the school from which he was transferred. Such teachers shall take their building seniority to the new building.

N. The foregoing transfer procedures are subject to the following modifications in an effort to promote further staff integration at all levels and in all sections of the city.

1. Prior to February 1, of each school year a list of schools having the greatest need of improvement in staff racial balance and all vacant positions within those schools shall be posted in each building and revised periodically to keep it up-to-date. The list will include all schools with a faculty composed of more than seventy-five per cent of one racial group.

2. The Board and the Union will cooperate to encourage transfers which will improve the racial balance within those schools.

3. A teacher requesting a transfer to improve racial staff balance, when qualified, shall receive preference in filling a vacant position.

4. A teacher accepting such a transfer shall have the right to return to his original position at the end of the year and the right to return to the same position if it is open at the end of two years or to a comparable position in the original school.

5. A teacher accepting a staff balance transfer will be permitted to carry with him his building seniority from the school from which he is transferring, and shall have the opportunity to participate in incentive plans developed to encourage transfers to improve staff balance.

6. No transfer request shall be considered a transfer to improve racial staff balance unless the transfer request specifically denotes such purpose at the time of filing same.

O. Workshop for teachers who transfer to help achieve improved staff racial balance.

1. A two-week workshop will be held during the summer of 1969 for teachers who have already accepted transfers to improve racial balance for the 1969-1970 school year.

2. Each teacher will receive a stipend of twenty dollars ($20.00) per day for the ten-day workshop.

P. Other incentives to encourage staff-racial balance transfers will be developed jointly by the Union and the Administration if other funds become available.

New Bedford School District, New Bedford, Massachusetts

Article XII–Voluntary Transfers and Assignments

A. The Superintendent shall assign all newly-elected personnel to their specific positions which, except for long term substitute teachers, shall be within the type of service for which the teacher has been elected by the Committee. The Superintendent shall give notice of assignments to new teachers as soon after election as practicable.

B. 1. No later than May 1st of each school year, the Superintendent shall post in all school buildings a list of the known vacancies which will occur during the following school year.

2. Teachers who desire a change in grade and/or subject assignment or who desire to transfer to another building shall file a written statement of such desire with the Superintendent not later than May 15th. Such statement shall include the grade and/or subject to which the teacher desires to be assigned and the school or schools to which he desires to be transferred, in order of preference.

3. As soon as practicable, and whenever possible at least one week prior to the close of the school term, the Superintendent shall post in each school and deliver to the Association a system-wide schedule showing the names of all teachers who have been reassigned or transferred and the nature of such reassignment or transfer. If such schedule is not available before the close of the school term, it shall be posted on a bulletin board at the Administration's office on William Street and sent to the Association as soon as it is available and posted in each school at the opening of school the next September. In addition, it shall be sent to any teacher who leaves a stamped, self-addressed envelope with the Superintendent, for that purpose.

C. In the determination of requests for voluntary reassignment and/or transfer, the wishes of the individual teacher will be honored to the extent that they do not conflict with the instructional requirements and best interests of the school system. If more than one teacher has applied for the same position, seniority shall be a significant factor in determining which teacher shall be given the position.

Article XIII–Involuntary Transfers and Assignments

A. Notice of an involuntary transfer or reassignment shall be given to teachers as soon as practicable.

B. When an involuntary transfer or reassignment is necessary, qualified volunteers, if any, will be transferred or reassigned first. A teacher's area of competence, major or minor field of study and length of service in the New Bedford School System will be considered in determining which teacher is to be transferred or reassigned.

C. An involuntary transfer or reassignment shall be made only after a meeting between the teacher involved and the Superintendent, or his designee, at which time the teacher will be notified of the reasons therefor, except that a temporary transfer or reassignment up to thirty (30) school days can be made in an emergency without such a meeting. In the event that a teacher objects to the transfer or reassignment at this meeting, upon the request of the teacher, the Association will be notified and the Superintendent, or his designee, will meet with the Association's representative to discuss the matter.

D. If a transfer or reassignment is caused by a reduction in force at a particular school or schools then a list of open positions in the school system will be made available to all teachers being involuntarily transferred or reassigned. Such teachers may request the positions, in order of preference, to which they desire to be transferred. Teachers being involuntarily transferred or reassigned because of a reduction in force shall have preference over those seeking voluntary transfer or reassignment. Where such involuntary transfer or reassignment is being made because of a reduction in force a teacher will be placed in as nearly a comparable position as possible if one is available.

Flint Community Schools, Flint, Michigan

Article IX–Vacancies and Transfers

A. Although the Board and the Association recognize that frequent transfers of teachers from one school to another are disruptive of the educational process and interfere with optimum teacher performance, they also recognize that some transfers for administrative purposes and to insure a fair distribution of experienced and qualified teachers throughout the system will be necessary.

B. Transfers and changes of assignments shall be on a voluntary basis whenever possible. In making involuntary assignments and transfers, the convenience and wishes of the individual teacher will be honored to the extent that these considerations do not conflict with instructional requirements and the best interests of the school system and the pupils. Teachers will be given thirty (30) days notice of involuntary transfers, and the reasons therefor if the teachers so request, except that in those cases in which a transfer must be made in less than thirty (30) days, such notice will be given as time will allow. All involuntary transfers shall be reviewed by the Personnel Office and teachers will be given an opportunity to state in writing the reasons for their objection to the transfer.

C. Teachers shall be given an opportunity to apply, without giving reasons, for transfers to be effective the next school year if their application is made by April 7; provided, that if the application is made after April 7, the teacher shall state the reasons for the transfer request or if the request is for transfer to a particular school, the teacher shall be obligated to state the specific reasons for the choice of the school. The Board will maintain in the Personnel Office a current list of vacancies in positions on the K-12 and College salary schedules until April 7. A duplicate list of vacancies on the College salary schedule shall be kept in the Office of the Associate Dean until April 7. If a teacher requests a transfer under this Paragraph and is refused, he shall be notified in writing of the reasons therefor if he so requests.

D. Teachers may apply for transfers to be effective during the school term in which application is made, provided that in such case the teacher will be required to state the reasons for the transfer request

E. An involuntary transfer or the denial of a request for transfer may be challenged through the grievance procedure solely on the ground that the decision made was unreasonable. [NOTE: Grievance procedure ends with binding arbitration.]

A brief of the 1969-71 agreement between the Washtenaw Community College Board of Trustees, Ann Arbor, Michigan, and the Washtenaw Community College Education Association was published in the February 1970 issue of the DIGEST. Reprinted below is a noteworthy excerpt from that agreement designated "Article X – Faculty Evaluation, Contract Procedures."

A. Contracts: Issuance and Termination

1. A new appointee to the College falling within the bargaining unit will be given a one-year probationary contract. This contract will be renewed for a second probationary year unless a charge including a request for dismissal is made against the holder of the probationary contract which is upheld by the Board after Due Process, but no holder of a probationary contract will be dismissed or refused a second year contract for reasons arising solely from the Evaluation Procedure.

2. On successfully completing his probationary contracts, the new appointee shall be given a Continuing Contract. This shall be issued yearly on or before March 15 except when cancelled through the procedures of Due Process explained below.

3. It is recognized here that the Board of Trustees has the inherent right to suspend any member of the bargaining unit from active performance of his duties while under contract to the Board in order that the Board may exercise Due Process. During the period of suspension, the members of the unit will receive full salary and all benefits he would enjoy if not under suspension.

4. All charges against members of the bargaining unit which include a request for dismissal of the member from the College at the end of his contract period or at the end of his contract year, except for recommendations not to grant continuing contract after evaluation, must be first submitted to the Board who will initiate Due Process as explained below to determine the validity of the charge.

If a charge is submitted against a member of the bargaining unit at any level in the College which does not include a request for dismissal, and later that charge is found to include or should include a request for dismissal, it shall immediately be presented to the Board if it has not already been. The Board shall then initiate the procedures of Due Process to determine the validity of the charge. The Board shall begin Due Process by convening the Professional Practices Committee within forty-eight (48) hours to hear the charge.

B. Contract Continuation

1. A member of the bargaining unit holding a probationary contract receiving a recommendation for continuing contract will be granted a continuing contract.

2. A member of the bargaining unit who has received one continuing contract will receive succeeding annual continuing contracts unless specific charges shall be placed against him including a request for dismissal from the College. If such a charge is placed the procedures for Due Process shall begin as specified in "A (4)" above, but his right to his present continuing contract or the succeeding one shall not be infringed until Due Process has been undertaken and final action by the Board has been delivered to him in writing. After final action by the Board, he shall still have the right to arbitration and such other legal rights as may be his for the recovery of his contract.

C. Evaluation of Performance: Probationary Contracts

1. The Division Director will be responsible for convening the evaluation team for each new member of the bargaining unit holding a probationary contract. He will form such a committee on or before October 1 of the first year of the probationary contract.

2. The evaluation team shall consist of three (3) people, all holding continuing contracts if in the bargaining unit, or having been at the College on appointment a minimum of two (2) years if not members of the bargaining unit. One of the three may be the Division Director if he chooses, or, at his option, another appointee of the College which he shall choose. The second and third members of the team will be chosen by the continuing contract members of the Division.

3. The Division Director shall call a meeting of the evaluation committee and the member of the bargaining unit being evaluated on or before October 15 of the first year of the probationary contract.

4. At this first meeting the evaluation committee will agree upon the methods to be used.

5. The methods and time schedule for carrying out the evaluation will be reduced to writing and shall become an initial record of the work of the team. A record of all subsequent work by the team shall be preserved in writing and shall be included with its final appraisal of the professional effectiveness of the instructor being evaluated.

6. The first written report in the evaluation procedure must be completed by March 15 of the first year of the contract. It shall be signed by all members of the evaluation team and the Division Director if he was not a member of the team. In addition to all written records of the work of the team it must include:

a. A statement of the methods and procedures used in the evaluation.
b. Who participated and when.
c. The appraisal of the member's professional effectiveness.

The member of the bargaining unit evaluated and his Division Director shall receive a copy of the report. A copy shall also be placed temporarily in his Personnel File.

The member of the bargaining unit being evaluated shall have the right to answer the evaluation report in writing. His reply shall become a part of all copies of the report.

7. If the evaluation team has decided that the member of the bargaining unit evaluated is inadequate in some area which could lead to a desire on the part of the College not to renew his contract, they must communicate this concern, to the member evaluated and to his Division Director in a separate written memorandum. This memorandum will not become a part of his personnel file. On receipt of the memorandum, the Division Director must call a meeting including the evaluation team, the member evaluated, and the Division Director at which steps will be considered that can be taken by the member evaluated to correct his inadequacies.

8. Following this required conference, the evaluation team shall undertake a second evaluation which shall be completed by October 1 of the second year of the probationary contract.

9. The second report of the evaluation team shall include a recommendation for the granting of continuing contract or a recommendation for separation from the College at the conclusion of the probationary contract.

A copy of the recommendation shall be delivered to the member evaluated, the Secretary of the Association, and the Division Director on or before October 15.

If the evaluation team has recommended separation from the College at the conclusion of the probationary contract, the Division Director after consultation with his Dean will forward the recommendation, with his additional recommendation if he so desires, to the Professional Practices Committee as the first step in Due Process on or before November 1.

10. Dates used above or other such dates used in this agreement shall be appropriately adjusted if a member joins the College in the second semester of any academic year.

11. Members of the bargaining unit with contracts beginning in September 1969 will serve two (2) year probationary contracts and will be evaluated as herein provided.

Members of the bargaining unit beginning the second year of a three (3) year probationary contract as provided for in the previous Master Agreement will be evaluated as herein provided, except that if the Division Director has reason to believe the first year evaluation gave evidences of inadequacies serious enough to lead to dismissal if not corrected, the Division Director shall so state in writing to the member on or before October 15, 1969, and begin the process of evaluation as here explained by November 1, 1969. If performance in the first year was satisfactory, the Division Director may, at his option, declare the process of Evaluation complete, not continuing with a second year of evaluation, and recommend by December 15, 1969, the member be awarded a continuing contract in September, 1970.

Members of the bargaining unit beginning the third year of a probationary contract as provided for in the previous Master Agreement will not be evaluated, it being assumed this process is now complete. If the evaluation is affirmative, they shall be notified by December 15, 1969, that they will be granted a Continuing Contract beginning September, 1970. If the evaluation is one recommending dismissal, the Division Director will begin the Due Process following evaluation as provided in this Article beginning with a request for a review of the charge by the Professional Practices Committee.

Due Process as specified here either after evaluation or at any other time will govern procedures employed in separation of any member of the bargaining unit from the College on and after September 1, 1969, and for the life of this Contract.

Members of the bargaining unit who were given Letters of Intent that they would be granted Continuing Contracts beginning September, 1969, shall be awarded Continuing Contracts which shall then be governed by the procedures of Due Process specified in this Article.

D. Due Process for Contract Termination

1. There shall be created a Professional Practices Committee consisting of four (4) members of the bargaining unit holding continuing contracts appointed by the Executive Board of the Association and one (1) member of the Administrative Council appointed by the Board of Trustees. Each of the three areas of the College, Occupational Studies, General Studies, and Student Personnel Services, shall be equally represented in the WCCEA group of appointees. The fourth bargaining unit member shall be designated a member-at-large and not counted in figuring the equal representation by the major College divisions.

2. The Committee shall meet for the following purposes:

a. To review the evaluation of a member of the bargaining unit holding a probationary contract who has been recommended for dismissal from the College at the end of his second probationary contract. In this case they shall determine:
(1) Whether or not an acceptable evaluation has been performed.
(2) Whether or not the evaluation process has been implemented.
(3) Whether or not the member was given written warning as provided in this document and adequate time and support in correcting the deficiencies that formed the basis for the recommendation for dismissal.
(4) Whether or not the evidence submitted warrants the dismissal of the member.

b. To hear a charge including a request for dismissal from the College against a member of the bargaining unit holding continuing contract or a charge which is not a part of the evaluation process against a member holding probationary contract, either of which charges have been referred to it by the Board of Trustees prior to its consideration of the charge.

3. The committee shall conduct all hearings in accordance with the same manner as the Board of Trustees as specified in Section 8.

4. At the conclusion of its hearings, the committee will prepare a written report within three (3) days or, in the case of a member of the bargaining unit on probationary contract having received a recommendation for dismissal, at least fifteen (15) days prior to the February meeting of the Board of Trustees in the second year of the probationary member's contract.

A copy of the written report will be delivered immediately to the member of the bargaining unit concerned, the president of the College, and the president of the Association.

This report shall be accompanied by all prior written materials in the case.

5. The College will furnish a secretary to record and transcribe all hearings held by the committee.

6. On receipt of the report from the committee the president of the College shall, within forty-eight (48) hours, transmit copies of all the written materials including the report to each member of the Board of Trustees; he shall schedule a hearing on the case on the agenda of the next meeting of the Board of Trustees.

If he has not received the report by the committee fifteen (15) days before the next meeting of the Board, the hearing shall be placed on the agenda of the second Board meeting from the day of his receipt of the report. The Board at its own option may shorten the fifteen (15) day time limit in this clause, or schedule a special meeting prior to its next regular meeting to hear the case.

7. The Board of Trustees will notify the member and the Association of the date, time and place of the hearing at least ten (10) days prior to the meeting.

8. The hearing will be open or closed at the option of the member, the usual legal requirements will apply to all proceedings, including the right to legal counsel and representation, the right of facing the individual(s) originating the charges, and cross examination.

9. The hearing will be concluded within seven (7) reporting days from the date of the start of the hearing.

10. In no instance will the Board terminate a member of the bargaining unit's employment without first receiving the written report of the Professional Practices Committee.

11. The Board will notify the member of the bargaining unit and the Association of its decision within forty-eight (48) hours after the conclusion of the hearing. Should the Board's decision be for termination of appointment, the member or the Association, or both together, may appeal the decision to binding arbitration as elsewhere provided in this agreement or exercise whatever additional legal rights may be theirs.

STATE OF ALASKA
SIXTH LEGISLATURE SECOND SESSION
A BILL

For an Act entitled: "An Act relating to mediation and negotiation procedures for teachers."

BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF ALASKA:

Section 1. AS 14.20 is amended by adding new sections to read:

ARTICLE 6. NEGOTIATION.

Section 14.20.550. Negotiation with certified employees.

Each school board, and the state Board of Education for the state-operated schools, shall negotiate with its certificated employees in good faith on matters pertaining to their employment and the fulfillment of their professional duties.

Sec. 14.20.560. Teachers' bargaining groups.

1. When a majority of the certificated employees in a school district have designated an educational organization of their own choosing to bargain for them, the organization shall be recognized by the school board as the bargaining agent for all the certificated staff, except superintendents of schools. The membership of any such recognized educational organization shall be composed principally of those employed in the teaching profession in Alaska.

2. The organization representing a majority of the certificated employees of a school district shall, upon the request of the school board, submit an affidavit verifying that it does represent a majority of the certificated employees. Recognition of the employee bargaining agency by a school board is valid for one year or a term agreed upon by the two parties to an agreement, unless a majority of certified staff votes to request the termination of recognition of the employee bargaining agency. The school board is entitled to an affidavit of membership from the employee bargaining agency once each year.

3. Upon the request of 25 per cent of the certificated employees in a district, the school board shall hold, within 20 days, an election by secret ballot of all the certificated employees in order to determine their choice of a bargaining agency. The results of this section are binding for one year.

4. A school board shall, upon the written request of the employee bargaining organization, meet with the representative of the organization within 20 days of the request at a time and place to be mutually agreed upon. In the same manner, representatives of an employee bargaining organization are required to meet with a school board or its representatives within 20 days after receiving a written request. The school board and the employee organization may not select more than five representatives each to negotiate for them.

5. The negotiating meeting may be held in executive session upon mutual agreement of both parties, but all final agreements shall be made at a public meeting of the school board.

Sec. 14.20.570. Mediation Board.

1. Upon the written request for mediation by an employee bargaining agency or a school board, and upon certification by the requesting party that good faith negotiations have terminated in a stalemate, each party shall choose two mediation board members within 10 days. Within seven days of their selection, the four members shall meet to select jointly a fifth member. No more than three days may be used in selecting the fifth member.

2. The mediation board shall hold its initial hearing within seven days of the selection of the fifth member. The fifth member shall serve as chairman.

3. Teachers serving as members of a mediation board established by this section must have attained tenure under AS 14.20.150 and are to be released from school duties without penalty or loss of pay in those instances where representatives of the board are receiving pay from public funds.

4. Mediation board members serve without compensation.

Sec. 14.20.580. Duties of mediation board.

1. In a dispute between certificated employees and a school board, a mediation board shall hear the evidence from both parties and from such other witnesses as it may choose to hear.

2. Within 30 days of its initial hearing, a mediation board shall submit its findings and recommendations to both parties and to the Commissioner of Education. This information shall also be available to the public. Upon mutual agreement by both parties, the reporting period may be extended.

Sec. 14.20.590. Grievance procedures.

Negotiation agreements shall provide for grievance procedures for the certificated staff.

Sec. 14.20.600. Individual cases.

Nothing in secs. 550-590 of this chapter prohibits an employee from addressing a school board, as an individual, through the regular procedures of the school board for hearing individual cases.

Sec. 14.20.610. Legal responsibilities of boards.

Nothing in the foregoing provisions shall be construed as an abrogation or delegation of the legal responsibilities, powers, and duties of the School Board including its right to make final decisions on policies.

Sec. 961. Purpose.

It is declared to be the public policy of this State and it is the purpose of this chapter to promote the improvement of the relationship between public employers and their employees by providing a uniform basis for recognizing the right of public employees to join labor organizations of their own choosing and to be represented by such organizations in collective bargaining for terms and conditions of employment.

Sec. 962. Definitions.

As used in this chapter the following terms shall, unless the context requires a different interpretation, have the following meanings:

1. Appeals Board. "Appeals board" means the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board referred to in section 968.

2. Bargaining agent. "Bargaining agent" means any lawful organization, association or individual representative of such organization or association which has as its primary purpose the representation of employees in their employment relations with employers, and which has been determined by the public employer or the commissioner to be the choice of the majority of the units as their representative.

3. Commissioner. "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of Labor and Industry.

4. Department. "Department" means the Department of Labor and Industry.

5. Professional employee. "Professional employee" means any employee engaged in work.

A. Predominantly intellectual and varied in character as opposed to routine mental, manual, mechanical or physical work;

B. Involving the consistent exercise of discretion and judgment in its performance;

C. Of such a character that the output produced or the result accomplished cannot be standardized in relation to a given time period; and

D. Requiring knowledge of an advanced type in a field of science or learning customarily acquired by a prolonged course of specialized intellectual instruction and study in an institution of higher learning or a hospital, as distinguished from a general academic education or from an apprenticeship or from training in the performance of routine mental, manual or physical processes.

6. Public employee. "Public employee" means any employee of a public employer except any person:

A. Elected by popular vote; or
B. Appointed to office pursuant to statute, ordinance or resolution for a specified term of office by the executive head or body of the public employer; or
C. Whose duties as deputy, administrative assistant or secretary necessarily imply a confidential relationship to the executive head, body, department head or division head of the applicable bargaining unit; or
D. Who is a department head or division head appointed to office pursuant to statute, ordinance or resolution for an unspecified term by the executive head or body of the public employer; or
E. Who is a superintendent or assistant superintendent of a school system; or
F. Who has been employed less than 6 months.
G. Who is a temporary, seasonal or on-call employee. [Subsec. 6, as amended by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

7. Public employer. "Public employer" means any officer, board, commission, council, committee or other persons or body acting on behalf of any municipality or town or any subdivision thereof, or of any school, water, sewer or other district.

Sec. 963. Right of public employees to join labor organizations. No one shall directly or indirectly interfere with, intimidate, restrain, coerce or discriminate against public employees or a group of public employees in the free exercise of their rights, hereby given, voluntarily to join, form and participate in the activities of organizations of their own choosing for the purposes of representation and collective bargaining, or in the free exercise of any other right under this chapter.

Sec. 964. Prohibited acts of public employers, public employees and public employee organizations.

1. Public employer prohibitions. Public employers, their representatives and their agents are prohibited from:
A. Interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 963;
B. Encouraging or discouraging membership in any employee organization by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment or any term or condition of employment;
C. Dominating or interfering with the formation, existence or administration of any employee organization;
D. Discharging or otherwise discriminating against an employee because he has signed or filed any affidavit, petition or complaint or given any information or testimony under this chapter;
E. Refusing to bargain collectively with the bargaining agent of its employees as required by section 965;
F. Blacklisting of any employee organization or its members for the purpose of denying them employment.

2. Public employee prohibitions. Public employees, public employee organizations, their agents, members and bargaining agents are prohibited from:
A. Interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of the rights guaranteed in section 963, or a public employer in the selection of his representative for purposes of collective bargaining or the adjustment of grievances;
B. Refusing to bargain collectively with a public employer as required by section 965;
C. Engaging in (1) A work stoppage; (2) A slowdown; (3) A strike; or (4) The blacklisting of any public employer for the purpose of preventing it from filling employee vacancies.

3. Violations. Violations of this section may be enjoined upon complaint of any party affected by such violation. Sections 5 and 6 shall apply to any such injunction proceedings except that neither an allegation nor proof of unavoidable substantial and irreparable injury to the complainant's property shall be required to obtain a temporary restraining order or injunction. In connection therewith, actions may be brought by or against any unincorporated employee organization in the name by which it is known.

Sec. 965. Obligation to bargain.

1. Negotiations. It shall be the obligation of the public employer and the bargaining agent to bargain collectively. "Collective bargaining" means, for the purposes of this chapter, their mutual obligation:
A. To meet at reasonable times;
B. To meet within 10 days after receipt of written notice from the other party requesting a meeting for collective bargaining purposes, provided the parties have not otherwise agreed in a prior written contract;
C. To confer and negotiate in good faith with respect to wages, hours, working conditions and contract grievance arbitration except that by such obligations neither party shall be compelled to agree to a proposal or be required to make a concession and except that public employers of teachers shall meet and consult but not negotiate with respect to educational policies for the purpose of this paragraph, educational policies shall not include wages, hours, working conditions or contract grievance arbitration;

D. To execute in writing any agreements arrived at, the term of any such agreement to be subject to negotiation but shall not exceed 3 years; and

E. To participate in good faith in the fact-finding and arbitration procedures required by this section.

Whenever wages, rates of pay or any other matter requiring appropriation of money by any municipality are included as a matter of collective bargaining conducted pursuant to this chapter, it is the obligation of the bargaining agent to serve written notice of request for collective bargaining on the public employer at least 120 days before the conclusion of the current fiscal operating budget.

2. Mediation. Mediation procedures shall be followed whenever the parties jointly agree to use such services.

3. Fact-finding. If the parties, either with or without the services of a mediator, are unable to effect a settlement of their controversy, they may jointly agree either to call upon the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation for fact-finding services with recommendations or to pursue some other mutually acceptable fact-finding procedure.

If the parties do not jointly agree to call upon the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation or to pursue some other procedure, either party to the controversy may request the commissioner to assign a fact-finding board. If so requested, the commissioner shall appoint a fact-finding board, ordinarily of 3 members, in accordance with rules and procedures prescribed by the commissioner for making such appointment. The fact-finding board shall be appointed from a list maintained by the commissioner and drawn up after consultation with representatives of state and local government administrators, agencies with industrial relations and personnel functions and representatives of employee organizations and of employers. Any person who has actively participated as the mediator in the immediate proceedings for which fact-finding has been called shall not sit on that fact-finding board. The board shall hear the contending parties to the controversy. It may request statistical data and reports on its own initiative in addition to the data regularly maintained by the commissioner. The members of the fact-finding board shall submit their findings and recommendations to the parties only.

The parties shall have a period of 30 days, after the receipt of findings and recommendations from the fact finders, in which to make a good faith effort to resolve their controversy. If the parties have not resolved their controversy by the end of said period, either party may, but not until the end of said period unless the parties otherwise jointly agree, make the fact-finding and recommendations public.

4. Arbitration. In addition to the 30-day period referred to in subsection 3, the parties shall have 15 more days, making a total period of 45 days from the receipt of findings and recommendations, in which to make a good faith effort to resolve their controversy.

If the parties have not resolved their controversy by the end of said 45-day period, they may jointly agree to an arbitration procedure which will result in a binding determination of their controversy. Such determinations will be subject to review by the Superior Court in the manner specified by section 972.

If they do not jointly agree to such an arbitration procedure within 10 days after the end of said 45-day period, then either party may, by written notice to the other, request that their differences be submitted to a board of 3 arbitrators. The bargaining agent and the public employer shall within 5 days of such request each select and name one arbitrator and shall immediately thereafter notify each other in writing of the name and address of the person so selected. The 2 arbitrators so selected and named shall, within 10 days from such request, agree upon and select and name a neutral arbitrator. If either party shall not select its arbitrator or if the 2 arbitrators shall fail to agree upon, select and name a neutral arbitrator within said 10 days, either party may request the American Arbitration Association to utilize its procedures for the selection of the neutral arbitrator. As soon as possible after receipt of such request, the neutral arbitrator will be selected in accordance with rules and procedures prescribed by the American Arbitration Association for making such selection. The neutral arbitrator so selected will not, without the consent of both parties, be the same person who was selected as mediator pursuant to subsection 2 nor any member of the fact-finding board selected pursuant to subsection 3. As soon as possible after the selection of the neutral arbitrator, the 3 arbitrators or if either party shall not have selected its arbitrator, the 2 arbitrators, as the case may be, shall meet with the parties or their representatives, or both, forthwith, either jointly or separately, make inquiries and investigations, hold hearings, or take such other steps as they deem appropriate. If the neutral arbitrator is selected by utilizing the procedures of the American Arbitration Association, the arbitration proceedings will be conducted in accordance with the rules and procedures of the American Arbitration Association. The hearing shall be informal, and the rules of evidence prevailing in judicial proceedings shall not be binding. Any and all documentary evidence and other data deemed relevant by the arbitrators may be received in evidence. The arbitrators shall have the power to administer oaths and to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the production of books, records and other evidence relative or pertinent to the issues represented to them for determination.

If the controversy is not resolved by the parties themselves, the arbitrators shall proceed as follows: With respect to a controversy over salaries, pensions and insurance, the arbitrators will recommend terms of settlement and may make findings of fact; such recommendations and findings will be advisory only and will be made, if reasonably possible, within 30 days after the selection of the neutral arbitrator; the arbitrators may in their discretion, make such recommendations and findings public, and either party may make such recommendations and findings public if agreement is not reached with respect to such findings and recommendations within 10 days after their receipt from the arbitrators; with respect to a controversy over subjects other than salaries, pensions and insurance, the arbitrators shall make determinations with respect thereto if reasonably possible within 30 days after the selection of the neutral arbitrator; such determinations may be made public by the arbitrators of either party; and if made by a majority of the arbitrators, such determinations will be binding on both parties and the parties will enter an agreement or take whatever other action that may be appropriate to carry out and effectuate such binding determinations; and such determinations will be subject to review by the Superior Court in the manner specified by section 972. [Subsec. 4, as amended by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

5. Costs. The costs for the services of the mediator, the members of the fact-finding board and of the neutral arbitrator, including, if any, per diem expenses, and actual and necessary travel and subsistence expenses and the costs of hiring the premises where any mediation, fact-finding or arbitration proceedings are conducted, will be shared equally by the parties to the arbitration. All other costs will be assumed by the party incurring them. The services of the members of the State of Maine's Panel of Mediators and of the Maine Board of Arbitration and Conciliation are available to the parties without cost.

Sec. 966. Bargaining unit; how determined.

In the event of a dispute between the public employer and an employee or employees as to the appropriateness of a unit for purposes of collective bargaining or between the public employer and an employee or employees as to whether a supervisory or other position is included in the bargaining unit, the commissioner shall make the determination, except that anyone excepted from the definition of public employee under section 962 may not be included in a bargaining unit. In determining whether a supervisory position should be excluded from coverage under this chapter, the commissioner shall consider, among other criteria, if the principal functions of the position are characterized by performing such management control duties as scheduling, assigning, overseeing and reviewing the work of subordinate employees, or performing such duties as are distinct and dissimilar from those performed by the employees supervised, or exercising judgment in adjusting grievances, applying other established personnel policies and procedures and in enforcing the provisions of a collective bargaining agreement or establishing or participating in the establishment or performance standards for subordinate employees and taking corrective measures to implement those standards. Nothing in this chapter is intended to require the exclusion of principals, assistant principals, other supervisory employees from school system bargaining units which include teachers and nurses in supervisory positions.

The commissioner shall decide in each case whether, in order to insure to employees the fullest freedom in exercising the rights guaranteed by this chapter, and in order to insure a clear and identifiable community of interest among employees concerned, the unit appropriate for purposes of collective bargaining shall be the public employer unit or any subdivision thereof and no unit shall include both professional and nonprofessional employees unless a majority of such professional employees vote for inclusion in such unit, except that teachers may be included in a unit consisting of other certificated employees. [Sec. 966, as amended by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

Sec. 967. Determination of bargaining agent.

1. Voluntary recognition. Any public employee organization may file a request with a public employer alleging that a majority of the public employees in an appropriate bargaining unit wish to be represented for the purpose of collective bargaining between the public employer and the employees' organization. Such request shall describe the grouping of jobs or positions which constitute the unit claimed to be appropriate and shall include a demonstration of majority support. Such request for recognition shall be granted by the public employer unless the public employer desires that an election determine whether the organization represents a majority of the members in the bargaining unit.

2. Elections. The commissioner upon signed request of a public employer alleging that one or more public employees or public employee organizations have presented to it a claim to be recognized as the representative of a bargaining unit of public employees, or upon signed petition of at least 30% of a bargaining unit of public employees that they desire to be represented by an organization, shall conduct a secret election to determine whether the organization represents a majority of the members in the bargaining unit.

The ballot shall contian the name of such organization and that of any other organization showing written proof of at least 10% representation of the public employees within the unit, together with a choice for any public employee to designate that he does not desire to be represented by any bargaining agent. Where more than one organization is on the ballot and no one of the 3 or more choices receives a majority vote of the public employees voting, a run-off election shall be held. The run-off ballot shall contain the 2 choices which received the largest and second-largest number of votes. When an organization receives the majority of votes of those voting, the commissioner shall certify it as the bargaining agent. The bargaining agent certified as representing a bargaining unit shall be recognized by the public employer as the sole and exclusive bargaining agent for all of the employees in the bargaining unit unless and until a decertification election by secret ballot shall be held and the bargaining agent declared by the commissioner as not representing a majority of the unit.

Whenever 30% of the employees in a certified bargaining unit petition for a bargaining agent to be decertified, the procedures for conducting an election on the question shall be the same as for representation as bargaining agent hereinbefore set forth.

No question concerning representation may be raised within one year of a certification or attempted certification. Where there is a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect, no question concerning unit or representation may be raised except during the period not more than 90 nor less than 60 days prior to the expiration date of the agreement.

The bargaining agent certified by the commissioner as the exclusive bargaining agent shall be required to represent all the public employees within the unit without regard to membership in the organization certified as bargaining agent, provided that any public employee at any time may present his grievance to the public employer and have such grievance adjusted without the intervention of the bargaining agent, if the adjustment is not inconsistent with the terms of a collective bargaining agreement then in effect and if the bargaining agent's representative has been given reasonable opportunity to be present at any meeting of the parties called for the resolution of such grievance.

All bargaining units officially recognized by public employers prior to the effective date of this Act shall be recognized as certified units and each collective bargaining agreement covering employees in any such bargaining unit shall be effective for its duration or not later than January 1, 1972. [Subsec. 2, as amended by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

Sec. 968. Right of appeal.

Whenever any party is aggrieved by any ruling or determination of the commissioner under sections 966 and 967, such party may appeal, within 15 days after the announcement of the ruling or determination, to the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board hereinafter established.

1. Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board. The Public Employees Labor Relations Appeals Board shall consist of 3 members to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Council. The Governor, in making his appointments, shall name one to represent public employees, one to represent public employers and school systems and the 3rd to represent the public, who shall be its chairman. Members of the board shall each receive $50 a day for their services, for the time actually employed in the discharge of their official duties. The term of each member shall be for a period of 4 years. The members of the appeals board shall receive necessary expenses on the approval of the Commissioner of Labor and Industry. The commissioner shall designate a member of the Department of Labor and Industry to be the permanent secretary to the appeals board, who shall maintain a record of all proceedings of the appeals board.

The appeals board shall from time to time adopt such rules of procedure as it deems necessary for the orderly conduct of its business, and shall annually, on or before the first day of July, make a report to the Governor and Council which shall be incorporated in and printed with the biennial report of the department. The appropriation for the appeals board shall be included in the department's budget and authorization for expenditures shall be the responsibility of the commissioner.

The appeals board shall sit at the call of the chairman to hear and decide appeals arising from determinations of the commissioner. Decisions of the appeals board shall be subject to review by the Superior Court in the manner specified in section 972.

The appeals board shall have the authority to recommend to the Legislature changes or additions to this chapter or of related enactments of law. [Sec. 968 (intro.) and Subsec. 1, as amended by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

2. Summoning witnesses; production of books and records. The appeals board may summon as witnesses any employee or any person in the department who keeps records of wages earned in the business in which the controversy exists and may require the production of books which contain the record of wages paid. Summonses may be signed and oaths administered by any member of the appeals board. Witnesses summoned by the appeals board shall be allowed the same fees as are paid to witnesses in the Superior Court. These fees together with all necessary expenses of the appeals board shall be paid by the Treasurer of State on warrants drawn by the State Controller.

3. Hearings. The appeals board shall, upon receipt of an appeal by the chairman and at the call of the chairman, hold, within 10 days, a hearing on the appeal. The chairman shall give at least 7 days' notice in writing of the time and place of hearing to each of the other 2 members, the aggrieved parties, the labor organizations or bargaining agent and the public employer.

The hearings shall be informal, and the rules of evidence prevailing in judicial proceedings shall not be binding. Any and all documentary evidence and other data deemed relevant by the appeals board may be received in evidence. The chairman shall have the power to administer oaths and to require by subpoena the attendance and testimony of witnesses, the presentation of books, records and other evidence relative or pertinent to the issues presented to them for determination.

The hearings conducted by the appeals board shall be concluded within 20 days of the time of commencement of the hearings. Within 10 days after the conclusion of the hearings the appeals board shall make written findings and a written statement upon the appeal presented, a copy of which shall be mailed or otherwise delivered to the labor organization or bargaining agent or its attorney or other designated representative and the public employer.

Sec. 969. Municipal personnel board or civil service authority.

Nothing in this chapter shall diminish the authority and power of any municipal civil service commission or personnel board or its agents established by statute, charter or special act to conduct and grade merit examinations and to rate candidates in the order of their relative excellence from which appointments or promotions may be made to positions in the competitive division of the classified service of the municipal employer served by such a civil service commission or personnel board. The conduct and the grading of merit examinations, the rating of candidates and the establishment of lists from such examinations and the appointments from such lists shall not be subject to collective bargaining. If a collective bargaining agreement between a public employer and a bargaining agent contains provisions for binding arbitration of grievances involving the following matters: The demotion, lay-off, reinstatement, suspension, removal, discharge or discipline of any public employee, such provisions shall be controlling in the event they are in conflict with any authority and power, involving such matters, of any such municipal civil service commission or personnel board or its agents.

Sec. 970. Scope of binding contract arbitration.

A collective bargaining agreement between a public employer and a bargaining agent may provide for binding arbitration as the final step of a grievance procedure but the only grievances which may be taken to such binding arbitration shall be disputes between the parties as to the meaning or application of the specific terms of the collective bargaining agreement. An arbitrator with the power to make binding decisions pursuant to any such provision shall have no authority to add to, subtract from or modify the collective bargaining agreement.

Sec. 971. Rules and regulations.

The commissioner may issue such rules and regulations as the commissioner may consider necessary or appropriate for carrying out the purpose of sections 966 and 967.

Sec. 972. Review.

Either party may seek a review by the Superior Court of a binding determination by an arbitration panel or a decision of the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeal Board. Such review shall be sought in accordance with Rule 80 B of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

The binding determination of an arbitration panel or arbitrator or the decision of the Public Employees Labor Relations Appeal Board, in the absence of fraud, upon all questions of fact shall be final. The court may, after consideration, affirm, reverse or modify any such binding determination or decision based upon an erroneous ruling or finding of law. An appeal may be taken to the law court as in any civil action.

[Sec. 972, as added by Ch. 578, L. 1970, approved and effective February 9, 1970.]

COURT SETS ASIDE RECOGNITION GRANTED TO SUMMER SCHOOL EMPLOYEES UNIT

The New York Supreme Court for Dutchess County set aside a June 11, 1969, determination of the state Public Employment Relations Board (PERB) that recognition under the Taylor Law be granted to the Poughkeepsie Area Summer School Teachers' Association. Ruling that summer school teachers do not fall within the scope of the term "employees" as used in the bargaining statute, the court explained that a six-week summer school program is too short a period for summer school teachers to have a real opportunity to form, join and participate in an employee organization or to meaningfully negotiate collectively with a public employer or to form an organization which will be certified or recognized to represent the summer school teachers. Since summer school would end before effective negotiations could be completed, recognition of a summer school teachers association as an "employee organization" under [the Taylor Law] is meaningless.

On November 7, 1968, the Association sought certification as exclusive representative of a unit comprised of summer school teachers, librarians, supervisors, and the summer school principal. Following a February 7, 1969, hearing before a PERB examiner, the PERB director of representation determined that the Association was an employee organization under the Taylor Law, and that it should be accorded recognition as representative of a unit of all summer school teachers and librarians, but excluding the principal and other employees. Specifically, he found that the summer school program had existed for 33 years, that it provided academic credit, that teachers involved in the program "were either year round employees of the [Poughkeepsie education board] or of neighboring school districts and that for the last four years such teachers constituted sixty percent of the summer school teaching staff," that some 50 percent of the 1966 summer school teachers were rehired in 1967, and that 60 percent of the 1967 teachers were rehired in 1968. His decision was affirmed by the PERB on June 11 in its finding that "the teachers herein have a sufficient continuity of employment so as to warrant their inclusion within a negotiating unit."

The Article 78 proceeding before the court was brought by the PERB in an attempt to enforce its order directing the Poughkeepsie board to comply with the recognition accorded the Association, and furnish a list of eligible voters in the representation unit. The board, however, moved to dismiss the petition for certification entered by the Association before the PERB examiner on grounds that "there was no power or jurisdiction to conduct the hearing since there were no summer school employees at the time the petition was filed."

Considering the progression of events resulting in a summer school program, the court noted that summer school teachers are not recruited until April or May of each year, and that they actually are not employed until after the summer school budget is adopted in late June. While the PERB argued that "it makes no difference that when a petition is filed there are no summer school employees since a recognition and representation of such teachers is a continuing process effective the year round," the court found it "implicit" in the statutory criteria used to determine appropriate representation units that there be in existence employees. It is clear that petitioners deviated from the statutory standards in determining that the Poughkeepsie Area Summer School Teachers was entitled to recognition where in fact there did not exist any persons who were employed as summer school teachers when the petition was filed. Section 207(1) [of the Taylor Law] requires an employee-employer relationship before a negotiating unit can be recognized.

There is an uncertainty as to whether a summer school program will operate and whether a teacher will be accepted if the summer school program is conducted. The summer school program is, by its nature, of very short duration, and from year to year, there are changes in its curriculum. After the summer school terminates, the great majority of the summer school teachers employed therein return to their regular full time positions as teachers in the public school system. Their involvement with the summer school program has ceased and does not begin again until a summer school program is established for the following summer.

The Court finds no language in the statute . . . which indicates an intention on the part of the legislature to give PERB the power to exercise any control over non employees . . . . Accordingly, the petition is dismissed and the findings and order of PERB are hereby set aside. (Matter of Robert D. Helsby, et al. v. The Board of Education of the City School District of the City of Poughkeepsie, New York Supreme Court, Dutchess County, September 26, 1969.)

COURT UPHOLDS TAYLOR LAW'S PROVISION FOR FINING STRIKERS THROUGH PAYROLL DEDUCTION

The New York Supreme Court for Westchester County dismissed a petition which sought to enjoin the New Rochelle education board from fining (through payroll deductions) certain teachers who had engaged in a June 1969 strike in violation of Section 210 of the Taylor Law. In addition to claiming that the law's payroll deduction provision is unconstitutional, petitioners alleged that the entire statute is unconstitutional because the prohibition against public employee strikes contained therein is violative of their rights to free association, free speech, and equal protection. But the court denied all of petitioners' allegations, most of which had been passed upon and rejected in previous court cases.

Specifically the court held that Section 210 does not infringe upon public employees' rights of free association and free speech because the ability to strike is not essential to the right of association and it is certainly subordinate to the right of the State to prohibit such activity, this latter right having been repeatedly upheld by the courts . . . . The fact that the prohibition is against all strikes by public employees without classification among various public employee groups does not affect the constitutionality since it is within the State's power to determine that all strikes by public employees are harmful without distinguishing between them as to degree . . . . There is no claim here that the petitioners' rights of free speech have in any way been restricted. Even if [the act's strike] prohibition were construed to be violative of free speech, it would not affect the statutory prohibition against strikes.

Conceding that "an arguable question" was raised by petitioners' contention that their right of association is rendered meaningless when a school board "is both negotiator and ultimate arbiter of disputes arising out of negotiation," the court nevertheless pointed out that the statute provides dispute settlement machinery, and that a school board may "take such action as it deems to be in the public interest" only when such machinery fails to resolve a conflict. The court thus held that the delegation of such "ultimate" power to a school board neither is unreasonable nor does it render petitioners' right of association meaningless.

In regard to petitioners' claim to denial of equal protection because of "disparate treatment between public and private employers," the court noted that such a claim had been rejected in the cases of Rankin v. Shanker (NRD, February 1970) and City of New York v. DeLury (NRD, October 1969).

Finally the court rejected for lack of merit petitioners' allegation that provisions of Section 210 authorizing payroll deductions of two days' pay for each day a public employee engages in a strike "operate as a bill of attainder and deprive the petitioners of property without due process of law." Explaining the procedures by which a public employee may object to a determination that he has engaged in a strike, the court concluded that "these procedures constitute sufficient due process and as stated in Matter of DiMaggio v. Brown . . . concerning the Condon-Wadlin Act, predecessor to the Taylor Act, 'it cannot reasonably be said that the law constitutes a bill of attainder, a legislative act which inflicts punishment without a judicial trial'." (Matter of Application of Stephen Zeluck, et al. v. Board of Education, City School District, City of New Rochelle, New York, New York Supreme Court for Westchester County, January 9, 1970.)

OHIO

AGENCY SHOP PROVISION IN MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEE CONTRACT DECLARED INVALID

In a decision bound by an Ohio Supreme Court precedent, the Montgomery County Common Pleas Court ruled that an agency shop clause contained in an agreement between the city of Dayton and the Dayton Public Service Union, Local 101, "is in direct conflict with the general law of this State and . . . does not accomplish a governmental, public or municipal purpose as distinguished from private, and, in consequence thereof, is ultra vires and invalid." As such, the court permanently enjoined the city and the union from effectuating the agency shop clause, deducting any agency shop fees without an employee's express written authorization, and taking any disciplinary action against employees who do not voluntarily authorize such deductions.

The case before the court was brought by a single nonunion city employee, but was also a class action involving a "substantial number" of city employees and a taxpayers' action to "enjoin the carrying out of a contract alleged to be improper as not being substantially in accordance with statutory and constitutional law and thus invalid and illegal." The plaintiff, a painter employed by the city's department of parks and recreation, specifically complained against the deduction of agency shop fees without written authorization and disciplinary action for failure to so authorize. Although the city and the union maintained that the plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law, the court established jurisdiction in the case by finding that a taxpayers' action is "proper," and that the "facts and circumstances . . . clearly indicate that legal remedy was not presently available in a single action and as such would not be certain and complete."

On May 13, 1969, the city and Local 101 entered into an agreement providing that within 30 days > all present employees within the unit shall either join the Union or in lieu thereof pay a monthly service charge to the union in an amount equal to the Union's regular monthly dues, as a contribution toward the administration of this contract. The above provision shall be applicable to new employees thirty (30) days after date of hire.

> Upon written notice from the Union, the City shall discipline an employee covered herein, for failure to pay such contract administration charge up to and including discharge, but in no event less than a suspension of one day for each month the employee fails to make such payment.

As the plaintiff and some 95 other nonunion city employees neither authorized such deductions nor intended to do so, the union asked the city to institute disciplinary measures. And the court found that the city "has clearly demonstrated that it will pursue and impose the provisions of the Union Security as against all employees failing to abide thereby . . . [and that such employees] will be irreparably damaged if they do not comply with the Union Security agreement."

While the court did not disagree with the union's contention that no city employee "should reap the benefits derived from the efforts of the Union without paying his fair share," it pointed to a constitutional provision and various court decisions which conclude that any municipal police regulation is rendered void if it directly conflicts with the general police power of the state. Moreover, Section 9.41 ORC provides that "any person employed by a political subdivision, such as a municipality, cannot check-off wages of a public employee unless an authorization in writing is first obtained from such employee which may be revocable at any time."

Questioning what municipal acts fall within the definition of "local police regulations," the court found itself bound by judicial precedent established in the case of Hagerman v. City of Dayton. There the Ohio Supreme Court defined "local police regulations" as the "enactment of any ordinance which is aimed at the preservation of the health, safety, welfare or comfort of citizens of a municipality," and concluded that a city ordinance providing for the check-off of city employees' union dues was a local police regulation conflicting with state statutes. In addition, the high court determined in Hagerman that check-off constituted an improper delegation of power and served no municipal purpose:

> We must be realistic and take judicial notice of what is generally known, that the check-off is a means of maintaining membership. Indeed, the record in this case shows that each so-called contract member is required to give a cognovit note for twenty months dues in advance and these proposed check-off payments are to be applied to such notes. The check-off is contrary to the spirit and purpose of the Civil Service Laws of the State.

Finding the legal conclusions rendered in Hagerman "inescapable," the common pleas court ruled in the instant case that > a municipal ordinance which provides for a check-off of wages or a salary of a member of the Civil Service, classified section, is a police regulation, and contrary to the general laws of the State of Ohio unless it subordinates itself. Section 9.41 ORC.

>
> Furthermore, it would appear that the Hagerman case dictates the conclusion that since the Union Security Agreement under consideration does not accomplish a governmental, public or municipal purpose but serves merely to promote the private interests of a non-public organization, that it is ultra vires and invalid.
>
> The only difference between this case and the Hagerman case is that the parties are endeavoring to accomplish by contract in this case what they attempted to accomplish by ordinance in the Hagerman case.

Although the court voiced its cognizance of and sympathy with the argument that "public employees are not on a parity with employees in private industry as compared with the growth and development of Union causes in the private sector," it held that > this court is not the proper forum for a commitment to invoke a change in the mandated pronouncements of the law as interpreted and enforced by the Supreme Court of Ohio.

>
> It therefore must be left to the Legislature to alter or amend the laws in conflict with the Union Security Agreement and to the Supreme Court of Ohio to determine whether the spirit and scope of the Hagerman case applies today or whether time dictates a change in its earlier decision.

ILLEGALITY OF PUBLIC EMPLOYEE STRIKES DECLARED AXIOMATIC UNDER WEST VIRGINIA COMMON LAW

In denying relief to employees of the West Virginia State Road Commission who had been terminated for engaging in a March 1969 strike, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia ruled that under a portion of the state constitution "which makes the 'common law' the law of this State . . . it is axiomatic that a strike by public employees for any purpose is illegal . . . and no statutory declaration of their illegality is necessary." The court further determined that "the Governor and the State Road Commissioner had the right, if not indeed the responsibility, to terminate the plaintiffs' employment with the State. This action by the defendants . . . not only comported with the law of the State, but it violated no federal constitutional rights of the employees so discharged." In so ruling, the court concluded that it lacked jurisdiction over the subject matter, and granted several motions for dismissal entered by the defendants.

The complaint before the court was instituted by an official of the Charleston Laborers' District Council, Laborers' International Union of North America, AFL-CIO, the council itself, and 20 individual citizens "on behalf of themselves and 'all of the approximately 3,300 employees of the West Virginia State Road Commission'" under the Civil Rights Act of 1871. On March 3, 1969, numerous commission employees who were concerned about their job security following a change in state administration, the commission's failure to recognize the council as their representative, and other grievances "engaged in a refusal to work and went on strike." Despite two appeals to return to work, most employees remained on strike through March 11 (a period of heavy snowfall and hazardous road conditions), at which time the governor ordered "the immediate discharge of all Road Commission employees who are off their jobs at this moment. This action is taken with the firm and widespread belief that a strike by employees of State Government is illegal in the first instance, but more importantly, the situation can no longer be tolerated."

In alleging violation of their rights under the First, Fifth, and Fourteenth Amendments, and the constitution and laws of West Virginia, plaintiffs charged that the governor lacked authority to order their discharge, that their discharge "was the result of their union affiliation and activity . . . [and] was for the purpose of effectuating the 'spoils system' of political patronage in West Virginia," that the state road commissioner had refused "to meet and confer with [plaintiffs'] representatives . . . relative to the redress of grievances arising out of their employment," and that they were denied various rights of procedural due process in their discharge. Plaintiffs, therefore, sought an order nullifying their discharge, reimbursement for lost pay resulting from their discharge, a "mandatory injunction" requiring the road commissioner to "meet and confer" with the union official, an injunction prohibiting the road commissioner and the county supervisor "from discriminating among employees or applicants for employment of the Commission on the basis of political or union affiliation or activity," and an award of $250,000 in exemplary damages.

Defendants in the case—the governor, the state road commissioner, the county supervisor, and the road commission itself—moved to dismiss plaintiffs' complaint on grounds that it stated no claim upon which relief could be granted, and that the court lacked jurisdiction over the subject matter. Specifically, defendants contended that plaintiffs were discharged "for their willful refusal to perform services on the highways of the State at a time when such services were necessary for the health, safety and welfare of the citizens of the State," that the complaint outlined no rights "secured and guaranteed to the plaintiffs by the laws or Constitution of the United States," that defendants were immune from the suit, and that "the alleged grounds of federal jurisdiction are frivolous and unsubstantial."

In reducing the case to its "primary and . . . dispositive issue [of] whether the plaintiffs had a right to engage in a strike against the State of West Virginia under either federal or state law," the court noted several federal appellate court rulings which neither sanction nor suggest "that the right to strike or even the right to obtain a collective bargaining agreement from the sovereign falls within the ambit of federal constitutional protection." In addition, the court pointed to the exclusion of public employees from coverage by the federal Labor-Management Relations Act, various attorneys general opinions which "have consistently stated that public employees in West Virginia have neither the right of collective bargaining nor the right to strike," and the fact that public employee strikes axiomatically are prohibited by West Virginia common law.

As to plaintiffs' contention that their rights of procedural due process were violated by the manner in which they were discharged, the court found this argument "patently lacking in merit":

> The plaintiffs and other striking employees were absent from their jobs, had refused to return to work and well knew when and for what reason they were fired. Under these circumstances if the plaintiffs had any rights to procedural due process, they forfeited such rights through their own misconduct.
> Additionally, however, the plaintiffs' employment by the State was not "property" and was not protected by the due process clause. This principle has been uniformly recognized by the courts .... The plaintiffs were employed in a classification which was not covered by the West Virginia Civil Service Act and accordingly they had no job tenure under the law of this State. Their argument that this exclusion from the Civil Service statute violates the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment has been rejected in a number of cases .... The exclusion of the plaintiffs' job classifications from Civil Service coverage involved no invidious discrimination but was the result of legislative choice.

Another factor resulting in the dismissal of plaintiffs' charges was the "insuperable barrier" posed by the Eleventh Amendment, "since it is now well settled that under the amendment a state is immune from suit in a federal court by its own citizens." Explaining that a suit against a state is determined "by the character of the proceeding and the relief sought rather than the mere names of the titular parties to the litigation," the court concluded that the thrust of the relief sought is directed at the State of West Virginia and could be granted only by requiring the nominal defendants, as officers of the State, to take affirmative action to provide such relief. Thus it is clear that the State is the real party in interest and the 11th amendment immunity bars any consideration of the complaint in this court.

Finally, in regard to the alleged liability of the defendants in their individual capacity for damages in an action under [the Civil Rights Act of 1871], the recent Fifth Circuit opinion in Martone v. McKeithen ... stated the law clearly and succinctly: "A. The Governor of the State has immunity from damage suits for acts within the sphere of executive activity .... As Judge Learned Hand said in Gregoire v. Biddle ... : 'The justification for doing so is that it is impossible to know whether the claim is well founded until the case has been tried, and that to submit all officials, the innocent as well as the guilty, to the burden of a trial and to the inevitable danger of its outcome, would dampen the ardor of all but the most resolute, or the most irresponsible, in the unflinching discharge of their duties.'"

(Lyle Kirker, et al. v. Arch A. Moore, Jr., et al., U.S. District Court, Southern District of West Virginia, January 12, 1970.)

PROBATIONARY TEACHER DENIED TENURE RAISES "SUBSTANTIAL FEDERAL QUESTIONS" WARRANTING THREE-JUDGE FEDERAL COURT HEARING

The U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York ordered that a three-judge federal court be convened to hear the case of a probationary teacher who, having been denied tenure, argued that the state's tenure statute deprived him of his "rights of free speech and free assembly under the First Amendment." In a lengthy, heavily cited opinion raising considerations of academic freedom, the "chilling effect" doctrine, public employees' constitutionally protected rights, and the determination of standards by which teachers are granted or denied tenure, the court found that the case raised "substantial federal questions [which] should not be decided by a single judge."

Plaintiff in the case, a probationary humanities teacher first employed by UFSD No. 15 in the fall of 1964, was denied tenure in the spring of 1967 despite the fact that "'all reports and evaluation of the plaintiff by his superiors, including the defendant [superintendent], consistently rated the plaintiff as superior in virtually every aspect of his performance.'" The denial of tenure allegedly occurred after the local superintendent "'became aware that plaintiff had become the contract negotiator for the Jericho Teachers Association.'" In seeking to compel the superintendent to recommend him and the local school board to consider him for tenure, plaintiff asked that Section 3012(2) of the New York Education Law be declared invalid under the U.S. Constitution. The challenged paragraph reads:

At the expiration of the probationary term of a person appointed for such term, subject to the conditions of this section the superintendent of schools shall make a written report to the board of education recommending for appointment on tenure those persons who have been found competent, efficient and satisfactory. Such persons, and all others employed in the teaching, examining or supervising service of the schools of such union free school district, who have served the probationary period as provided in this section, shall hold their respective positions during good behavior and efficient and competent service, and shall not be removed except for any of the following causes: (a) insubordination, immoral character or conduct unbecoming a teacher; (b) inefficiency, incompetency, physical or mental disability, or neglect of duty. Each person who is not to be recommended for appointment on tenure, shall be so notified by the superintendent of schools in writing not later than sixty days immediately preceding the expiration of his probationary period.

Initially denying defendants' motion to dismiss the complaint "for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted," the court asserted jurisdiction under the Civil Rights Act. Citing numerous cases involving the protection of First and Fourteenth Amendment rights, the court explained that while it will be difficult to prove that this teacher was denied tenure in a public school because he exercised his constitutional freedom as a citizen to speak and not because of the myriad reasons of taste and personal predilections ... it cannot be said that no possible set of circumstances can be visualized where a constitutional violation was involved, so it cannot be held that this plaintiff cannot possibly succeed in this action.
